CHOLERA AT ALLAHABAD.—Dr. Noad, attached to the 2-22nd Regiment, died on July 21, of cholera. From a local paper we are glad to learn that there is a decided improvement in the health of the regiment. Up to August 4 there had been thirty-two cases of cholera, eighteen of which occurred on July 31. But there were only four cases on the following Sunday, and three on Monday, and none on Tuesday. All the patients are progressing very favourably. A decided improvement is also reported in the city.—Times of India.

THE OFFICIAL LANGUAGE OF BEHAR.—The memorial to the Bengal Government in favour of the retention of Urdu as the official language of Behar has, it is said, been very extensively signed by the inhabitants of all the districts of the province and by even more Hindus than Mahometans.—Ibid.

THE SIMLA EXHIBITION.—It is said that the Native Industrial Art Exhibition, to be held at Simla, seems likely to expand. The Governors and Lieutenant-Governors have been asked to become vice-patrons, and a score or so of corresponding members, all over the country, invited. It is considered not to be unlikely that the exhibition will be held not exclusively at Simla, but at the Presidency towns.—Ibid.

DEATH OF A MEDICAL MISSIONARY.—The death is announced at Subathu of Dr. John Newton, a well-known medical missionary of Upper India. A correspondent of the Pioneer says the funeral was numerous attended by Europeans and natives. Soldiers, who loved and respected him, carried the coffin from the house to the grave.—Times of India.

THE NAGA HILLS.—The following extract from a letter from Assam has been placed at the disposal of the Calcutta papers:—"I have lately heard from a neighbour, whose garden is situated on the road to the Naga Hills station, that the officers he has seen coming from there all talk as if there would be another row with the Nagas this cold weather. They (the Nagas) are very sulky, and are even heard to say that the 'Sahib's shooting season begins in November,' just as at home one speaks of partridge shooting beginning in September. Nagas may raid again. The Nagas won't do anything till their harvest is gathered in, which is about October or the beginning of November.—Times of India.

WE are sorry to have to record the death at Mirat, on Thursday last, of Surgeon W. A. Burges, R.A., from a fall while riding in a steeplechase at the local gymkhana, in which he sustained a concussion of the brain and broke one of his legs.—Englishman.

THE quantity of Indian tea shipped from Calcutta from May 1 to June 28 has been 4,449,177 lb., as compared with 3,346,037 lb. in the corresponding period of last year.—Englishman.

THE MURDER BY A PRIVATE AT NAINI TAL.—We learn from Naini Tal that Private Michael Davey, of her Majesty's 33rd Regiment, was committed by the assistant commissioner to take his trial at the High Court, Allahabad, on the charge of murder under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. The prisoner reserved his defence.—Indian Herald.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—At date of mail the disengaged tonnage in port stood at 32,603 tons. London via Canal: The market closed firm at £2 18s. 9d. for wheat, £3 5s. nominal for lin or rape, £3 3s. 9d. to £3 5s. for jute, hides, &c., £3 7s. 6d. to £3 10s. for tea. The market closed quiet at £2 7s. 6d. for wheat, £2 7s. 6d. for lin, £2 8s. 9d. for rape, £2 10s. for poppy, £2 5s. to £2 7s. 6d. for jute, light freight, &c. Liverpool via Suez Canal: Little doing. Quotations nominal at £2 15s. to £2 17s. 6d., rice or wheat £3 to £3 7s. 6d. for light and measurement goods. Liverpool via Cape: Rice at £2 1s. 3d., and linseed at £2 6s. 3d., wheat at £2 2s. 6d.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

THE local Madras rainfall from January 1 to date is now slightly above the average of several years.

ANNUAL REPORT AND STATEMENT OF THE BANK OF MADRAS.—From the statement of the bank's account for the year ended June 30 last it appears that the net profits for the year amount to Rs.4,26,292-12-11, which, added to the balance of Rs.68,250-14-8 brought forward from the previous year, makes a total of Rs.4,94,543-11-7 available for distribution. Out of this sum Rs.3,25,000 have been applied in payment of two half-yearly dividends at the rate of 5 and 8 per cent. per annum respectively; Rs.25,000 have been placed to the reserve fund; Rs.1,09,548-10-5 have been transferred to doubtful bill account; and Rs.34,995-1-2 have been carried forward to next year's account. During the year under review trade has, in most directions, been marked by more activity than characterised the previous year; there was, however, so much money in the market seeking safe investment that rates of interest and discount ruled lower. A comparison of the bank's present statement with that for the previous year will show a decreased figure under the item "mercantile bills discounted," and, as a consequence, a decreased risk now running. This arises from the circumstance that a remunerative business, for many years carried on with a large section of native traders, has been restricted by this and other banks. It is hoped that this restriction will be temporary, and that confidence will soon be restored. The usual careful scrutiny has taken place of all outstandings, and the directors consider that adequate provision has been made for all probable loss in respect of bad or doubtful debts. The business transacted at the branches shows a very satisfactory return upon the funds employed, and with propitious seasons this portion of the bank's field of operations should become year by year more valuable.—Madras Times.

IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—In a note on the progress report of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1879, the chief engineer for irrigation observes:—"The actual expenditure and credits during the quarter are shown to have been Rs.16,496-10-5 and Rs.9-47 respectively, and the outlay up to Dec. 31, 1879, Rs.1,14,98,361-02. The charges for establishment during the quarter were general management Rs.965-2-2, and executive establishment Rs.2,261-3-11, equal to 6'04 per cent. and 13'71 per cent. respectively of the outlay upon works, making a total percentage of 19'75 for supervision, which is far below the 33½ per cent. sanctioned for such supervision in G.O., No. 2,072, dated July 30, 1874. This is owing to the Irrigation Company having adopted from Nov. 1 last the principle of charging a certain proportion of establishment to capital, revenue or general directly, and of apportioning the last description to capital and revenue in the ratio of actual outlay under those heads in each month. This arrangement has not been authorised. There has been much correspondence on the subject of the distribution of establishment charges, and the chief engineer and manager has been requested to forward definite proposals for the consideration of Government.—Ibid.

REDUCTIONS, MADRAS RAILWAY.—We learn that Mr. Saunders, the agent and manager of the Madras Railway Company, has opposed in very strong terms the measures proposed generally by Government for reductions on the Madras Railway, especially as regards the curtailing of the number of assistant engineers, the removal of the central workshops from Royapuram and the reductions in the traffic department. The matter is to be fully discussed at a meeting to be held as soon as Colonel Shaw-Stewart, R.E., the consulting engineer for railways, now with his Grace the Governor, returns. Opportunity will also be taken to discuss the system of accounts in the stores and audit department at the same time.—Ibid.

EMPLOYMENT OF PENSIONERS.—With a view of employing pensioners for garrison or field service, we understand that Sir Neville Chamberlain has recommended that, on the men next presenting themselves to draw pay they should be examined by a combatant and a medical officer appointed for this duty. The Madras Government, falling in with the views of the Commander in Chief, have ordered that steps be taken at Vellore, Madras, and Bangalore for the examination of native military pensioners to ascertain the number fit and unfit for garrison duty and field service.—Ibid.

BEYPORE.—We learn that the Wynaad Planters' Association have memorialised Government for the construction of a harbour at Beypore and a line of railway from Beypore to Mysor. The master attendant states, however, that it is not practicable with a reasonable amount of expenditure to construct a harbour at Beypore; but as the Chief Commissioner of Mysor and the Madras Government consider the development of this part of the country by railway communication most desirable, and that such a line of railway will earn a fair revenue, the Government of India have been strongly urged upon for permission for the construction of this line of railway.—Ibid.

EMIGRATION.—The report of the administration of the Emigration Department during the year 1879-80 shows that emigration during the year was continued to the Mauritius and Natal; and although it was made lawful to Fiji and Surinam, no local agencies were established, and no emigrants were recruited or sent during the year; 1,598 emigrants proceeded from Madras to the Mauritius, against 2,427 in 1878-79, and 7,043 emigrants proceeded to Natal, against 2,718 in 1878-79. The proportion of females to males was, as in last year, over 40 per cent. to the Mauritius, but slightly less to Natal. 719 emigrants returned during the year from the Mauritius to Madras, of whom nine died during the voyage. No emigrants returned from Natal. The fees collected at Madras and in the districts for licenses, &c., aggregated Rs.4,839, and the charges Rs.3,892, leaving Rs.947 to credit. Emigration to the French colonies of Réunion, Martinique, and Guadeloupe was continued during the year; 1,580 emigrants proceeded to Réunion, 1,389 to Martinique, and 567 to Guadeloupe. The aggregate number of emigrants was 3,589, against 1,089 in 1878-79; 1,879 emigrants returned from Martinique and Réunion to Pondicherry in 1879-80, against 1,862 in 1878-79. The fees realised from emigration to the French colonies, including those levied at Madras and in the districts, aggregated Rs.8,644-8-4 to credit. The British consular agent, Kariakal, mentions in his report that 1,684 passengers proceeded from that port to British Burma and the Straits Settlements, of whom 755 were British subjects and passed by him, and that 4,569 returned from the Straits Settlements.—Ibid.

RAMPA NEWS.—The Rampa disturbance is reported to be over; the troops will return immediately to Madras.—Times of India.

THE RAILWAY AND HARBOUR FOR COCHIN.—It is pretty well known, says a local paper, that the practical execution of this project is now dependent upon the guarantee of the required interest by the two neighbouring native States of Travancore and Cochin, and that the task of arranging the guarantee has been delegated to the British Resident, Mr. Athol Macgregor, upon whom the public can rely to bring matters to a successful termination. So long as the interest on the capital is guaranteed the capital required will be easily subscribed for at home. It appears that the Cochin Sircar is ready to comply with the requisition of the British Resident to its full extent, while the Travancore Sircar is chary of yielding as much as it has been called upon to do.—Pioneer.

ABOLITION OF THE SOUTHERN COMMAND IN MADRAS.—We hear that the Government of India have at length sanctioned the proposal for the permanent withdrawal of British troops from Trichinopoly, and the abolition of the Southern Command in the Madras Presidency, the station duties at Trichinopoly being performed by a station staff officer of the third class. It has also been decided that in future the detachment of British infantry at Maliyapuram shall be relieved from Fort Saint George instead of from Cannanore.—Madras Times.

MADRAS GOLD MINING COMPANY.—The 50,000 shares of this company which were reserved for the Indian public have been fully applied for, and the Madras list is therefore closed.

BOMBAY.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—Godra, the town in the Panch Mahals to which the Pali branch of the B.B. and C.I. Railway is to be extended is a place of over 10,000 inhabitants; it is the headquarters of Government in this district and does a large export trade in oil seeds, maize, gram, and mowra. It concentrates all the trade for Pali on the west and Dohad on the east. The cart traffic between Pali and Godra in an average year amounts to over 40,000 tons, and this is a railway must largely develop. The direct benefit, therefore, to Bombay of this short extension will be very large, bringing this port into railway communication with another large grain trade centre. The only difficulty in the construction of the line is the crossing of the river Mbye at Pali; this can be done without great expense by means of a low level girder bridge, which would be submerged for the few days of the year when floods were prevailing. This expedient has received the sanction of the best authorities; the interruption of traffic will be but short while there will be a very great saving in expense over building a high level bridge. The rains fill the gorge only fifteen days in the year, and it certainly seems unnecessary to spend a large sum of money on a bridge at a level fifty feet higher. We trust that there will be no delay at home in giving sanction to this important work, and that the B.B. and C.I. Railway Company may be able to begin its construction immediately after the rains.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ICE MANUFACTURING COMPANY AT BOMBAY.—The public will be pleased to hear that the newest branch of the trade of Bombay continues to maintain a vigorous existence. From the report of the Ice Manufacturing Company for the past half-year we learn that the balance at credit of profit and loss account amounts to Rs.40,778, after deducting the proportion of net earnings due to the General Ice Factory Company (Limited), at London, and other charges. The last dividend was at the rate of 5 per cent., but business has been so satisfactory during the past six months that the directors are able to recommend a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent., carrying over Rs.22,033,4 to a reserve fund account as a provision for contingencies. In consideration of an allotment of Rs.200 fully paid-up shares of Rs.100 each in the Karachi Ice Company, the right to use Messrs. Siddeley and Mackay's patents in the province of Sind has been sold to that company, and arrangements are now in course of progress for the sale of similar rights to the companies which are about to be formed at Puna and Bhowanuggur. Six hundred shares of Rs.100 each in the Puna company will, we believe, very shortly be offered to the public at par, and no doubt the enterprise will prove as successful there as it has proved in this town and elsewhere. The directors in the report to which we have referred say that they are of opinion that it is more desirable for the shareholders to dispose of these rights than to themselves erect factories.—Times of India.

THE PORT TRUST.—The report of the Bombay Port Trust for 1879-80 shows that the trust has acquired the Sassoon Dock, the Colaba Company's Bunders, the Jamsetjee Bunder, the properties of the Mazagon and Frere Land Companies, and various minor properties at Sewree. These have cost Rs.71,22,730, and, with one or two trifling exceptions, payments have been made in Port Trust Bonds bearing interest at 4 per cent. The income of the trust was Rs.16,91,329, and the expenditure Rs.17,98,436. Of this outlay, the interest on general account amounted to Rs.8,60,184, and interest on the Prince's Dock Loan—three months, March 31, Rs.80,756. The deficit was thus Rs.1,07,113, but the interest on the Prince's Dock Loan, Rs.80,756, has been charged to capital under the sanction of the Government. This reduces the actual deficit to Rs.26,357.—Indian Daily News.

THE Bank of Bombay has reduced its official rate of interest and discount from 5 to 4 per cent.

THE RAINFALL.—The total rainfall in Bombay up to Aug. 6 is as follows:—Byculla, 41 inches 3 cents; Fort, 43 inches 96 cents; Colaba, 40 inches 84 cents.

BOMBAY DOCTORS FOR THE FRONT.—We mentioned a few days ago that ten doctors were required immediately from this Presidency to go on service. We are now able to give the names of the medical officers selected, who will, we believe, be at once ordered off to the front. They are Surgeon Major Batty, Surgeon Major Davidson, Surgeons M'Rury, C. Monks, W. K. Hatch, O. H. Channer, H. B. Briggs, A. S. Faulkner, Pheroza Jamsetjee Damania, and another, we believe Surgeon J. W. Clarkson.—Times of India.

THE LOYAL PARSEES.—A local paper states that the news of the reverse of General Burrows's column was received with "great disapprobation" by the Parsee community at Puna, and that a few days after prayers "for the British army were offered by a large number of Parsee gentlemen, who were invited by Khan Bahadur Dastoor Noshervanji, high priest of the Parsees in the Deccan, in the city of Fire-temple, Khan Bahadur Professor Hoshang, taking hold of this opportunity, delivered a learned speech, full of loyal sentiments, and quite appropriate to the occasion, on the blessings of British rule."—Times of India.

EDUCATION IN BERAR.—The Resident at Hyderabad is desirous of encouraging education in Berar, and with this view he has recently issued a circular to the effect that every State appointment, up to Rs.100 a month, shall be reserved for qualified inhabitants of Berar.—Ibid.

HIS Excellency Sir James Fergusson has become a patron and life member of the Sassoon Mechanics' Institute.—Ibid.

INSOLVENTS.—In the last official Gazette is published a statement relating to the affairs of persons who have obtained relief in the Bombay Insolvency Court. The liabilities of the debtors as per schedule are set down at Rs.10,81,04,423-15-9. The aggregate amount of the liabilities of 8,070 insolvents without assets, who have obtained their discharges, was Rs.3,68,46,270-7-7.—Ibid.

THE PRINCE'S DOCK.—Captain Allen Russell, of the B.I.S.N. Co.'s service, has obtained the appointment of Prince's Dock superintendent. He was strongly recommended to the trustees by Mr. Mackay as an able shipmaster and an intelligent energetic man, well qualified for the post, and will no doubt fill it to the satisfaction of the Port Trust and the public. There were seventy applications for the appointment.—Ibid.

PRIZE ESSAY.—The subject selected by the syndicate of the Bombay University for the Karsandas Mulji Prize Essay of 1881 is "The Effect (present and future) of English Education on the Mental and Moral Condition of the Hindus;" the subject of the Dosabhoj Hormusjee Cama Prize, "Telluric and Climatic Influences on the Production and Modification of Diseases as Witnessed in Bombay," and that of the Homejee Cursetjee Dady Prize Essay, "Characteristics of English Literature of the Times of Queens Elizabeth, Anne, and Victoria, stated and compared."—Ibid.

THE STAFF CORPS DEFENCE FUND.—"Field Officer" informs a contemporary that Messrs. Grindlay, Groom, and Co., Bombay, have agreed to act as bankers to the proposed "Staff Corps Defence Fund." They have suggested "Field Officer's" writing to the secretary, Indian Medical Defence Fund, to ascertain regarding probable expenses in every way. This he promises at once to do and undertakes to [act as secretary "should nothing occur to prevent" his doing so.—Ibid.

MOUNTAIN ARTILLERY FOR KANDAHAR.—The No. 5 Battery, 8th Brigade, which, before its conversion some months ago into a mountain battery, was stationed at Colaba, left Kirkee by rail on August 2, en route to Kandahar, via Mooltan. Major W. R. Lluellyn is in command, and the other officers doing duty with the battery are Capt. C. E. Brown, Lieut. M. O. Hopkins, Lieut. A. C. Daniell, Lieut. H. H. Champion, Lieut. W. Elliott, and Surgeon Major T. O'Farrell. It is supplied with mules specially procured from Cyprus, and it will be interesting to notice whether the misgivings felt by some military men as to the fitness of these animals for a mountain battery are justified or not. At any rate it may be assumed that the authorities are satisfied with the mules or they would not now be on the way to the front.—Ibid.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—The Rifle Volunteers of Bombay have offered their services to Government to garrison Bombay should they be required owing to the withdrawal of so many troops from the Presidency.—Ibid.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, 1880.

THE SIEGE OF KANDAHAR.

WHEN, after the first surprise caused by the news of the defeat inflicted on General Burrows was passed, we learned that Ayub Khan, from whatsoever cause, had hesitated to advance at once upon Kandahar, the probability of a successful defence of that city became greater with each day's delay. We briefly alluded to the uncalled-for and inopportune criticisms of some journalists on the inactivity, amounting to pusillanimity, of General Primrose in not marching out to attack the besieging force. This week's news shows that the criticisms were curiously infelicitous. The chief danger to be apprehended and guarded against by the defenders of the city was an attack by escalade. It would appear that the besiegers had advanced their works on the eastern side of the city to a dangerous proximity, and that General Brooke's brigade was employed to make a sortie on August 16 against a village, presumably Deh Kwaja. The portion of the enceinte of the walls between the Bundo-rani and Cabul Gates was that menaced by the entrenched position, which, at the same time, commanded the line of road along which the relieving force will, as we believe, speedily make their approach. On our side we note the brief but satisfactory statement that the object of the sortie was accomplished, and further molestation prevented on that side of the city. The gain, whatever it precisely amounted to, was purchased by a heavy loss, heavy as regards the nature of the operations, and heavier still when the proportion of officers killed and wounded is taken into account. We can only conclude from this that the enemy made a stubborn defence, and it would almost seem that their overwhelming numbers heavily pressed our troops on their return to the city; and, secondly, that the native troops required so much leading that the officers were compelled to expose themselves as if leading a forlorn hope. The brief record that Brigadier General Brooke lost his own life in a gallant attempt to rescue Capt. Cruickshank will be read with sorrowful interest by many. But we as yet possess no particulars of the fight beyond the statement of its object being attained and the too long list of casualties. The attitude of the enemy evidently marks the growing apprehension on the part of Ayub Khan that his position is rapidly changing from that of the assailant to the attacked. He himself, it seems, remained with the Cabuli troops three miles distant on the Herat road, thus evidently securing an open line of retreat in the event of the arrival of General Roberts's force. The question of complicity between Ayub Khan and the Ameer Abdul Rahman does not receive any further solution from the passing events, but, without imagining anything like conspiracy, we may rest assured that the earliest possible news of the march of the flying column, which, according to the most recent accounts, is successfully pressing forward, would be despatched from Cabul to the headquarters of the Herati army. It is not probable that the fierce fanatics who have thronged into the ranks of Ayub's army will consent to a retreat without fighting. But it will be a difficult problem how to deal with Ayub himself if he resolutely opposes the advance of General Roberts, and thus fights for his own hand against the Power that has established the Ameer upon the throne of Cabul. If Ayub is acting independently, that is, as regarding himself as the independent ruler de facto of Herat, and de jure of Kandahar, he is endeavouring to subvert the authority of Abdul Rahman. He cannot claim to be a patriotic leader endeavouring to expel the forces of the infidel from his country, his first attempt having been directed against the native ruler of Kandahar, whose authority, conferred in the name of the Empress of India, must be maintained and defended by her generals, unless, indeed, we have arrived at such a condition of Indian policy as readily to repudiate the very name of consistency as well as the substantial benefits of our expenditure of money and brave men's lives. We may almost, without a chance of being charged with being premature, touch upon what is to follow upon the relief of Kandahar. It is true that a Western contemporary, in a communication from its correspondent in Afghanistan, announces that Ayub Khan's cavalry have preceded General Roberts from near Khelat-i-Ghilzai and passed up the "long pass," thus causing a scarcity of fodder, and that the same wonderful communication, wired, it is to be presumed, from Kila Abdulla, sketches the plan of resistance which Ayub Khan has determined on. It is also true that other conjectural information suggests that Ayub will manage to double round by the Argandab and then make for Cabul, presumably to oust Abdul Rahman from his briefly occupied dignity. What is a more real, and, we regret to say, more probable danger to the cause of British prestige and the security of India, is that we have no assurance that our generals are instructed to do more than to relieve the city of Kandahar. We hear already of possible negotiations with Ayub, by which he may be left undisturbed in Herat. But, what is far worse, it is no secret that the foregone conclusion of those who have the ordering of an impolicy, or the disordering of the policy which alone can be successful, is at present to give up any hold on Kandahar, any establishment of a prosperous and thriving state of Southern Afghanistan such as might be constituted to the manifest advantage of that country as well as of India. We hear of deplorable delays in the advance of General Phayre's column, caused by want of the transport and supplies which the whilom energy that ruled in Bombay had provided, only to be allowed to become wanting by the supreme inaction of the Government of India. But we think that it will be a far worse and a more injurious laches on the part of the Administration of India if, when, to all that had been previously accomplished to govern and secure the State of Kandahar, shall be added the losses of our army, incurred in its defence, we shall abandon it to the wasting tyranny, the hostile influences, and the secret dangers which will be the constituent elements of the restored Afghan rule.

LORD MAYOR'S COURT.—BURRIDGE V. THE GOLD COMPANY OF SOUTHERN INDIA (LIMITED).—The plaintiff, an advertising agent carrying on business in the City, brought an action to recover the sum of £440 os. 6d. for advertisements inserted in the Daily Telegraph and other London journals, by order of the secretary, Mr. Wickes. The defendants paid £78 into court, and pleaded as to the remainder never indebted. Plaintiff pleaded the authority of the secretary, who had signed the articles of association to pledge the credit of the company. On the part of the company it was contended that the articles of association, which prohibited the secretary or any officer of the company from pledging the credit of the company, was fatal to the plaintiff's claim beyond the sum paid into court, to which extent the company were prepared to admit their liability. The learned Judge, however, refused to stop the case from going to the jury, and left it to them to say whether they were satisfied that the plaintiff was aware of the terms of the articles of association at the time the orders were given. The jury found for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, less the sum paid into court. Leave was obtained to move the superior courts.

BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA, AND JAPAN (LIMITED).—A meeting of shareholders of this company (in liquidation) was held on Tuesday afternoon, under the presidency of Captain J. R. Engleby, one of the liquidators. The report of the liquidators expressed their pleasure in informing the shareholders that on the 12th ult. they received letters and remittances from Calcutta, which would enable them to close the liquidation without further delay. Nothing more was likely to be collected here, as the overdue call list had been reduced to a very few names, and was practically exhausted some time since. Before they could close the liquidation the following matters remained to be dealt with:—The distribution of funds now available; the disposition of the balance of unpaid calls, which, although of large nominal amount, having regard to the bankruptcies and circumstances of the debtors, were of little or no practical value; claims on bankrupt estates practically exhausted; the dividends, amounting to about £634, due to shareholders who had not claimed them; the closing the liquidators' accounts, and charge of the books, &c., for five years, as required by Act of Parliament. To facilitate the closing of the liquidation and dissolving the bank, the liquidators could arrange for the transfer of the unsettled accounts in India, and the claims on bankrupt and other estates, for a nominal sum; also for the charge of the books and final winding up of the company for a fixed sum. The accounts showed that the receipts from Dec. 31, 1877, to July 16 last amounted to £12,566, and, after meeting the expenditure during the same period, there was a balance of £8,770. The chairman, in opening the business, said that the objects of the meeting were set out in the circular which had been issued convening it, and he hoped that this would be their last meeting. The liquidators had exhausted all the resources they could in order to recoup the proprietors, and the last item they had to deal with was a mortgage on a property near Chittagong. They had hoped to be able to pay the shareholders 35s. per share instead of 6s. 9d.; but in this they had been disappointed, the Government having sold the property for their rent. In this matter they really had no voice. The Government had remitted them the balance, and they now proposed to pass resolutions with the view of closing the affairs of the company. He then moved the adoption of the report and accounts of the liquidators, "and that a distribution of 6s. 9d. per share upon all shares on which all the calls have been duly paid be made in due course by the liquidators, amounting in the aggregate to £7,270 15s. 3d." The motion having been seconded, a shareholder asked how much the 6s. 9d. per share would absorb of the balance at the Bank of England.—The Chairman replied that the sum was mentioned in the resolution—£7,270. The shareholder pointed out that that was £1,500 less than the amount shown in the circular.—The Chairman said that certain claims had come in since they advertised the winding-up of the affair.—In reply to another shareholder as to when the 6s. 9d. per share would be paid, he said as soon as the dividend warrants could be got out. Mr. R. S. Tomlin, the other liquidator, said they would probably be issued in a fortnight.—A shareholder complained of the delay in the liquidation—fourteen years.—The Chairman spoke of the difficulty in infusing energy into the Bengali mind, and said it had been a most anxious time for the liquidators, two of whom had died.—The resolution was then put and carried, as were other resolutions in accordance with the objects mentioned above, and with the view of closing the liquidation.—Mr. Sangster moved a vote of thanks to the liquidators, who, he said, could have claimed £30,000 instead of £6,000, having regard to the capital of the bank. The motion was seconded and carried unanimously.—The Chairman, in acknowledging the vote, said the bank had been a severe lesson to them, and he hoped they would all profit by it. The matter was now, however, closed, and in as satisfactory a manner as they could have expected.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

COOLIES IN RÉUNION.

Mr. A. M'ARTHUR asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether he had noticed a letter in the Times of the 17th inst. describing the manner in which Indian coolies were treated in the island of Réunion; whether it was true that, notwithstanding the coolies arrived as free emigrants, they were sold by auction as slaves and most unjustly and cruelly treated by the planters; and, if these statements were correct, whether her Majesty's Government would endeavour to remedy the evil complained of and prevent a continuance of such a state of things.

Sir C. DILKE: Her Majesty's Government have no information as to the sale of Indian coolies arriving in Réunion. Their attention has, however, been called to the unsatisfactory condition of the coolies in that island; and, in reply to an urgent representation addressed to them in October last, the French Government have just consented to the meeting at Paris of a mixed commission of inquiry, which, it is hoped, will assemble without delay.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON, in answer to an hon. member, said the discussion on the Indian Budget would be resumed, perhaps, some day very near the end of the session.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, AUGUST 26.

KANDAHAR.

Sir H. D. WOLFF asked the Secretary of State for India whether, at the time orders were given to General Burrows, the Government of India had received information of the force in men and guns under the command of Ayoub Khan; whether the Government of India was at that time aware that the only force that could reinforce the garrison of Kandahar—viz., that of General Phayre—could not undertake the march to Kandahar, a distance of about 150 miles, without a month's previous preparation; and whether any papers could be laid upon the table on the subject. He also wished to ask the noble lord whether any news had been received that day from Kandahar.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Information as to the approximate force under Ayoub Khan was communicated by Mr. Thompson to the Governor General of India. No despatches have yet been received relating to those events, and we have in our possession up to the present time nothing but extremely meagre telegrams, the substance of which has already been communicated to the House, and to lay them on the table would give no further information. In the absence of further information it is impossible for me to say what was the exact state of the knowledge of the Indian Government at the time the order was issued. All I know is that the despatch of reinforcements from Sind to General Phayre was interrupted by the breaking of the railway at Sibi, and it was impossible in the disturbed state of the country that General Phayre could advance to Kandahar until he was in a position to do so with strength. There is no news to-day from Kandahar.

AFGHANISTAN.

Captain PRICE asked whether the Government still adhered to their determination to withdraw British troops from Northern Afghanistan.

Mr. ONSLOW asked whether the India-office had received any telegram which showed whether the Viceroy had any idea of what was the number of Ayoub Khan's force.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the retirement of the British forces from Northern Afghanistan was in progress, and there was no reason to suppose there was any alteration in the intentions of the Government. With respect to the question of the hon.

member for Guildford, he had to state that all information received from India had been laid before the House or communicated to the Press; at least all which the Government thought it would be advantageous to communicate.

ABDUR RAHMAN KHAN

Mr. GIBSON (on behalf of Mr. E. Stanhope) asked the Secretary of State for India whether the forts and fortifications erected at Sherpur by General Roberts had been demolished, or whether they had been handed over intact to Abdur Rahman, and whether any guns or rifles had been given to him; and, if so, of what description. He also asked the noble lord a question with reference to a statement which had appeared in the Western Morning News.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I received a telegram some time ago from the Viceroy stating that General Stewart had determined to leave the forts and fortifications erected round Cabul and not to destroy them when Cabul was occupied by Abdur Rahman Khan. A certain number of guns have been handed over to him. They consist of smooth-bore iron guns and some breechloading field guns, of Afghan manufacture. No rifles or small arms have been made over to Abdur Rahman Khan. I have received private notice from the hon. and gallant member for Devonport of the question which the right hon. gentleman has just put to me. I have just seen the report in reference to the statement in the Western Morning News; but we have received from India no confirmation whatever of the statement contained in that report.

THE END OF TAMON DORA, THE RAMPA REBEL.—The wire has no doubt made you acquainted ere this of the death of Karum Tamon Dora, who has at last paid the penalty of his crimes with his life. Mr. Sweet, the indefatigable assistant superintendent of police, has again brought himself to notice by closing the career of this notorious outlaw. Following doggedly in his track, he came upon him, and firing, struck him on the wrist, when Tamas Dora endeavoured to slip away, but a second bullet was soon lodged in his body, the veritable will-o'-the-wisp disappearing mysteriously and evidently game for a further series of hide and seek. Mr. Sweet, however, tracked him by the blood stains on the ground, and, coming upon him, despatched him with a bullet, judging it prudent not to risk his getting away again. Such is the report that has come to Rajahmundry and rejoiced the hearts of sepoys and policemen alike, who are quite exultant in consequence. Airy castles are being built of an end to camp life and jungle duty, and a speedy return to homes and children. There are two others yet to be caught or disposed of, but it is considered that the whole thing will now be quickly stamped out. Whatever else has to be done, I dare say Mr. Sweet is still game for. He has retrieved the reputation of the police, although the credit of the capture rests entirely with himself. Beyond the rewards for Amal Reddy's and Tamon Dora's captures, Mr. Sweet seems deserving of special notice. A step in the departmental ladder will not be too much, and as his Grace is about to bid good-bye to this presidency he might mete out something more than a money reward to the officer who was, above all others, instrumental in crushing out that rebellion with which his Grace's name will always be associated. It would be a graceful acknowledgment of persevering and meritorious service performed under difficulties of a trying nature. Like a beast of the forest Tamon Dora has been hunted from lair to lair and shot down without compunction. The deluded man has met the just reward his bloody deeds have merited, and it is to be hoped the latter days of his life and his death will be a warning to others.—Correspondent Madras Times.

THE "MAHABLESHWUR"—No rescue party has ever been more successful than that which sailed in the Ash twelve days since and returned to Bombay on July 31. The whole of the crew belonging to the Mahableschwur have now been saved. The five men left by the mate on the island of Bingaroo were found comfortably ensconced in the jungle. So far from expecting a rescue they were engaged in picking cocoanuts. They had, we are told, a comfortable hut well stocked with liquor, beer, madeira, porter, corn flour, butter, and oatmeal, though by way of animal food they had nothing but wild cats, cockles, and winkles. The Ash had then to cruise about until she heard tidings of the captain and his boat's crew, who were discovered on an inhabited island, to which they had been guided while in distress by the natives. The way in which the sailors on parting with the natives gave away their knives and other small possessions proves the feelings of friendship that had sprung up between them and their protectors, in spite of having sometimes to sing and dance for their food. Captain Creah, who directed the expedition on behalf of Government, is to be warmly congratulated on the efficient manner in which he carried out a very risky duty. The following is a list of the rescued men:—Capt. McKinnon; Richard Estanco, second mate; William Saunders, steward; Adolfe Bolde, cook; Peter Farrar, sailmaker; Mathew Abrahamson, A.B.; Charles Brasse, A.B.; Henry Harrison, A.B.; Charles Zutlen, A.B.; Ferdinand Enevoldson, A.B.; Carl Anderson, A.B.; R. Ellison, ordinary seaman; Wm. Haigh, ordinary seaman; and Wm. Mudge, boy.—Times of India.

THE MAIL-DAY QUESTION.—The Calcutta papers publish the memorial of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce on this subject, a summary of which was telegraphed to us by our correspondent. Mr. Wood, the secretary, notices some of the arguments brought forward by the Bombay Chamber in favour of a Friday departure. That body, he says, have "stated that apparently Calcutta merchants can advance no better reason for their objection to a Tuesday mail-day than a mere predilection for Wednesday, but it is submitted that the same arguments, which have been advanced by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce against the closing of the mails there on Monday, apply as strongly against the mails being closed in Calcutta on Tuesday." He goes on to say:—"If, as is stated in the letter referred to, Bombay merchants have found that one day does not give sufficient time in which to prepare documents for their one article of export, so Calcutta merchants have found from experience (acquired when mails during a portion of the year were closed here on Tuesday) that two days are insufficient for the preparation of all that is required, having regard to the great variety of articles which constitute the trade of this port. The Bombay Chamber make light of the circumstance that an evening departure of the steamer involves a delay of some eight hours not only of the Calcutta mails, but of the whole of the mails of India (excepting those of Bombay), but it must surely be obvious that the Bombay proposal sacrifices the interests of the many to those of the few. It is suggested that, in opposing the proposition for a Tuesday mail-day, we lose sight of the interests of London merchants and of those living in the northern towns of Great Britain; but this is not so. My committee are well aware of the inconvenience caused to their correspondents by the present system, whereby letters are often delivered only on the outgoing mail-day; but it is believed that, under the arrangement proposed by you in your letter No. 93 of April 5 last, the mails would be delivered in London, and the northern towns of the United Kingdom, on days which would be found suitable. In conclusion, I am directed to say that my committee feel sure that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce would reconsider their request for the continuance of a Wednesday mail-day for Calcutta, if it could be shown (as stated by Bombay) that the general public in India and at home would benefit by the mail being closed here on some other day. They will strongly object, however, to be inconvenienced by a Tuesday mail-day merely in order that Bombay merchants shall have what they so pertinaciously advocate, notwithstanding that an alternative has been suggested which, although not thoroughly agreeable to Bombay, would, it is believed, meet the wishes of all others concerned, and give to the Western port the Saturday half-holiday, which formerly was all that was asked for."—Times of India.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 14; Madras and Allahabad, August 12; Calcutta, August 11.

The following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 3:—Rain has been general, but, as in the previous week, for the most part moderate in quantity. Although the insufficiency of rain in Madras is now more widely felt, general prospects in that Presidency are still reported to be tolerably fair. In the Deccan districts and Berar more rain is much required. There is also more or less want of rain in parts of Assam, Bengal, Mysor, and in the Peshawur district of the Punjab, where six-tenths fell during the week. In the North West Provinces and Oudh and the Central India States there has been good rain; and in Burma the rainfall is reported to be sufficient. In Behar heavy rain has damaged the autumn crops in places; and in the Hanthawaddy district of British Burma some injury has also resulted from floods. Agricultural prospects are still fair on the whole; in Northern and Central India they are satisfactory; but more rain is wanted in Southern India and in the Deccan.

The health reports for the same week are as follow:—Bombay: Some fever and small-pox in Sind; fever prevalent in Southern Mahratta country. Bengal: Fever reported prevalent in Rungpore and some other places; cholera in Chittagong; small-pox in Cuttack; but public health is still generally good. North West Provinces and Oudh: Cholera has decreased in the Allahabad District (forty-one deaths) but is still severe in city and suburbs, 133 deaths, now slackening; cholera slightly on increase in Lucknow; but almost disappeared in Sitapur. Punjab: Health generally good. Central Provinces: Cholera and small-pox prevalent in Sambalpur, Jabulpore, Saugor, and Hoshangabad. British Burma: Public health generally good; slight small-pox in Pegu. Assam: Healthy. Mysor and Coorg: Public health improved. Central India States and Rajputana, good.

We have received the following telegrams from the India-office:—

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 27.—Following from Sandeman, Quetta, dated August 27:—'I have received information that Ayub Khan has withdrawn his army from the positions taken up in front of Kandahar, and has retired to Sanjeri, eight miles west of Kandahar. Roberts arrived at Khelat-i-Ghilzai on the 24th. I have received letter dated Khelat-i-Ghilzai the 19th.'"

"FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, AUGUST 29, KHELAT-I-GHILZAI, AUGUST 23.—The force under my command arrived here this morning. Authorities at Kandahar having stated on the 17th instant that they have abundant supplies, and can make forage last until Sept. 1, I halt to-morrow to rest troops, and more especially the transport animals and camp followers. The force left Ghazni on the 16th, and has marched one hundred and thirty-six miles during the last eight days. The troops are in good health and spirits. From this, purpose moving by regular stages, so that the men may arrive fresh at Kandahar. I hope to be in heliographic communication with Kandahar from Robat, distant twenty miles, on the 29th. I am taking the Khelat-i-Ghilzai garrison with me, making the fort over to Mahomed Sadik Kahn, a Toki Chief, who had charge of the place when we arrived in 1879. The present Governor, Sirdar Shernidil Khan, refuses to remain. We have met with no opposition during the march, and have been able to make satisfactory arrangements for supplies, especially forage, which at this season is plentiful. The cavalry horses and artillery mules are in excellent order. Our casualties to date are one soldier 72nd Highlanders, one sepoy 23rd Pioneers, one 2nd Sikhs, two sepoy 3rd Sikhs dead. One sepoy 4th Goorkhas, two sepoy 24th Punjab Native Infantry, duffadar 3rd Punjab Cavalry missing; six camp followers dead, five missing. The missing men have, I fear, been murdered. I telegraphed from Ghazni on 13th, and from Oba Karez on August 18."

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 30.—St. John telegraphs from Kandahar, under date 26th:—'Yesterday afternoon a working party buried officers and men killed on 16th. Major Vandeleur, 7th Fusiliers, died of wounds received. Report is current outside city that Musa (?) Khan is in Ayub's camp, but I do not believe it. (. . . .)* Country quieting down, and Ayub Khan's force reduced to regulars and a small number of Ghazis foraging; reported that he wished to retreat to Girishk, but was prevented by Cabuli troops; siege practically raised. Party brought in large quantity of fodder yesterday.'"

* Unintelligible.

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 30.—General Phayre reached Chaman, 27th, morning, and General Wilkinson, with Cavalry Brigade, arrived at Killa Abdulla. All quiet in Khelat; but Sandeman reports Murrees and other tribes very unsettled. Considerable collection of Atchakmidis and others on Toba; said to contemplate attacking line of communications between Chaman and Quetta after Phayre's advance. People of Shorawak, joined by Khan's mutinous sepoy, reported similarly inclined."

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 30.—Letter received in General Roberts's camp from Kandahar, regarding a sortie of 16th, says:—'We made a sortie with 300 cavalry and 800 infantry, furnished by 7th Fusiliers, 19th and 28th Native Infantry, hoping to pull down the loopholed walls facing the Cabul and Bur Durani gates. The result was not satisfactory. The village was found to be strongly held and honeycombed with loopholes. Our infantry managed to push through, but could not effect a hold, though the supports of the enemy suffered from our cavalry and our infantry and artillery fire. We had to get back to the walls under a heavy fire from their loopholes, and our losses, in officers more especially, were heavy.'"

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 30.—St. John telegraphs from Kandahar, under date 25th, that Ayub Khan has completely abandoned investment, and withdrawn his whole force to a position on Argandab, due north of city. News of the approach of Cabul force known to have reached him. Lieut. MacLaine still a prisoner in Ayub's camp. Continued efforts being made to obtain his release. Wounded very well."

"FROM VICEROY, AUGUST 31.—Wylie telegraphs from Chaman, 30th, that the messenger who brought St. John's message of 26th reports that Ayoub, with twenty-three thousand troops, was on right bank of Argandab, opposite Baba Wali; a detachment of his army at Takt-i-Pul prevented messengers passing. In the sortie of 16th Ayoub's loss very heavy; the son of Azad Khan of Kharan had joined Ayoub. Sandeman reports a raid by Maris on Mall, on 28th; the Maris were pursued by cavalry, and four killed."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 1.—News from Roberts to 29th. Reports arrival of his force at Shahr-i-Safa, 27th, and Robat, 28th. At former place received following account from St. John of raising of siege:—'Rumours of approach of your force relieved city from investment on night of the 23rd; villages east and south were abandoned 24th. Ayub struck camp and marched to position on Argandab, about ten miles north of city. He has about 4,000 regulars, six 12-pounders and two 9-pounders rifled, four 6-pounders, S.B. batteries, one 4-pounder battery, 2,000 horse, and about twice that number Ghazis, of whom one third have firearms. He will, I think, make northward, into Khakrez.' St. John joined Roberts at Robat, and reports thence 28th. Herati troops signified intention of retreating to Khakrez, but have been dissuaded, and sworn on Koran to fight. Roberts telegraphs, 29th, intends to reach Kandahar 31st, and attack Ayub next day. Ayub is reported to have entrenched his camp, and to mean fighting, being compelled by Musa Jan's party, who, accompanied by Hashim Khan, have joined him. Ayub has written apologetic letter to Roberts, saying he was forced to fight; has been told he must give up prisoners and submit unconditionally. Sick rate Roberts's force continues moderate. Phayre left Chaman last night for Kandahar with whole force collected, as he expects opposition at Takht-i-Pul. Rear brigade of force returning from Cabul arrives Dakka to-day. Cabul reports at Peiwar Kotaf say all well there. Ameer assiduous in conducting public business in person. Trade reviving and goods arriving from Jellalabad."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 2.—News from Ayub's camp, reported from Quetta by Sandeman. Sept. 1, to effect that Ayub had been strongly advised by one party to retreat to Girishk, but that advice of those who urged him not to desert his friends prevailed. Musa Khan, Hashim Khan, with large following of Ghilzai tribesmen, are with Ayub, and pressed him not to retreat. There is a tribal gathering under some sirdars at Takht-i-Pul. The son of Azad Khan of Kharan is with Ayub."

"FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, KANDAHAR, SEPT. 2.—The force under my command arrived here this morning without opposition. Enemy are said to be in considerable strength at Mazra, but the ridge of the hills which divides Kandahar from the Argandab completely covers their position, and at present I have only been able to ascertain that the Bali Wali Kotal, and one or two other points on this ridge are held in great strength, and that the enemy are busily engaged in defensive works. Reconnaissances are now being conducted, and I shall soon hope to be sufficiently acquainted with affairs generally to enable me to arrange an attack. The Kandahar garrison are in good health. The horses and transport animals appear to be in good condition. Major Vandeleur has died of his wounds. The remainder of the wounded, both officers and men, are generally doing well. The troops from Cabul are in famous health and spirits. The assurance of the safety of this garrison enabled comparatively short marches to be made from Khelat-i-Ghilzai which much benefited both men and animals. The cavalry horses and artillery mules are in excellent condition, and the transport animals are, as a rule, in very fair order. General Primrose has arranged for the sick of the force from Cabul being accommodated inside the city. Many of the cases are sore feet. None are anxious. To-morrow the telegraph line towards India will commence to be reconstructed, and, as General Phayre is probably on this side of the Kojak to-day, through communication should soon be restored."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 3.—Continuation telegram this morning. Further telegram from Roberts, 30th states:—'Will encamp infantry west of Kandahar, cavalry south under walls. Reported Quetta that Phayre arrived Sept. 1 at Mahomed Ameer, twenty-six miles from Chaman, four miles south of Dubras; halted on 28th to allow transport to rest. Cavalry Brigade under Wilkinson was to have advanced to Takht-i-Pul on 2nd. Phayre expected to arrive Kandahar with whole force on 5th.' Moosa Jan is in Ayub's camp."

"FROM SIR R. SANDEMAN, SEPT. 3.—General Phayre telegraphs through Chaman:—'Roberts attacked; dispersed Ayub's force; captured twenty-seven guns. Cabulis retreated up Argandab.'"

THERE is little to be added to the official telegrams which are above. The Ameer is organising the administration and showing himself a capable ruler. As to the relieving forces, it is said that the bridge at Attock will not be ready till Oct. 1. The proposed camps of observation at Lawrencepore and Hassanabdal are unpopular with the army. The reported excitement among the Beluchi hill tribes will be quieted by the defeat of Ayub's army. The complete dispersion of Wali Sirdar's forces, and his own capture and conveyance to India, may be expected to ensure general tranquillity unless we prematurely withdraw from Southern Afghanistan.

THE Times of India publishes a letter from a correspondent who fell in the fight of July 27, which complicates the story of the disaster of Kushk-i-Nakud by showing four days beforehand that Ayub Khan's force was correctly estimated at 12,000 men. "It has hitherto been supposed," says our contemporary, "that General Burrows was in ignorance of the real force of the enemy until he saw them draw up in line on the morning of the 27th July, and to this presumed ignorance, more than anything else, the catastrophe has been freely traced."

AN attempt was recently made to assassinate an officer, Captain Wintle, R.A., at Peshawur. Captain Wintle received a severe wound, but is said to be progressing favourably. A man has been arrested for being concerned in the matter.

At a meeting of the United Service Institution at Simla General Olpherts, V.C., C.B., advocated the immediate annexation of all Afghanistan up to the Oxus. General Massy preferred the milder course of holding the Khyber as far as Lundi Kotal, making over the Kuram to the Turis under our protectorate, and keeping a good grasp upon Kandahar, which we should never allow to slip out of our hands.

A private letter from Cabul dated July 29, and quoted by the Times of India, says that "Mahomed Jan came into Cabul the other day to have his neck operated on at our dispensary, and no one found out who he was. When he got back to his own place he wrote a letter of thanks."

THE telegrams contain summaries of the account of the action between General Burrows's brigade and the Wali's troops, and of the report of Brigadier Gib's expedition into the Maizena Valley, as published in the Gazette of India. The general success of the latter operation reflects great credit on General Gib and all engaged.

At the end of last week a scare pervaded Karachi, as rumours were brought in by natives that 15,000 Pathans had assembled at a point only three miles from the cantonments, with the intention of attacking the place.

Ammunition and rifles were at once served out to all white inhabitants. Guards were posted at the roads leading out of the town, and at the Government Treasury and Bank of Bombay two guns were placed. The arsenal was guarded by the 78th Highlanders. The European residents assembled armed to the teeth. Many families were sent on board vessels in the river, and the volunteers were all called out. The night, however, passed off quietly, and the next day Pathan residents were quietly deprived of their arms. Three companies of the 4th Regiment were despatched from Bombay on the 29th ult., and the 18th Native Regiment has been ordered up to Sind.

A TELEGRAM last Sunday states that the break in the rains during the last fortnight has caused some anxiety in the Deccan and the North West Provinces. It is as yet, however, too early too feel any serious apprehension, and should the usual quantity of rain fall in September fair crops may be obtained.

THE Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of Viscount Enfield to the under secretaryship at the India-office in the room of the Marquis of Lansdowne, resigned.

HER MAJESTY has been graciously pleased to approve the appointment of the Right Hon. W. P. Adam, M.P., First Commissioner of her Majesty's Works, to succeed his Grace the Duke of Buckingham as Governor of Madras.

As at present arranged the Duke of Buckingham will not terminate his official duties in India until November 23. Mr. Adam, his successor, has not yet arranged the time of his departure, but it is stated that he will not leave England until the end of October or the beginning of November.

THE Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the honour of knighthood on Mr. L. S. Jackson, C.I.E., on his retirement from a puisne judgeship of the High Court of Judicature, Calcutta.

MR. R. B. CHAPMAN, C.S.I., financial secretary to the Government of India, intends, the Standard understands, to resign his appointment and return to England with Sir John Strachey.

THE Director General of the Post-office in India having left this country, the Governor General in Council has passed a resolution acknowledging his high sense of the value of Mr. Monteath's services during the 23½ years which have passed since he signed his covenant with the Court of Directors.

At a meeting of natives at Puna on Sunday a resolution was passed expressing regret at the intelligence of General Burrows's disaster and loyal sympathy with the Government. The Governor of Bombay has been asked to communicate the resolution to the Queen.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY presided this week over a great meeting at Puna, attended by the Europeans and leading natives of the station, on behalf of the relief fund for the widows and orphans of soldiers who fall in the Afghan war. Sir James Fergusson, in addressing the assembly, said that in the time of trial through which they were now passing might be found an admirable proof of the healthy spirit prevailing through the native community. It was with a feeling of pleasure and pride that the Government could, confident in the loyalty of the population, move forward to the front an unprecedented proportion of the troops of the Presidency. He had the utmost confidence in General Primrose, and he could only reply to the attacks that had been made upon the Bombay Army by saying that his personal confidence in it had been in no way diminished by the defeat which General Burrows's force had experienced at the hands of overwhelming numbers. He trusted that for many years yet the Bombay Army would remain a stay and support to the Queen and country.

ACCORDING to the Times of India one combatant officer and more than one medical officer were to be tried at Kandahar by court-martial for coming in before their regiments. It was believed that twelve British soldiers captured the day following the engagement at Kushk-i-Nakhud were at the date of mail prisoners in Ayub Khan's camp.

It is reported from Mandalay that Oo Chaik, the head of the late Embassy, and Oo Myai, secretary and interpreter, have been executed.

It is announced from Shillong that the Nagas have again begun to give trouble. A party of them lately made a raid upon a tea estate and killed several children.

From St. Petersburg, the Daily News learns by special telegram, that there is every probability that the difficulty between Russia and China in respect of the Kuldja territory will be amicably arranged.

THE New Central Provinces Tenantry Bill was introduced by Mr. Grant at a recent meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

THE scandalous story circulated by one of our London contemporaries as to the disappearance of the Mysor Crown jewels turns out to be an unadulterated fiction. The Pioneer asserts from inquiries made that no jewels have been lost or altered. The original catalogue asserted to have been lost is perfectly safe. In Mysor it is supposed that the enemies of Mr. Rungacharter invented the scandal, for their repetition of which the Statesman and the Pall Mall Gazette will doubtless hasten to apologise to that official.

A communiqué from the Press Commissioner states that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the grant of six months' donation batta to all troops across the frontier since Sept. 3, 1879. The Government have also decided on granting such compensation as may appear fair for losses sustained by native cavalry during the whole war from its beginning. The leave to grant batta was obtained from the Secretary of State on July 14, and was communicated to General Stewart on the 29th. He has communicated it to the troops under his command.

AN action brought against Lord William Beresford by a Mr. Maitland for slander, as to some play transactions in China, has, after several days' trial at Meerut, terminated in a verdict for the defendant.

WE draw the attention of our readers to an announcement of the Indian Co-operative Agency to the effect that it will, through its numerous Indian agents, forward parcels or packages to the officers and soldiers of the troops now returning from Afghanistan. Parcels for non-commissioned officers and soldiers will be forwarded without any commission whatever, and, as far as is practicable, separate boxes will be made up for each regiment, troop, or battery.

THE geographical section of the British Association had a singular advantage over the rest of their fellow-countrymen when Sir Richard Temple expounded to them the route to Kandahar and the environs of that capital with direct reference to the present state of affairs. We imagine that there was not much else to be added to the lecture which he delivered before the Royal Geographical Society illustrated by the several pictorial notes that did duty at Swansea. But the epilogue of this lecture with its allusions to recent events deserves reproducing. He concluded thus:—

"Before I resume my seat let me say there is no use disguising from ourselves the magnitude of the disaster which has befallen us in that quarter. It is the custom of the British people to look danger and difficulty in the face, and a disaster of this kind occurring to the British arms is of an almost unprecedented character in our military annals. A few months ago if it had been said that Ayub Khan had ventured to cross the Helmund and to come actually within fifty miles of Kandahar it would have been said, 'The Lord hath delivered him into our hands,' as Cromwell used to say. He would have been opposed by the British force from Kandahar, met in the open, and defeated in a position from which there could be no escape; but as it has proved, our power has been scattered by the dispensation of Providence. Think of the might which accompanied our unfortunate general. There was with him the British infantry with its serried ranks and breech-loading rifles; the native infantry, hardy Mahrattas from the Indian mountains, whose steadiness, endurance, and discipline has been proved on many occasions; the Bombay cavalry and the Sind cavalry; and one would have thought that the half-disciplined Afghans would have been driven back by the British infantry, and the Sind cavalry could have gone into them like a whirlwind and broken them to pieces. Besides these, there was the British artillery, which we fondly imagined was the best accoutred, the best mounted, and the best equipped in the world. All these advantages have gone almost for nothing, and we must submit to the humiliation which Providence in His wisdom has seen fit to inflict upon us. So it is that sometimes the proud are humbled, and that the self-confidence of even the mightiest nation is abated, and I am not sure that we have yet got to the end of our misfortunes. I shall be surprised if more accidents and disasters are not in store for us. But of this I am sure, that as the plot thickens and the danger increases, so the national spirit will rise higher and higher until British authority shall be restored and the enemy shall be shattered."

THE accounts relating to the trade and navigation of India for June last compare very favourably with the figures for the corresponding month in the two preceding years, exhibiting the same satisfactory state of things that the returns for April and May exhibited. For instance, the total value of imports, including Government stores and treasure, in June last was Rs.4,97,39,169, and that of exports Rs.5,73,04,398. In June, 1879, the imports amounted to Rs.3,02,51,348, and the exports to Rs.5,13,53,095, while in the previous year they were much smaller. For the three months April 1 to June 30 the imports amounted to Rs.14,45,82,280, and the exports to Rs.20,82,28,066, of which Rs.20,46,90,474 was for merchandise. In the second quarter last year the totals were—Imports, Rs.11,68,98,300; exports, Rs.18,22,87,498.

DURING the first three months of the current official year the imports and exports of bullion amounted to Rs.94,44,453 and Rs.13,950 of gold, and of silver Rs.1,97,78,819 and Rs.35,17,642. During the same period the amounts of silver received and coined in the mints were—received Rs.1,12,66,210, coined Rs.1,20,98,010. The opium revenue to date, compared with the estimates, was for five sales of Bengal opium and four months' pass duty on opium exported from Bombay, estimate Rs.3,60,15,500, actual Rs.3,74,85,620. Better than estimate, Rs.14,70,120.

THE Cotton Frauds Bill, which will soon be introduced into the Legislative Council of Bombay, is not the simple bill which the Bombay Gazette anticipated about a month ago. Instead of following the lines of Regulation III. of 1829 and Act XV. of 1851, as ordered by the Secretary of State, the proposer of the bill has introduced, apparently without reason except for the purpose of worrying the trade, a system of press licenses. It will bring in no revenue of any account, as the fees for licenses vary from Rs.1 to Rs.5 only; there appears to be no patronage, which is often a tempting bait to officials; and the provision that every press shall put its name on the bale pressed, besides being what every press would of its own will, gives no means of protection against fraud.

THE latest returns of railway receipts is not satisfactory as regards the two main lines of railway, the East Indian and the G.I.P. Railways. The decrease from January 1 to the middle of June showed a loss compared with the preceding year of Rs.16,12,000 in the East Indian, and of Rs.15,85,000 on the G.I.P.; while the Oudh and Rohilkund showed a comparative loss of Rs.4,02,000. The total loss on the guaranteed railways amounted to Rs.26,41,000. On the other hand, the State railways are looking up, and show an increase of Rs.28,69,000, and there is, therefore, on the whole, a net increase over last year of over two lakhs. The B.B. and C.I. Railway shows an increase of Rs.2,19,000, and this in spite of the keen competition with sea transport. This competition has led to a reduction of rates, but it has increased the business done, so that the result is favourable.

DURING the week ending July 31 there were 183 deaths in Calcutta, being a death-rate of 22.2 per 1,000 per annum. In Madras, during the same week, there were 269 deaths, being a death-rate of 35.2 per 1,000 per annum. In Bombay, for the week ending August 3, there were 316 deaths, giving a death-rate of 24.45 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India contains the following obituary of the week:—Col. Cleland, 9th Lancers (from wounds received in Afghanistan); Lieut. Col. L. G. Brown, second in command of the 8th N.I. (from sunstroke whilst proceeding to join General Phayre's column); Dr. Brereton (who served with the French in the Franco-German war).

THE CHOLERA IN ALLAHABAD.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us the following particulars of the recent outbreak of this scourge in the North West capital:—"I am sorry to say the awful epidemic of cholera that has been raging in Allahabad for some time past has created great havoc among the rank and file of H.M. 22nd Regiment, and they are now under canvas, having formed a cholera camp a little way out of the station. One officer (a surgeon) succumbed after a few hours' illness, and the regiment lost as many as ten men in a day; but in the city, among the natives, the mortality has been fearful, people dying daily in dozens from the awful scourge. In the civil lines, or portion of the town not inhabited by the military or natives, we have got off more easily, though I deeply regret to announce the death of Mr. Cornelius, sub-editor of the Indian Herald, a most energetic young man, for many years connected with the Indian press, and whose ability and kindly nature had endeared him to many and assisted in making the paper in whose service he died one of the leading Indian dailies. Among others attacked by this fell disease was Mrs. Straight, wife of Judge Straight, so well known in England, and who came to this country only a short time ago, but I am happy to say she is progressing favourably, and great hopes are entertained of her recovery. We have now entered on the most dangerous and disagreeable time of the year—August and September being famous as the sickly months, when cholera and fever and other diseases are rampant. This is owing probably to the effect of a blazing sun on a ground soddened with heavy rains, which causes a miasma charged with poisonous gases to arise and spread thicker and thicker with the wind. Doctors—a surgeon told me the other day—are now persuaded that cholera has its birth in impure water and unripe fruit or vegetables, which theory certainly has cause for its foundation, inasmuch that it is generally worst among our troops and the natives, who are very careless about the water they drink and the vegetables they consume; but from years of observation I confess I think the cause already assigned, impure atmosphere, is a factor, if not the sole one, in generating the disease.

THE KANDAHAR RAILWAY.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN has found time to rebut certain aspersions on this railway as too expensive, unproductive, and as passing through a generally barren country. After referring to the corn and forage supplied, except in droughts, from the plains of Peshin and Quetta, he says of the railway, that the engineering difficulties are many and great no one will deny, but the traffic returns promise to be much greater than the opponents have any idea of. "After leaving the broad and fertile plains of Sibi and Kutch Gundawa, which, thanks to our protecting power, are rapidly being brought under cultivation, the line enters the Marri Hills, which is a great grazing country, and has already developed a considerable cattle trade with Sind and the Punjab. At Harnai a Pathan centre is reached where a valuable wool trade may be expected. Forty-five miles to the east of Harnai lies the fertile plateau of Thull Chotiali, from which good roads leads to Ghazni through the valleys of Zhob and Bori. This route must in time find favour in the sight of the large Povindah caravans which now with difficulty yearly fight their way viâ the Gomal Pass through the country of the fierce Waziris to our Punjab border at Dera Ismail Khan. A further source of trade is being rapidly developed by the increasing prosperity of Khelat and the north-eastern portion of Beluchistan. Since our occupation of Quetta the Khan's revenue from that valley has almost doubled, and the condition of the Beluch and Brahui tribes from their chiefs downwards has improved beyond belief. As evidence of this I can point to the Bolan Pass, which, once notorious for the robberies and murders daily perpetrated there, is now almost as safe as an Indian highway. Telegraphic communication between Sind and the Khojak Pass, a distance of 240 miles, has scarcely been interrupted since the commencement of the war. Those only who knew it a few years ago can now see a marvellous improvement in the prospects of our assigned territory which would escape the observation of a passing traveller. That the railway will from the outset succeed in paying its working expenses I myself do not doubt, and that ultimately it will conduce greatly to British interests by increasing and diverting the Central Asian trade which now finds its way through Khelat territory, viâ the Bolan and Raj routes, to Karachi, is, I believe, equally certain. Politically the advent of the railway at Sibi has already been of the highest value, and its promoters may rejoice at the peace and prosperity it has brought to a large tract of country."

THE RETENTION OF KANDAHAR.—DEPUTATION TO LORD HARTINGTON.

A DEPUTATION from the Patriotic Association, waited upon the Secretary of State for India yesterday, for the purpose of urging the propriety of permanently occupying Kandahar. Among the deputation were Lord Waveney, Sir W. Palliser, M.P., General Sir C. Reid, Lord Gwydir, Mr. W. Holms, M.P., Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett, M.P., and Mr. F. A. Hyndman.

Lord WAVENEY, in introducing the deputation, handed to the Marquis of Hartington a memorial setting forth the arguments of the Patriotic Association in favour of the permanent occupation of Kandahar, and urged the commercial as well as the military advantage both to India and to England of such an occupation.

Lord GWYDIR pointed out that it was through Kandahar that every conqueror of Hindostan had hitherto marched his army, and said that its retention by the British was necessary to the safety of our Indian empire.

Sir W. PALLISER hoped that the Government would take no hasty steps in the matter. He reminded the noble lord that the foreign policy of the late Government received the very general approval of the country, and that a complete reversal of that policy would involve grave responsibility upon the present Government. He hoped the Government would give the scientific frontier a fair trial, so that its value or its uselessness might be practically tested, and pointed out the various advantages which would accrue to India and to England by our permanent retention of Kandahar.

Sir C. REID maintained that while we were in possession of Kandahar it would be impossible for Russia to make any advance towards India.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT also spoke in the same direction.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON willingly undertook to place the memorial before his colleagues, who, he was sure, would give it due consideration. Very little had been said by the members of the deputation which it would be possible for him to remark upon without entering into points of controversy which it would be well to avoid on that occasion. Sir William Palliser appealed to the Government not to reverse suddenly the policy of the late Government, but he must point out that the annexation of Kandahar, which the deputation recommended, was not the policy of the late Administration, their policy being merely to support the native ruler, who was supposed to be acceptable to the country, and who, it was hoped, would ultimately be able to hold his position himself. As he had stated in Parliament, the question of Kandahar and our relations there stood in a very different position to our relations with the rest of Afghanistan; and he had said that, while the Government had decided with the least possible delay to retire—as, indeed, he thought the late Government had also decided—from northern Afghanistan, the engagement which had been entered into with Shere Ali at Kandahar, and also political and military considerations, made it necessary to devote much more time and consideration before arriving at a final decision as to what our future relations with Kandahar should be. He need not say that the attack in force of Ayub Khan and the defeat of General Burrows, and the brilliant relief by General Roberts of Kandahar, had not made it more easy to come to any sudden decision upon the question. He was quite willing to admit that there appeared to be some reasons in favour of the retention of Kandahar. Most military men—although there was great difference of opinion even among them—held that Kandahar was an important strategic position for us, and the difficulties of holding it were not so great as those of holding Cabul and other parts. But he could not disguise from the deputation that there were very considerable difficulties on the other side which would make any Government hesitate before they resolved to adopt the course which the deputation recommended. He could not say that it was quite clear to his mind what right we had in annexing Kandahar. We had not been asked to do so by the inhabitants, and he did not know, although they had acquiesced more peacefully and willingly than any other Afghan tribes in our occupations, what evidence there was that the people would be willing permanently to submit to our rule. The idea of the late Government was to make an independent kingdom of Kandahar, and it seemed to him to require the absolute necessity of self-preservation before they could have any title to annex the country of an unwilling people, on whom we had made war, and who had done nothing to entitle us to destroy their independence. Then, again, although he admitted that it was possible for us to retain Kandahar, it would require a very large force which might be employed more beneficially in the defence of India. Recent events had not tended to show that it could be held with safety to our honour without a considerable garrison, with another on the line of communication with our frontier, and he doubted very much whether the force of 10,000 or 11,000 which would be required for its occupation could not be more usefully employed in other ways in the protection of India. And, again, it was quite clear from all they had heard that the whole object of re-establishing a powerful and friendly Afghanistan would be made extremely remote by our annexation of Kandahar, and it was also quite certain that the ruler of Kandahar would never acquiesce for any length of time in the permanent occupation of his country by the British. It would greatly weaken his character and cut his communications with Herat, and could only tend to the ultimate disintegration of Afghanistan. It was true that it was quite possible that a considerable amount of trade might arise from our occupation, but he thought that any advantages we might look for from trade would be dearly purchased by some of those inconveniences and difficulties he had pointed out. All he could further say was that the memorial of the deputation would receive the best consideration of the Government. The deliberations of the Government on the question of which it treated were not absolutely concluded, and he thought the Government had shown that they were not inclined to come to a hasty decision on the subject.

The deputation having thanked his lordship for his courteous reception, the proceedings terminated.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

GENERAL PRIMROSE.

OUR Bengal contemporaries seem far too anxious to hold General Primrose chiefly responsible for the cruel disaster on the Helmund. That officer is well known to many of our readers, as he was adjutant general of the Madras Army from 1862 to 1867, and was also for a while one of the most popular members of local society. Not only was he devoid, in his official capacity, of that insufferable "hawhawism" which is now voted bad form by the army, but he was both courteous and efficient. He was honoured with the warm friendship of that tough and rather prejudiced old soldier, Sir Hope Grant, and he succeeded in discharging his duties without friction in any quarter. He did not perhaps realise the popular ideal of a conquering hero in fields of battle, or of a man who could on occasion emulate the dogged energy of General Ulrich at Strasburg. Yet he had seen a good deal of active service at the Cape with his regiment, the 43rd Light Infantry. This was in 1851 to 1853, during the Kaffir war, when the name of Sir

Harry Smith was a household word in England. He accompanied his regiment to India shortly before the mutiny broke out in Bengal, and he commanded it on his march during the hot season of 1858, from Bangalore through Central India to Calpee, a distance of thirteen hundred miles. He took part in various operations in Bundelcund; and towards the conclusion of the rebellion he commanded one of the seven columns under Brigadier Wheeler. After he went home from Madras he obtained a coveted command in Ireland; and two or three years ago he was appointed to the command of the Puna Division of the Bombay Army. He is now a veteran of forty-three years' service, and he ought, one would imagine, to know something of the duties and responsibilities of war. We may admit that we do not yet place that thorough confidence in his generalship which we would like to do; but those who have served with him entertain no doubt about his coming with credit out of the present trial of his quality. In Bengal, where he is not well known, it is laid to his charge that he has been guilty of blunders in the face of the enemy that are quite inexcusable. The Pioneer alludes to the "marvellous dullness or apathy" that must be imputed to General Primrose at Kandahar, and to the Commander in Chief at Simla, for leaving the Helmund force to take its chance. But General Primrose was fully alive to the formidable character of the danger which was sweeping down upon General Burrows, and we believe that if he had had his will he would have had the brigade marched back to Kandahar, there to await Ayub Khan's attack. Ayub Khan did not drop from the clouds with a large force well equipped for battle. It was well known several weeks ago, both in London and Simla, that he was steadily advancing upon Kandahar, and was to be opposed on the road by a brigade commanded by an officer who had seen no war service. Yet no warning cry was raised in any quarter, because no serious peril was apprehended. General Primrose, however, did not share the easy confidence of observers at a distance, and he can hardly be held responsible for a catastrophe that he saw to be possible, and that the Government did not, in compliance with his request, strengthen his hands to avert.—Madras Mail.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

MALE AND FEMALE EMIGRANTS.—A notification in the Gazette of India substitutes the following for rules 23, 23A, and 23B, of the Port of Calcutta emigration rules:—Of the total number of emigrants to be embarked on board each ship, the proportion of adult females shall not, except as provided in rule 25, be less than forty to every 100 adult males.—Indian Daily News.

OPIMUM SALE.—The result of the opium sale held at the Government sale room, No. 2, Bankshall-street, on August 2, was, Behar, 2,350 chests—proceeds, Rs.32,24,775; Benares, 2,350 chests—proceeds, Rs.30,06,275.—Ibid.

SALT MARKET REPORT.—Owing, presumably, to the favourable state of the salt market, the result of the transactions made at the Custom House during the last week of July appears to be more favourable than that of the previous weeks. The total collections made on July 26 were estimated at about Rs.1,95,000, of which the sum of upwards of Rs.1,70,000 was received on account of duty on salt alone, and the balance, viz., about Rs.25,000, was received on account of duty on general merchandise. On the two following days the amount realised exceeded a lakh of rupees per diem, and on Thursday, July 29, the total amount of collections was about Rs.1,20,000.—Ibid.

DEATH OF MR. C. GRANT.—We regret to announce the death, at Calcutta, of Mr. Charles Grant, of Bannockburn, Leborg. Mr. Grant left Darjiling on July 22, and died of diphtheria on July 29.—Darjiling News.

EXTENSION OF THE SALT RAILWAY.—Government has sanctioned the continuation of the salt branch railway to the Kewrah mines, crossing the Jhelum by a permanent bridge at Pind Dadun Khan. It is hoped that this will lead to the further extension of this line along the right bank of the Jhelum to Khoos-hab, and thence across the desert to Dera Ismail Khan, as strongly advocated by Colonel Medley, consulting engineer. This would practically open up railway communication with the Gomul pass—the most important pass on the whole of the western frontier.—Civil and Military Gazette.

GWALIOR.—A correspondent writes:—"A museum has been sanctioned and will in a short time be established at Fortress Gwalior. The 'Teli Mandir' will be utilised as such, and a certain acreage enclosed around the building after the fashion of a pictorial garden. To the museum will be attached a library and reading-room, a long-felt want in Gwalior Fort. Owing to the solicitude of Mr. Rivett-Carnac and others who exposed the vandalism at Kanouj and elsewhere, Capt. Cole, R.E., has been appointed conservator of ancient monuments; in other words, it has been conceded that it is not to the interests of society that ancient history should be wantonly effaced. The establishment of a museum is therefore most opportune. His Highness the Maharaja Sindia has, with his usual liberality, directed his district officers to send all pieces of ancient carving to the Gwalior Museum, and will no doubt follow this up by a munificent grant. To Brigadier General W. Gordon no little credit is due, for he has not only started the museum, but, by inviting the return of sculptures strewn over Morar and elsewhere, he has repaired the singular want of solicitude that had previously been shown in the matter. Capt. J. B. Keith, 39th Regiment, the curator of the museum, will thankfully receive any old coins, urns, silver or copper ware, pottery, arms, and armour illustrative of ancient Gwalior.—Pioneer.

THE INDIGO CROP.—The indigo manufacture in Bengal is now almost closed for the year. The result is rather better than was expected. The estimated outturn is 22,000 maunds, against 14,535 maunds last season.—Times Telegram.

THE TONNAGE IN PORT OF CALCUTTA.—The total number of vessels that entered the port of Calcutta during the year 1879-80 was 886, a total of 1,405,979 tons, against 967 of 1,430,780 tons, in the previous year. Of these 442 were steamers and 444 sailing ships. The number of steamers by the Suez Canal was 136, with an average tonnage of 2,688.—Times Telegram.

THE INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—We have received from the committee of the Indian Association of Calcutta a copy of a very long memorial which they have sent to Lord Ripon upon the subject of the Vernacular Press Act and the License Tax Act, the practical working of which they understand is now being considered by his lordship. The memorialists adroitly quote Mr. Gladstone in favour of the repeal of the Press Act, and urge that while to all intents and purposes it is a dead letter, the fact that it still forms a substantive portion of the law of the country continues to cause needless irritation and is the source of unnecessary discontent among the educated community of India. "Ever since 1835 the Press of India—English and Vernacular—has enjoyed unreserved freedom of utterance, with one short interruption in 1857, when on an occasion of extreme peril to the empire that freedom was withdrawn from both sections of the Press—European and Native. But the withdrawal of this right was only temporary. It continued in force for one year, and when the danger was over, and peace was re-established, the Press was allowed to enjoy, as before, its cherished privilege of free and unreserved criticism of the acts and measures of Government and of public officers. At the present moment the excitement due to the Russo-Turkish war, which was at its height when the Act was passed, has completely subsided, and all apprehensions of any violent outburst of religious fanaticism or of political zeal may be said to have terminated with that war. At such a time, your petitioners venture to point out, it would be an act of wise statesmanship to repeal an Act no longer called for by the exigencies of the situation." With reference to the License Tax the memorialists say that in the present state of Indian finance it is not for them to ask his lordship to remit the tax altogether, but they venture to submit for his consideration whether "it is fair that the official classes should continue to enjoy immunity from the payment of the license tax." The memorialists conclude by expressing a hope that Lord Ripon "will be pleased to give to their prayers the indulgent consideration which the Government of India has always been known to show to representations proceeding from public bodies. In the absence of representative assemblies it becomes necessary for public bodies like the Indian Association to interpret to the rulers of the country the views and wishes of the ruled. In the performance of this important duty your petitioners have made this representation to your lordship, and they entertain the firm hope that it will be their high privilege to associate the inauguration of your lordship's administration with the repeal of a repressive and obnoxious measure that can serve no useful purpose, but has spread universal discontent."—Times of India.

SOMETHING LIKE AN ALLIGATOR.—We hear from Fyzabad that two officers at that station recently killed an alligator of the extraordinary length of 21 1/2 feet.—Indian Herald.

A FATAL MISTAKE.—A tragedy is reported by the Rangoon Gazette's correspondent at Thayetmyo as having occurred there at the beginning of this month. One of the Queen's Own Sappers and Miners stationed seems to have got tipsy, and was locked up in the guard-room, where he became uproarious. This displeased the sergeant of the guard, who caused the unfortunate man to be gagged with a tent peg, rolled round with cloth, and the poor fellow was found dead from suffocation in the morning. All the men on guard at the time have been arrested pending inquiry.

THE TAGORE LAW PROFESSORSHIP.—Mr. W. F. Agnew, barrister at law, has been nominated by the faculty of law of the Calcutta University as Tagore law professor for the ensuing year. Mr. Agnew proposes to lecture, if elected by the Senate, on the law of trusts in British India.—Englishman.

THE METROPOLITAN.—We regret to learn that the Bishop of Calcutta has been compelled owing to his illness (fever) to modify the published programme of his visitation of Bengal. His lordship will now remain at Darjiling until early in September, and will then visit Kurseong, Julpaguri, and Saidpur, taking up his original programme at Sahibgunge.—Times of India.

RESIGNATION OF A JUDGE.—Mr. Justice Ainslie, of the High Court at Calcutta, has been permitted to resign. Mr. Ainslie was a civilian judge, and came out to India in 1845. He was appointed judge of Patna in 1865, and two years later was selected as president to the Tea Commission. When the commission ended he rejoined his appointment, which he continued to fill till 1870, when he was appointed officiating judge of the High Court. He was confirmed in his appointment in 1876.—Gazette of India.

JUGGERNAUT CARS.—Mr. Armstrong, magistrate of Poree, having been called upon for an explanation of the temporary stoppage of the cars of Juggernaut, has submitted a long report to the commissioner of the Orissa Division. The report has also been laid before the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, who is of opinion that the temple authorities are entirely to blame in the matter. This opinion has been conveyed in a letter to Mr. Armstrong by Mr. H. M. Kish, under secretary, who says that the dragging of the cars in the condition in which they were on the 9th ult. would, in all probability, have resulted in loss of life; and after the fatal accident which occurred last year the manager should have carried out the magistrate's instructions without hesitation long before the date fixed.—Times of India.

THE ARMS ACT.—The following return shows the number of persons and cattle killed by wild animals and the number of wild animals destroyed in Lower Bengal before and since the passing of the Indian Arms Act, 1878 :—

REPORTED DEATH OF CAPTAIN WINTLE.—We regret extremely that we should have published a statement to the effect that Captain Wintle, R.A., had died at Peshawur from the effects of a shot fired at him by a Pathan coolie. We were correct, however, in stating that he had been shot through one lung, and are rejoiced to hear that Captain Wintle is "doing very well," and we trust may speedily become convalescent.—Civil and Military Gazette.

DEATH OF SURGEON BRERETON.—We regret very much to observe an announcement of the death of Surgeon S. Brereton, of the Bengal Medical Service, which took place recently at Baghdad. The cause was small-pox, which has been severely prevalent in Turkish Arabia for some time past. Surgeon Brereton entered the service in 1872. He was the first man of his term. He had previously served with the French in the Franco-German war. He was a man of great ability and energy. The most of his service has been spent in the Foreign Department.—Indian Medical Gazette.

THE BENGAL BRIGADE.—It is announced that Colonel Walker, 12th Regiment, is to have the command of the brigade from Bengal, proceeding to Kandahar, composed of her Majesty's 63rd Regiment, the 2nd Queen's and the 3rd and 4th Regiments of Bengal Native Infantry. Colonel Walker, the Lahore paper reminds us, has seen much service in Afghanistan since the outbreak of the war, and has gained the confidence of the generals under whom he served. Colonel Walker commanded the infantry in the expedition from Jellalabad into the Lughman Valley at the beginning of the present year.—Times of India.

MAHARAJA HOLKER AND THE MISSIONARIES.—A Christian, named Prabhudas, was recently sentenced in the court of the Maharaja Holker at Indore to two hundred days' imprisonment for selling Christian books in the city of Indore. Prabhudas is a native of Allahabad, and was till recently connected with All Saints' Church in this station. Two months ago he attached himself to the English Church Mission at Indore, and has been carrying on the trade of a weaver for his livelihood. His leisure hours have been occupied in the sale of religious books, and for this he has been condemned to imprisonment for the greater part of a year. There was no disturbance connected with the sale, nor is it alleged that there is anything offensive in the books, except their Christianity. Prabhudas has since been released at the intervention of Sir Henry Daly. The Maharaja has, however, forbidden the missionaries to sell Christian books at Indore, and our contemporary predicts that as the missionaries are not likely to hold themselves bound by this prohibition further trouble seems imminent.—Indian Herald.

LIBEL CASES.—The Allahabad High Court disposed the other day of an interesting libel case. Mr. H. Vansittart, barrister at law, was fined Rs.1,000 by the joint magistrates of Bareilly for sending a letter to the Brigadier General Commanding in Rohilkund, containing defamatory charges against Surgeon A. Hayes, of the Army Medical Department. The aggrieved gentleman was willing to accept an apology, and to settle the matter amicably, but had eventually to bring a criminal action. The High Court, after a somewhat protracted and very careful hearing of the appellant, who was represented by the best local counsel, confirmed the conviction; but in consideration of certain special circumstances of provocation, and the impulsive character of the appellant, reduced the fine to Rs.200, all of which is to be paid to the respondent. Dr. Geoffrey C. Hall, the superintendent of the Naina Gaol, has brought an action against Surgeon Major Kenneth M'Leod, the editor, and Mr. F. F.

Wyman, the publisher, of the Indian Medical Gazette, printed at Calcutta. The case came on for hearing on August 10, before Mr. Markham, C.S., the collector and magistrate of the district. M. C. Hill, barrister at law, appeared for the prosecutor, and Mr. A. Colvin, barrister at law, for the defendant, and after considerable discussion as to jurisdiction, &c., the evidence for the prosecution was taken and the further hearing of the case adjourned to the 24th.

THE CHOLERA EPIDEMIC AT ALLAHABAD.—The cholera epidemic among the troops has not quite died out yet. Since the publication of our yesterday's issue there have been no fresh cases either at Sheorajpore, the old Rifle Range, or among the Artillery and 35th N.I. There have been, however, one death in cantonments and one fresh case to-day. The whole of the single men, garrison cell prisoners of H.M.'s 2-22nd Regiment, leave for Begum Serai to-morrow and form a camp there.—Indian Herald.

ELLERSLIE.—We now hear that the Punjab Government has purchased the house called "Ellerslie" at Simla, for the sum of Rs.25,000. The house is large and commodious, but for the purpose of lodging the whole of the secretariat large additions must be made.—Times of India.

THE MANDALAY MINISTERS.—The Mandalay Government Gazette gives a list of all the chief officials, including two or three new and important appointments. The four principal grades of civil authority are:—(1) Meng-gyi or Chief Minister, (2) Atweng-wun or Minister of the Interior, (3) Myo-wun or City Magistrate, (4) Wundauk or Sub Minister. The highest military office is that of "Weng-do-hmu," or Commander of the Palace Guard, who ranks next to a Chief Minister. Ordinarily there are four Meng-gyis, four Atweng-wuns, two Myo-wuns, four Wundauks and three Weng-do-hmus, viz., those of the Right, the Left, the Eastern, and Western quarters. The prescribed number of chief ministers, city magistrates, and commanders is rarely if ever exceeded; the other two grades are filled with more irregularity. During the reign of the king there were five Atweng-wuns, one being stationed as special revenue superintendent at Bahamo, and no fewer than seven sub ministers. A brief summary is given of the services of each of the new functionaries. The Taung Khweng chief minister has passed through the grades of herald, governor, sub minister and minister of the interior. The Pauk Myaing Atweng-wun has been envoy to the Courts of France, Italy, and England, and has acted as herald and sub minister. The movements of the Hletheng Atweng-wun are given more in detail. He has been in palace employ from a very early age, and during the late monarch's reign was promoted successively through the ranks of slipper-bearer, tea-server, and betel box-holder to that of the Governor of the Royal Barges. For his loyalty and energy (which signifies the active share he took in the late massacres) the present Lord of Existence created him city magistrate, and has now exalted him to the dignity of minister of interior. His special charge till recently was the supervision of the Shan country and the middle territory. A notification in the same Gazette now appoints him supreme governor of all the lower fluvial provinces. He is placed in command of a large military force, and is to take immediate measures to prevent disturbances in the skirts of the country and the access of robbers and bad characters, who are causing terror and insecurity to the traders and cultivators of the Golden Kingdom.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—At date of mail the disengaged tonnage in port stood at 36,321 tons. London via Canal: The market closed decidedly quiet at £2 12s. 6d. for rice or wheat; at £2 17s. 6d. nominal for linseed; at £3 5s. for hides; at £3 2s. 6d. to £3 5s. for jute, &c. For London via Cape: The market closed weak at £2 1s. 3d. for rice or wheat; £2 5s. for linseed; £2 6s. 3d. for rape, poppy, &c.; £2 5s. for jute, heavy or light bales. For Liverpool via Suez Canal: Quotations nominal at £2 12s. 6d. to £2 15s. for dead weight; £3 to £3 5s. for measurement goods and oils. For Liverpool via Cape: Wheat at £2 3s. 9d.; linseed at £2 6s. 3d., the latter with wheat at £2; linseed and jute at £2 2s. 6d.; and oil at £2 5s.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

THE DEATH OF CAPTAIN MAHOMED HUSSAIN.—At the inquest held to inquire into the cause of the death of this gallant officer the jury returned the following verdict:—"The deceased met with his death from a shock the result of injuries sustained by reason of a collision between his carriage and a railway engine at St. Mary's level crossing. The accident is attributable to the want of precaution for the safety of the public on the part of the South Indian Railway Company. The jury beg that the attention of Government be called to the unsafe manner in which the train service has been worked between Egmore and the beach."—Ibid.

THE LATE MR. JORDAN.—We regret to record the death, at Madras, on August 1, from bronchitis, of Mr. Mathew Jordan, first uncoventanted assistant of the Revenue Board-office. Mr. Jordan, who was a native of Ireland, was a useful member of the branch of the Government service to which he belonged, and he was greatly respected by all who came in contact with him.—Ibid.

THE LATE LIEUT. A. E. DOBSON.—It is with regret we have to record the death of this young officer in his thirtieth year at Camp Gandamak, Afghanistan, on July 20. Deceased entered the army in July, 1869, and was attached to the Queen's Own Sappers and Miners, Bangalore. In April, 1873, he took up a staff appointment in the Engineering Department, and in February, 1879, proceeded to the frontier on field service. It is said that deceased had been suffering from fever.—Ibid.

RAILWAY BRIDGES.—In an order, dated June 14, the Government state that they are still of opinion that it is desirable that the railway bridges over the following rivers should, if possible, be made available for ordinary wheeled traffic:—Poiney, Cauvery, Amaravati, Vaigai Ganicheri. With respect to the objections cited by the Madras Railway agent, the Government recognise the fact that the rivers in question have been bridged at great expense by the railway companies, but with capital raised at interest guaranteed by the State. It is not, however, intended that any outlay should fall upon the companies in connection with these proposals. The work, if undertaken, must be at the cost of the local funds boards concerned, who will also have to defray any additional expenses of maintenance caused thereby; and the railway companies will be enabled to protect their interests by levying tolls on all traffic using the bridges, such tolls to be shared between them and the local fund boards concerned, in the proportion of the capital expenditure incurred. The Government are further of opinion that suitable regulations for the conduct of traffic over the bridges can be framed without difficulty. The agent of the Madras Railway Company has again been requested to submit estimates of the cost of the alterations necessary to adapt the Poiney and Cauvery bridges for wheeled traffic, and of the additional expenses for upkeep and working which will become necessary if the alterations are carried out. The agents of the two companies have also been invited to suggest tables of suitable tolls for the use of their bridges.—Ibid.

THE NEW LYING-IN HOSPITAL.—One ward of the new lying-in hospital has been opened. The hospital is built by the charitable endowment of Rai Bahadur Mullapah Chetty.—Times of India.

OFFICIAL RUMOURS.—It is rumoured that Mr. J. C. Loch, late president of the Madras Municipality, has been offered and has accepted the appointment of private secretary to Mr. Adam, governor-designate of Madras.—Times of India.

THE GOLD MINING.—We understand that the Madras Gold Mining Company (Limited) has been floated. The number of shares reserved for the Indian market was 50,000, and these have been fully applied for.—Ibid.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "LASSA."—Intelligence has been received at Madras that the new iron barque Lassa, Captain Higgins, which left the roads on August 8 for Calcutta, had struck off the Santipilly rocks and foundered in deep water. All lives on board saved. The Lassa was a vessel of 1,138 tons. She arrived in the Madras roads on the 6th July from Cardiff with 9,000 steel rails for the Mysor State Railway.—Ibid.

NATIVE A.D.C.—We learn that Honorary Captain and Subadar Major Mahomed Abdullah, of the 2nd Madras Light Cavalry, has been appointed aide de camp to Sir Neville Chamberlain, vice Honorary Captain Mahomed Hussain, who was recently killed. The new A.D.C. is a member of the Order of British India. He entered the army forty-seven years ago, and is now sixty-two years of age. He served under Major General Whitlock with the Bundelcund Field Division in 1858-59, was present at the capture of Urighang, the affair at Koboie, and battle of Banda, has received medal and clasp for Central India, and prize money for Kurvi and Banda. He was only this year gazetted honorary captain.—Ibid.

GROUNDLESS CHARGE.—Officiating Conductor M'Kenna, a warrant officer, who was brought here from Rangoon under arrest on a charge of being implicated in the case of which Conductor Stephenson is charged with misappropriating Government ordinance stores, will return to Rangoon by the next steamer to rejoin the arsenal at that station, the charge against him of falsifying accounts having been proved to be groundless.—Madras Mail.

RETURN FROM RAMPA.—The following troops arrived to-day from Rampa, via Coconada, by the steamer Henzada, viz.:—200 rank and file of the 10th N.I., under command of Major Leggett, and headquarters and wing 39th N.I., Colonel Carnegie commanding. The band of the 10th N.I. met the returned troops at the beach and played them to their lines.—Madras Mail.

The Madras Government have received an urgent requisition for the immediate despatch of ten medical officers and hospital assistants to Afghanistan.

BOMBAY.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—At the annual meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, the Hon. J. N. Graham, the chairman, entered into an exhaustive review of the work performed by the chamber during the year. Referring to the budget errors, he expressed regret that the Government, when issuing the recent loan, did not take the public more into its confidence. Had it been known that this loan was probably only a forerunner of further requirements tenders might perhaps have been at low rates, but the moral gain which would have resulted from entire frankness in the matter would have been cheaply obtained. As to the cotton duties, he remarked it was an utter fallacy to suppose that the abolition of the duties on goods made from the lower counts of yarns merely meant a loss of revenue to the State and a gain to Lancashire manufacturers and East Indian merchants. The whole benefit had gone to the people of this country, who now received a cheaper, purer, and more durable cloth than they ever did before, and he trusted that no such retrograde step as the imposition of a uniform duty on all grey goods would be contemplated by Government, but that they would carry to its logical conclusion the wise policy of their predecessors. The chairman touched upon other topics in the course of his address, and, speaking of the mail arrangements, he strongly urged the necessity of some change being made in the time of departure from Bombay. The reports of the committee on the Factories Bill, of 1880; the Compulsory Registration of Partnerships; Committees of Arbitration; and the Trade-Marks Registration Bill were adopted after discussion. Previous to the close of the meeting Mr. G. A. Kittredge brought forward a motion condemnatory of the new Petroleum Bill. The motion stated that the bill in question must, if made law, seriously restrict, if it did not entirely check, the important and rapidly-growing kerosene oil trade, and requested that Government would postpone further consideration of the proposed bill until good cause had been shown for the necessity of restrictive measures. The motion was seconded by Mr. H. A. Richardson, and carried unanimously after some discussion, in the course of which several members of the chamber spoke strongly against the proposed legislation.—Times of India.

ACCIDENT TO THE NERBUDDA BRIDGE.—Early on Aug. 8 a telegram was received at the office of the B.B. and C.I. Railway, in Bombay, announcing that the Nerbudda river was at seventeen feet flood and was rising fast. Later telegrams announced that the river was still rising, and at six o'clock in the evening a further telegraphic communication stated that a pier and two spans of the bridge had been carried away, necessitating, of course, the stoppage of all traffic over the bridge. The water at this time was stated to be at twenty-seven feet flood, and still rising. Through communication was for some time interrupted, but arrangements have been completed for the transmission of passengers and goods across the river. As soon as the state of the river permits the injury to the bridge will be remedied and communication restored.—Times of India.

THE CHIEF OF SANGLEE.—The chief of Sanglee has been asked by the Bombay Government whether he felt himself able to administer his Government; and in reply he has stated that he felt himself quite able to do so now.—Deccan Herald.

THE MILL INDUSTRY.—From the accounts of the half-year ended in June, which are now being made up, it would appear that all well-managed mills have earned enough to declare very fair dividends to their shareholders. There has been a steady demand for yarn and cloth during the past six months, both up-country and in the foreign markets which India commands, the prices realised leaving a fair margin of profit to the spinners. Food has been cheap, and the natural wants for clothing, which during the previous famine years have remained unsatisfied, have found their vent in the purchase of goods on the poor ryot having come into possession of cash from the sale of his field produce. We believe we are correct in saying that most of the mills in Bombay are profitably employed, having light stocks of manufactured goods on hand, and being under several weeks' contract for supply of goods chiefly for foreign markets, especially China and Japan. Indeed, it might be said that China and Japan have stood Bombay in good stead during the whole of the recent crisis, or, perhaps it would be more correct to say, ever since the cotton industry of India assumed its present development. Since 1875-76 the exports of Indian manufactured goods have taken a rapid bound, as will be seen from the following shipments to China:—

1875-76 ...	4,651,270	20,44,139
1876-77 ...	6,334,719	30,39,140
1877-78 ...	13,762,133	60,66,155
1878-79 ...	18,154,601	75,89,914
1879-80 ...	22,567,277	97,05,148

It is true that the trade with China is sometimes overdone, and that during the critical period of mill industry in Bombay shipments of mill goods were somewhat forced on that country. But one thing is clear, that there is a demand for Bombay spinnings in China, and that, until the Chinese take themselves to spinning, Bombay spinners have a good outlet for their goods. One circumstance favourable to Bombay this year is that spinners have been able to clear goods at prices which, after defraying all charges incidental to manufacture, leave a fair working margin over the cost of the raw material. No doubt much of the return of confidence in the value of mill property is attributable to this cause. Again, most of the mills in liquidation, which were suddenly thrown on the market as a drug, were disposed of at prices which place their purchasers at a very decided advantage over other concerns in the proportion which the working results of such mills bear to their new purchase value as compared to the capital expended in the setting up of others. An instance of how the unduly depressed value of mill property in a time of crisis rapidly recovers in a fairly good year is just afforded us by the resale of the Mandvie Mills, which has recently taken place in Bombay. These Mandvie mills were purchased at an auction last year at Rs.3,20,000, and the purchaser has now been able to realise

Rs.5,20,000 for the same property. The sale affords, perhaps, the best indication of this return of confidence and the rise in price which results from it. But it is not merely in respect of the unduly depreciated concerns that the rebound has taken place. The shares of all well managed mills have risen in price from 20 to 40 per cent. in the course of the last six months, as may be seen at a glance from a comparison of present quotations of some of the leading mills with what they were in January last:—

	Jan. 1 prices. Rs. per share.	Present prices Rs. per share.
Manockjee Petit Mills ...	1,060	1,280
Oriental do. ...	540	650
Great Eastern do. ...	820	1,040
Morarji Gocaldas do. ...	840	1,170
Jivraj Balloo do. ...	650	950
Bombay United do. ...	730	955

This return of confidence will, however, be misplaced if the speculative feeling is allowed to override practical considerations. For hardly are things coming to a rallying point when we hear of schemes to form joint-stock companies in the case of concerns newly purchased or about to be purchased by paying premiums to their present holders or owners. We warn the public against being victimised once more by accepting shares in such new concerns.—Times of India.

THE PETROLEUM BILL.—The commercial community of Bombay have decided to ask the Government of India not to proceed with the Petroleum Bill now before the Viceregal Legislative Council.—Times of India.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, COLABA.—In a letter from the acting chaplain of the church of St. John, Colaba, he draws attention to the fact that that church was built as a memorial of the officers and men who fell in the Sind and Afghan wars of 1839-42. On the sides of the chancel, as many of our readers know, are coloured marble tablets with the names of the officers who fell, and it is now proposed that similar tablets be put up at the other end of the church recording the names of the officers who have fallen in the present Afghan war. The proposal is a commendable one, and singularly appropriate, for the heroes of 1839-42 and of 1878-80 encountered a similar fate at the hands of the same enemy. The Rev. Mr. Bagnell proposes, further, that the church be completed and beautified "in memory of those who have fallen, or may fall, in the present Afghan war."

THE ANGLO-INDIAN MILL.—The Times of India is informed that the result of the working of the Anglo-Indian mill for the half-year ending June 30 last is a profit at the rate of 21 per cent. per annum, and that it is the company's intention to pay a dividend for the half-year at the rate of 10 per cent. and carry the balance to a reserve fund.

FOREST PRODUCE.—With the sanction of the Government of India the Governor in Council has made certain rules for regulating the transit of timber and other forest produce in the Presidency of Bombay. The rules are published in extenso in the Government Gazette, and occupy two pages and a-half of that publication. Special rules have been framed for the province of Sind.—Ibid.

HER MAJESTY'S Government have confirmed the appointment of M. Drouin as acting consul for France at Bombay during the absence of M. Vauvert de Mean.

TESTIMONIAL TO COL. ANDERSON.—A subscription amounting to Rs.2,000 was recently subscribed by the native inhabitants of Kolhapore State for a testimonial to Col. Anderson, late political officer. It was decided to frame a full-length portrait of this officer, which has been just completed, and will be placed in one of the public buildings.—Ibid.

DESPATCH OF REINFORCEMENTS.—The 78th Highlanders embarked on August 10 for Karachi. The following are the numbers that embarked:—In the Huzara—Seventeen officers, one warrant officer, 579 rank and file, and 66 followers. In the Dalhousie—Eight officers, 242 rank and file, five hospital apprentices, and 43 followers. The following are the names of officers:—Lieut. Col. Warren, Lieut. Hatton, Lieut. Fraser, Lieut. M'Dougall, Lieut. Harvey, Lieut. Halkett, Lieut. Hume, Lieut. Davidson, Lieut. Barlow, Major Mackenzie, Capt. and Brevet Major Smith, Capt. Waugh, Sandeman, Hewson, Graham-Campbell, Stewart, Second Lieuts. Mackintosh, M'Intyre, F. B. Lund, Quartermaster P. Campbell, and Surg. Hatch, A.M.D. Surg. Major J. Land, A.M.D., formerly in medical charge of the 78th, has been transferred to the medical charge of the Royal Artillery and Lock Hospital at Kirkee, vice Surg. G. Rogers, A.M.D., attached to the 78th Highlanders. Lieut. Brown, 78th Highlanders, has been directed to return to Puna to take command of the depot of his regiment. Owing to the accident to the Nerbudda Bridge the 15th Native Infantry, had to come on to Bombay without their horses, and the departure of the regiment in the Chilka for Karachi was consequently delayed. The medical officer in charge of the 15th Native Infantry, Surg. Major Burrows, is a brother of Brigadier General Burrows.

LIEUT. THE HON. G. F. H. SOMERSET, Grenadier Guards, aide de camp to the Governor of Bombay, goes to the front as orderly officer to Major General Phayre.

THE LATE LIEUT. COL. L. G. BROWN.—Our special correspondent, now on his way to Kandahar, telegraphs to us from Sibi that Lieut. Col. L. G. Brown, second in command of the 8th

ACCORDING to a telegram received in Bombay from the Rev. A. G. Cane, the Church of England chaplain with General Burrows's column at Kushk-i-Nakhud, he was all right on August 3rd.

THE REV. P. H. LE FEUVRE, of Belgaum, has been appointed chaplain to the forces with General Phayre's column, and left for Karachi on Tuesday by the Dalhousie.—Times of India.
N.I., and formerly in charge of a detachment of that regiment in Bombay, has just met with his death from sunstroke. The regiment was lately sent to Sind, and, soon after the news of the Kushk-i-Nakhud disaster arrived, received orders to proceed to join the Reserve Division in the place of the 3rd N.I. There were few officers better known in the Presidency, and none more generally liked than the late Lieut. Col. Brown, whose death will be heard of with deep regret by his numerous friends in Bombay. His first commission is dated the 9th June, 1854, and he was admitted into the Staff Corps in the autumn of 1866. He was previously attached to the 5th Native Infantry and served with that regiment in China in 1862. An official record of Col. Brown's services mentions that he took part in the operations against the Taepings near Shanghai; that he was present at the attack and capture of the entrenched camp at Wang-Kaza, 4th April, 1862, and of the town of Tseer-poo, 17th April; at Nazeau, 27th and 29th April, at the storming of the town of Tsing-poo, 12th May; and at the repulse of the rebel army near Nazeau, 25th May, 1862. Much sympathy will be felt for his relatives in their bereavement. One of his brothers is Capt. C. E. Brown, commanding 5-8 Mountain Battery, now on its way to the front, and another brother is Major W. T. Brown, superintendent of the police in the Tanna district.—Times of India.

THE ATTACK BY ARABS ON THE "KHALIFAH," EUPHRATES STEAMER.

THE following account of this piratical attack has been furnished by the Bagdad agent of the company:—The vessel left Busreh for Bagdad at about eleven o'clock on the night of July 14, with H.M.'s Indian mails, a light general cargo, and about 100 passengers. At about eight o'clock on the following morning in the reach called Serraf, about six miles below Ezra's Tomb, a party of Arabs, fifty or sixty in number, suddenly sprang up from among the reeds on the port bank of the river and opened a brisk fire upon the ship, which was kept up for forty minutes. The captain was among the first wounded, a bullet passed through his left arm, entered his side, and came out under the shoulder blade. Upon seeing this the crew deserted the wheel, the helm at the time being hard over to starboard coming round a very sharp bend. The captain, badly wounded, was unable by himself to shift the helm, so that the vessel must have gone into the bank, where the Arabs were rushing into the water ready to board, but that the engines were disconnected and the engineers remained at their post, and the captain was able to keep the ship on the opposite bank by stopping and reversing the starboard engine. The pilot, who was asleep below, afterwards crawled on deck to the assistance of the captain, when the helm was put amidships and the vessel steamed ahead too fast for the Arabs to keep with her. One passenger and a quartermaster were killed, and the chief engineer wounded, but not seriously. The captain, considering the dangerous nature of the wounds, is, we are glad to say, doing as well as can be expected. A Turkish steamer passed up an hour after the above occurrence without being molested, and another passed down the next day, also without being fired upon. The Arabs were evidently supplied with something better than their usual smooth-bore guns, for many of the bullets passed through the cabins and out on the other side, and one passed through two thicknesses of sheet iron. Since writing the above we learn by telegraph from Busreh that the steamer Blosse Lynch, when passing the above place, found the Arabs all ready to attack her also, but she was well protected with pressed bales of wool round her upper deck, and, having taken a guard of twenty-five soldiers on board, she was allowed to pass, the Arabs probably not wishing to waste their ammunition.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880.

THE COST OF ECONOMY.

THE Viceroy on June 27 told the Secretary of State by telegraph—"I propose to instruct Primrose, if Ayub reaches Furrak, to advance towards Girishk with sufficient force to prevent the passage of the Helmund. This would necessitate moving up reinforcements from Phayre's reserve. No troops would be moved until necessity actually arose." In the first place, this passage shows that the Viceroy and his advisers were under the delusion that any force General Primrose could spare from Kandahar would suffice to defend the line of the Helmund; and, next, that no troops from Phayre's reserve division were to be moved up to Kandahar to enable Primrose to strengthen Burrows, except in case of actual necessity. But the Viceroy or his military advisers might surely have known that in June or July the Helmund might be crossed at many places, and at two or three of them at least as readily as at Girishk. If this were the case it was quite clear that Burrows could not hold his own with such force as he had, and equally clear that when Ayub was once over the Helmund, with the "large force" reported on June 27 as under his orders by our Minister at Teheran, and detailed by the Resident at Kandahar on July 2 as consisting of 2,500 horse, ten regiments of infantry, and six batteries of artillery, Primrose was too weak to give his brigadier any support from Kandahar. Here would appear to have been a case of actual necessity for the movement of reinforcements from Phayre's reserve. But no preparation had been made for such a movement, although the railway was then working to Sibi, and no movement was made. Then came the fatal day of Maiwand, when Burrows was enticed away from the small position on which he had fallen back, and which closed two of the roads to Kandahar. This, and nothing until this, constituted the actual necessity, and then preparations were made for action. But even then, so unwilling had the Government been to spend a penny even in the most necessary preparation, more than a month had to elapse before Phayre could move a foot, and then it came about that the reserve, which was nominally under orders to move on June 27, did not move until August 27, and even then would not probably have been a match for Ayub's army but for the relieving march of Sir F. Roberts's column, which, and not General Phayre's troops, was the real reserve of Kandahar. Those who know General Phayre are not likely to believe that he would delay a moment if he had been allowed to expend the necessary amount in furnishing himself with a transport train. If he had possessed one, and moved across the Khojak Pass, even by July 15, he would have been at Kandahar in time to allow Primrose or Brooke to give Burrows some, and perhaps adequate, support before the fight of the 27th. But the lesson of the papers issued yesterday is the exceeding expensiveness of hand-to-mouth economy in military matters, especially in India. It is a lesson we have had ample opportunity of learning before, and one which we fear the authorities have not taken to heart even now.

Last week the Examiner announced its belief that the Government had resolved to retire from Kandahar and take up once more the 1878 frontier in the south of Afghanistan. We deeply regret to say that, although Lord Hartington told a deputation yesterday the question was not absolutely decided, we can draw no other conclusion from his arguments than that our contemporary was very well informed. If the Government really has come to this decision of course nothing that can be said, now that Parliament has virtually separated, will avail to alter its course. But we will at least venture to hope that the Durani capital will not be given up just yet. There need be no hurry about a step so important. The Secretary of State admits that most of the military advisers of the Government, and we may add those of the highest eminence, are opposed to the abandonment of Kandahar, and, although he intimated that others held a different opinion, he did not attempt to conceal that, considering it as a strategical position, the overwhelming weight of authority is on the side of the retention of Kandahar, not necessarily under our own rule, nor, after a while, necessarily with a large force, but in such wise that we should be able in a few days to throw a considerable corps into the city in case of any hostile movements from the Furrak or the Kohistan direction. Then, again, we gather from Lord Hartington's statement that Abdul Rahman is to have both Cabul and Herat; and, if this be so, it would be well, considering his antecedents, that we should retain Kandahar for some time as a gage of his good conduct to ourselves and his friendliness to our interests. To all the strong and, to our mind, overwhelming reasons for holding Kandahar in the hollow of our hand, there is to be added this one, that there can be no need to give it up till Parliament again meets. Indeed, to retire from it for another six months, after what has occurred, will be interpreted all over Asia, and especially in India, as a confession that we cannot keep it if we would.

We must now turn to the news of the day—Roberts's great victory over Ayub's army in the entrenched position at Mazra and Kotal-i-Babi Wali. A map issued yesterday by the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster General's Department, on the scale of an inch to the mile, enables us to trace the probable movements of the brilliant young general who took over the command from General Primrose only on Tuesday last, and who lost no time in reconnoitring and attacking the entrenchments of the Herati and Cabuli troops, apparently on Thursday. The kotal at which General Nott, on January 12, 1842, defeated Atta Khan has got one fatal fault as a position—it can be turned by following the canals which lead from the Agrhandab, round by Gundigan, to Kandahar. It can also be turned; to the north east by the Kotal-i-Muroha, just north of the gold mines, near which General Brooke was shot at just before the fight at Maiwand. But it is doubtful whether this kotal was taken by our troops, as we are told the defeated enemy made away up the Arghandab, and, if we had crossed the Muroha Kotal, their retreat would have been cut off. We will not wait to-day to speculate on the sequence of events in Northern Afghanistan if any considerable number of Ayub's Cabulis should escape to their native place. They may or may not declare for the Ameer, but at any rate they may be expected to add a new element of disturbance to the already excited condition of the capital. However, Ayub's power is clearly broken. He is cut off from Herat, and he has lost twenty-seven out of thirty-six guns, with which he started from Furrab, or the thirty-five with which he fought at Kushk-i-Nakhud. Such a success, following on such a march, confirms General Roberts in that reputation as an able leader which has been sometimes deemed to be imperilled by his dash and daring. And the achievement is even more notable than that of General Nott. It is true Roberts had a greater proportion of troops, but then Nott had the advantage that Akbar Khan left his position to meet him in the open, near the British cantonments. So far as can be judged from the telegram from General Roberts, his troops must have carried the entrenchments or they could hardly have secured such a number of guns, almost all the heavy pieces that Ayub possessed. We may therefore anticipate that if the Afghans made any considerable stand our loss will be very heavy. But, however great it may prove, Kushk-i-Nakhud is avenged; and the pretensions of one of the most dangerous disturbers of Afghanistan, who had his nephew, Yakob's heir apparent, in his camp, have been annihilated. For such a success it is worth paying a good price, which need not have been so heavy in men if we had guarded against it by a proper expenditure upon transport and material.

THE EVACUATION OF CABUL.

THE following general order was issued by General Sir Donald Stewart :—"As the force now employed in Northern Afghanistan is about to be broken up, the Lieutenant General Commanding takes this opportunity of thanking Generals Roberts, Ross, Hills, and the officers of all departments, civil and military, for the cordial support they have given him during the period of his command. The discipline and conduct of the soldiers, European and native, who have served in the various field forces throughout Afghanistan have, from first to last, been beyond praise; and it is with pride that the Lieutenant General here records the fact that during the two years he has been in the field only two cases have come to his notice in which complaints had been made by the people of the country against the men of the force. The Lieutenant General desires to give his special thanks to General Bright and the troops employed on the line of communications, as on their exertions the comfort and the efficiency of the troops at the front has been largely dependent. General Bright and his officers and men may be satisfied that their valuable services are fully appreciated by Government and their comrades at Cabul. Though the return to India of that part of the force detailed for service in the direction of Kandahar may be somewhat delayed, the Lieutenant General feels sure that he speaks with the voice of the army when he assures Sir Frederick Roberts and the column under his command that they carry with them the warmest sympathy and good wishes."

The following is an extract from general orders by his Excellency the Commander in Chief:—"With reference to the Government General Order, No. 597, of the 7th inst., the undermentioned medical officers are directed to proceed forthwith to join the corps to which they may be posted under instructions which will be communicated to them by the Surgeon General her Majesty's Forces. They will travel expeditiously at the public expense by dak, rail, and steamer (as may be necessary) under Clause I (d) Paragraph 188 Part I and Clause 6 paragraph 159 Part 2 of the Transport regulations:—Surg. Major R. H. Batty, Surgeon Major J. Davidson, and Surgs. C. W. MacKury, J. W. Clarkson, O. H. Channer, C. Monks, W. K. Hatch, K. S. Nariman, P. J. Damania, and A. S. Faulkner.—Adjutant General's-office, Headquarters, Puna, August, 1880."

SIR F. ROBERTS'S FORCE.—The following is the order which Sir F. Roberts issued to the troops at Cabul on Saturday:—"It has been decided by the Government of India that a force shall proceed with all possible despatch from Cabul towards Khelat-i-Ghilzai and Kandahar for the relief of the British garrison in those places, now threatened by a large army under the leadership of Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan. Sir Frederick Roberts feels sure that the troops under his command for this important duty will cheerfully respond to the call made upon them, notwithstanding the privations and hardships insuperable from a long march through a hostile country. The Lieutenant General wishes to impress on both officers and men the necessity of preserving the same strict discipline which has been so successful and uniformly maintained since the commencement of the war, and to treat all the people who may be well disposed towards the British with justice and forbearance. Sir Frederick Roberts looks confidently forward to the successful accomplishment of the object of the expedition, convinced as he is that all ranks are animated with the proud feeling that to them is entrusted the duty and privilege of relieving their fellow-soldiers and restoring the prestige of the British arms."

REGIMENTAL ORDERS BY LIEUT. COL. COMMANDANT W. S. HEWETT, COMMANDING B.V.R. CORPS.—Sunday, August 8. The commandant has much pleasure in publishing for the information of the officers and members of the corps the following reply from Government to the offer recently made by him tendering the services of the regiment for garrison or any other duty the Bombay Government might detail them for:—Military Department, No. 83-P., Puna, August 7. Letter from the commandant, Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, No. G., August 5:—"In consequence of the number of European troops which are on field service at present, and the fact that more are under orders for Afghanistan, I have the honour respectfully to tender the services of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps for garrison or any other duty in Bombay which Government may be pleased to detail them for. This offer, I would add, comes alike from myself as from all the senior officers present with the corps. Awaiting reply." Resolution.—His Excellency the Governor in Council, while fully appreciating the loyalty and ready offer of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps to undertake "garrison or any other duty in Bombay, which Government may be pleased to detail them for," feels that the sacrifices which such an offer involves could only be accepted in the face of a very pressing emergency. Such necessity has not arisen. The offer must therefore be declined for the present; but the thanks of Government are due, and are hereby tendered, to the commandant, the officers and members of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, for their very soldier-like readiness, upon which Government confidently rely.—M. W. WILLOUGHBY, Colonel, Acting Secretary to Government. To the Commandant, Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General. By order, W. M. TENNENT, Captain and Acting Adjutant, B.V.R.C.

HOME NEWS.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will and codicil of Sir Cecil Beadon, K.C.S.I., late of 27, Clement's-lane, and of the Corner Latton, Wilts, who died on the 18th ult., were proved on the 13th, inst. by Dame Agnes Beadon, the widow and sole executrix, the personal estate being sworn under £16,000. The testator leaves all his real and personal estate to his wife absolutely, and he appoints his son, Henry Sneyd Beadon, guardian of his infant children.

DISASTERS AT SEA.—A letter from Aden, dated August 14, contains the following notice of the reported loss of the steamship Jeddah, which was afterwards, as already announced, brought safely into port:—"The steamship Scindia, which arrived on the 10th ult. from Akyab, brought the master and twenty-one of the crew of the steamship Jeddah, of Singapore, bound to Jeddah with pilgrims. It seems that the engines of the Jeddah broke down off Ras Hafoon in consequence of the boilers shifting from their seats. All sail was made on the ship, which began to leak badly through the supply pipes in the bottom. Between Socotra and Guardafui the master and officers determined to abandon the vessel, which they did in the middle of the night. The pilgrims did their utmost to prevent the crew leaving, and tried to smash the boat. In the row which ensued several of the crew were drowned. About six hours after leaving the ship the Scindia sighted the boat and brought the crew to Aden, when it was reported that the Feddah had foundered with all on board, only one boat getting away safely, while the vessel was going down. Twenty-four hours after the steamship Antenor towed in the Feddah with all on board safe. It appears she was found about thirty miles inside the Gulf Aden, going at three to four knots, and as land was in sight the pilgrims were trying to beach her under the cliffs near Ras Felook. A boat from the Antenor boarded her, and found that the only European on board was the second engineer, and that not a soul understood anything about navigation, or, in fact, could steer. The Antenor took charge and passed two lines on board, the pilgrims turned to and pumped and baled, and eventually she was got into port all right. The Feddah is now in the hands of the authorities, who have landed all the passengers and are holding an inquiry into the matter, which has naturally caused a good deal of excitement here, and is the subject of much discussion."

TESTIMONIAL TO RIGHT HON. W. P. ADAM.—On Tuesday Sir Charles Forster and Lieut. Col. Carington, on behalf of the Adam Testimonial Committee, met Mr. Adam, the First Commissioner of Works, in one of the committee rooms of the House of Commons, for the purpose of presenting the testimonial which has been subscribed for by members of both Houses and other political friends. Sir C. Forster said he regretted that the lateness of the session made a more formal presentation almost impossible, but on behalf of the subscribers he had great pleasure in giving expression to the strong opinion entertained by them as to the value of Mr. Adam's services, with their sincerest wishes that success and happiness might attend him. The testimonial consists of portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Adam, with presentation plate, on which was the following inscription:—"Presented to the Right Hon. William Patrick Adam, of Blair Adam, M.P. for the united counties of Kinross and Clackmannan, by Liberal members of both Houses of Parliament, and other political friends, to mark the high appreciation of his meritorious services to the Liberal party from 1865 to 1880, especially at and previous to the General Election of 1880, when at the darkest hour of their fortunes he thought only of organising victory." Mr. Adam, in reply, said it was with no ordinary feelings of gratification that he accepted the testimonial offered him on behalf of the Liberal party. As the lateness of the session made a more formal presentation impossible, he should consult their wishes by thanking them in a few words only. In adversity and prosperity he had for many years endeavoured to serve the Liberal cause, and to have seen that cause triumphant and the victory secure would have been to him a full and sufficient reward. It had pleased his friends, however, to bestow on him a distinguished mark of their approbation such as he never hoped. Whatever might be his future course in life he should regard that day with the greatest pride; and he should ever esteem it a duty and an honour to hand down to those who came after him so marked a testimonial of the kindness, cordiality, and goodwill of his friends.

In 1842 he entered the Indian Army as Cornet in the 3rd Regiment of Bengal Light Cavalry. He acted as Aide-de-camp to Lord Gough in the Sutlej campaign, and served under General Beatson in Bulgaria in 1854 when organising the Turkish cavalry. He was secretary to the Earl of Elgin's special mission in China in 1857 and 1860; and he also acted as private secretary to the Home Secretary, Sir George Grey, from 1861 to 1863, when he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Isle of Man. He was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath (Civil Division) in 1861. Sir Henry Loch, who is Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the 2nd Cheshire Militia, married in 1862 Elizabeth, youngest daughter of the late Hon. Edward Ernest Villiers, and niece of the late Earl of Clarendon.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, AUGUST 27.

THE AFGHAN FRONTIER.

Sir H. TYLER asked the Secretary of State for India whether her Majesty's Government had decided on the question of the frontier to be maintained between India and Afghanistan; and, if so, whether he would state to the House the proposed line of that frontier. He also asked whether there was any truth in the telegram in the papers that General Stewart had been ordered to arrest his retreat.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that early in June he gave an answer to a question on this subject, and he then stated that the Treaty of Gandamak must be taken to cease to exist. The question was now under the consideration of the Viceroy and Council, and he was not able to state the posts to be occupied on the frontier. As to the telegram referred to by the hon. member, he begged to say that he had received a reply to one which he had forwarded yesterday, and no reference was made to the subject mentioned in the newspapers.

Sir H. TYLER asked whether the noble marquis would give any information which he might receive to the House with respect to the number of rifles left in Afghanistan by General Stewart.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON assented.

ASIATIC TURKEY.

Sir H. TYLER asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether, having regard to the important effects which railway construction might be expected to produce in Asiatic Turkey in promoting the prosperity of the inhabitants, in opening out fresh regions to British commerce, and in improving the means of communication between Europe and Asia, her Majesty's Government proposed to take any steps having for their object the promotion of railway enterprise in that country.

Sir C. DILKE said her Majesty's Government had no intention of taking any steps at present for the promotion of railway enterprise in Asiatic Turkey, but her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople had been in the habit of giving assistance consistent with his official position on behalf of any bonâ fide scheme for that purpose in which British subjects may be interested, and which had a fair chance of being carried out.

TURKISH NEWSPAPERS IN INDIA.

In reply to Mr. A. M'Arthur, Sir C. DILKE said: Information was received from Sir H. Layard before he left Constantinople of the publication of a newspaper called the Peih-ul-Islam, intended for circulation among the Mussulmans in India and containing articles of a nature calculated to influence them against British rule. As this newspaper was printed at the Imperial printing-office at Constantinople, and was stated to be subsidised by persons connected with the Turkish Government, her Majesty's Ambassador was instructed to take such steps with regard to it as he might think advisable. Before this instruction reached him, however, his Excellency had been in communication with the Turkish Prime Minister on the subject, and on July 11 her Majesty's Government were informed that the subsidy had been stopped and that the paper would not appear again.

OPIUM.

Sir WILFRID LAWSON asked the Secretary of State for India whether the important despatches on the Chefoo Convention, which the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was expecting when he received the deputation from the Anti-Opium Society on June 14, had been yet received; and, if so, whether he was able to state their purport.

Sir C. DILKE regretted that the despatches referred to by the hon. baronet had not been received, but on May 6 Sir T. Wade telegraphed that the report in question would be forwarded by the French mail leaving Shanghai on the 10th of that month. As the despatches had not reached the Foreign-office at the end of July Sir T. Wade was instructed to report when they had been forwarded, and he replied on the 11th inst. that the "report was not completed."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, AUGUST 30.

AFGHANISTAN.

Sir H. WOLFF asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to a letter published in the Times of August 28, from Major Leach, V.C., an officer on General Burrows's staff, dated Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 18, in which appeared the following passages:—"You will have seen by the telegrams that our expedition to Girishk has ended so far in a way which my previous letters may have led you to a certain extent to anticipate—an action with the mutinous troops of our ally and nominee, Shere Ali, the Wali of Kandahar. On the 5th, as Ayub Khan's advance from Herat had passed beyond the phase of 'idle rumour,' and was beginning to cause a stir among the numerous malcontents at Kandahar, a brigade under General Burrows . . . moved on Girishk. Our instructions were to support the Wali's troops should Ayub Khan attempt to force them, to prevent his crossing the Helmund, and lastly to confine our operations strictly to the defensive, and on no account to cross the river. These instructions assumed that the Helmund at Girishk was fordable at one or two points only; that the Wali's troops could be relied upon to give us timely information of any such crossing being contemplated, and that supplies would be plentiful. As I have hinted in previous letters, the supposition as to the Wali's troops was, under any circumstances, a sanguine one, as sinister reports as to their disaffected state had been only too prevalent for some weeks past. . . . To prevent a crossing it was necessary that we should be able to patrol efficiently a considerable distance both above and below our point of observation at Girishk and be independent for information of our 'friend' the Wali. For supplies we had to depend entirely upon his co-operation. Our force was strong enough assuming that all went well, but weak for vigorous and energetic action, and sadly crippled by the large quantity of baggage animals and followers." And whether any explanation had been received from the Viceroy, and could be laid upon the table, of the reasons which induced the Government of India to order the advance of General Burrows in co-operation with allies known to be of doubtful fidelity, and to leave Kandahar with an inadequate garrison at a time when the nearest reinforcements could not be brought up without a month's previous preparation; or, if no such explanation was then in the hands of the Government, whether the India-office would instruct the Viceroy to furnish it by telegraph before the discussion of the Appropriation Bill.

Mr. PUGH asked whether the information upon which General Burrows's advance was ordered was of a trustworthy character, and whether the Secretary of State would cause inquiries to be made on the subject.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that the hon. member for Portsmouth had already asked the question which he had just asked in a great variety of forms. The object of the question seemed to be to place the responsibility of the disaster which had occurred to our forces upon the Government of India. He could only give the answer which he had previously given—that the order had been given, after consultation with General Stewart, on the advice of the Commander in Chief. He was not at present in a position to give the reasons which induced the Government of India to adopt the course which they thought most advisable. He did not see how the view of the hon. member was strengthened by the long extracts which he had introduced into his question. He did not think it possible to form a correct opinion as to how far the responsibility was to be divided between the Government of India and those who were in command on the spot until fuller information had been received. He was quite willing to admit that responsibility did fall upon the Government of India. But he must again remark, as he had done before, that the Government of Lord Ripon was not responsible for the amount of force at Kandahar. It was a question for consideration in what way that force could best be employed in view of the advance of Ayub Khan. No doubt it was open to any one to criticise after the event; but what would have been the opinion of this country and of India if a considerable force had been left at Kandahar while Ayub Khan overran the country? Some despatches as to the mutiny had been received by the last mail, and he had given directions that all information should be laid immediately on the table. In reply to the hon. member for Cardiganshire, he had already stated that the amount of Ayub Khan's force was approximately telegraphed from Teheran. It appeared, however, that General Burrows was imperfectly informed of the particulars to which the question related. No doubt inquiry would be made as to where the responsibility rested. He then read to the House a telegram received from General Roberts.

Sir GEORGE BALFOUR asked the Secretary of State for India if the despatch to India, dated the 18th of October, 1878, could now be produced, with the despatches and papers connected therewith.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the returns called for by the despatch of the 18th of October, 1878, were not yet completed. There had been great delay in their transmission from India. The attention of the Government had been again drawn to the subject on the 22nd of July. The returns had proved extremely troublesome to prepare.

EAST INDIA (SAILING VESSELS, &c.).

Mr. A. M. SULLIVAN moved for a return of the names of sailing vessels and steamers loaded to the extent of, say, not less than about two-thirds of the cargo carried for account of the East India Council either with coals, railway materials, or stores, for the last twelve months; with amount or quantity shipped in each such vessel or steamer so loaded with not less than about two-thirds of her cargo for the said Council; particularising those which subsequently put into port damaged, and stating alleged cause of damage, and those totally lost; also the total amount shipped for the said Council within the same period of twelve months.—Agreed to.

MILITARY STORES IN AFGHANISTAN.

Sir H. TYLER asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would furnish the House with a complete return of all guns, rifles, ammunition, and military stores of all descriptions which have been handed over to the Ameer of Afghanistan or left behind by Sir Donald Stewart on his withdrawal from that country.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: As regards guns, the following are the figures given in the Viceroy's telegram of the 22nd inst.:—Four 18-pounder smooth bores, two 8-inch howitzers, twelve 9-pounder breechloaders, twenty-two 7-pound and 4-pound mountain guns, Afghan make. As to stores we have no information.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY, AUGUST 31.

AFGHANISTAN.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH asked the noble earl the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if any further information had been received with respect to the march of General Roberts, and if any list of officers killed—more especially those of the 66th (Berkshire) Regiment—was in the possession of her Majesty's Government.

Earl GRANVILLE was not in a position to give any fresh information to the House on the subject of the march of General Roberts, and was sorry to say no nominal list of the officers killed had as yet been received. Her Majesty's Government had requested the Government of India to send such a list with as little delay as possible.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, AUGUST 31.

THE SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.

In answer to a question from Mr. Bradlaugh,

Lord F. CAVENDISH said: The Suez Canal shares do not stand in any names, being payable to bearer. A director qualifies by the actual deposit at the offices of the company of 100 shares, which cannot be withdrawn except upon production of the document which he receives in return. In the case of the British directors, these documents were handed over to, and are now in the possession of, the Treasury, which department, therefore, has absolute hold over the shares, receives the dividends thereon, and, in the event of a change in the directors, could withdraw the 100 shares in order to qualify the new director. It was originally the intention of the Treasury that, in addition to the declaration of trust, a bond with sureties should be executed by each director; but, in the circumstances already mentioned, it was obviously unnecessary. The Suez Canal, not being situated in France, the shares are not subject to the law of France, in which country the company is registered as a foreign company. The 176,602 shares being payable to bearer have been deposited in the Bank of England, and under the Act 39 and 40 Vic., cap. 67, are vested in the Treasury on behalf of her Majesty the Queen, her heirs, and successors in trust for public purposes. In the event, therefore, of the demise of the Sovereign, these shares would pass to her heirs and successors in trust for public purposes.

GENERAL ROBERTS.

Mr. ARNOLD asked the Secretary for India whether any further information had been received as to the advance of General Roberts.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON had received several telegrams which were published in the newspapers. He had received no intelligence that morning.

THE PORTE AND INDIA.

In reply to Sir G. Campbell, Sir C. DILKE said his attention had been called to a letter published in the Times from Musurus Bey. No doubt the letter was written by the Chargé d'Affaires on orders from Constantinople without reference to what had taken place in Parliament. He could only say that he had nothing to take away from the answer he had previously given.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY, SEPT. 2.

OFFICERS KILLED IN AFGHANISTAN.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH asked whether her Majesty's Government had yet received an accurate list of the officers killed in the recent actions in Afghanistan.

Viscount ENFIELD replied that the information asked for had not yet been received by her Majesty's Government.

PERAK EXPEDITION.

In answer to Mr. Serjeant Simon, Mr. CHILDERS said that the distribution of the Perak medal had already commenced, and would be carried out as rapidly as the names could be engraved on the medals.

CIVIL TREASURIES IN INDIA.

Mr. PUGH asked whether the various receipts, disbursements, and cash balances from the civil treasuries in India to the Military Department were forwarded monthly to the Financial Department at Calcutta, and whether such returns, including the January return, were received previously to the publication of the Budget on Feb. 24 last.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said, that returns showing the total receipts and disbursements and the cash balances at the various civil treasuries in India, including the net disbursements to the Military Department, were duly forwarded every month to the controller general in Calcutta. Such returns usually reach the controller general within six weeks of the termination of the month to which they relate. The January return was received on March 10. Separate returns of the actual cash balances held in the treasuries on the last day of each month were rendered to the controller general and to the financial secretary, and usually reached them within four weeks of the date to which the returns referred. When especially called for, as at a time when the Budget is in preparation, they had always been rendered within a fortnight, and this had recently become the regular practice.

ADVANCE OF GENERAL BURROWS.

Sir H. WOLFF asked the Secretary for India if he could explain the delay of the Indian Government in sending a report of the reasons which induced the Viceroy in Council to order General Burrows's advance, the order having been given on the 1st of July, and whether the report and the text of the order would be presented to Parliament as soon as they should be received.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said, that the only information he had received as to the reasons which induced the Viceroy in Council to order the advance was contained in a telegram which was included in the papers laid on the table, which would be in the hands of members to-morrow. The telegram, dated June 27, was:—"Ayub Khan is marching on Kandahar with a large force. I think you should leave the Wali to defend himself beyond the Helmund, but it seems to me that it would be inconsistent with the security of our military position at Kandahar to allow Ayub's hostile force to cross that river. We propose, therefore, that you should give instructions for an advance, and that would necessitate the moving up of reinforcements from General Phayre." He had not received the actual text of the orders sent in accordance with the telegram, nor had he any despatch on the subject. But he had confidentially from the Viceroy particulars which he could not lay upon the table, but no details such as were desired by the hon. member. Those confidential communications, however, amply proved that the measures taken when the advance of Ayub Khan was known were carefully considered by the Government of India and their military advisers. The insufficiency of General Primrose's force was also considered. He had telegraphed to India for further information.

Sir H. WOLFF asked whether the Viceroy consulted General Primrose as to the advance.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said it would be more convenient to wait till the papers should be distributed.

GENERAL BURROWS'S ADVANCE.

On the second reading of the Appropriation Bill, Sir H. WOLFF called attention to the extraordinary conduct of the Government in concealing information as to the advance of General Burrows from Kandahar. The noble marquis had said that he was not in a position to inform the House as to the reasons which induced the extraordinary advance of General Burrows on the Helmund. The noble lord had referred to confidential communications. He maintained that if there were such communications he had no right to refer to them. The noble lord had said that the advance of General Burrows was ordered by the Viceroy on the advice of Colonel St. John, the political agent. It appeared that on June 27 the noble lord received a despatch from Lord Ripon, and that was little more than a fortnight after Lord Ripon had been sworn in. Why had the noble lord kept that despatch from the House? The hon. baronet then referred to accounts in the newspapers, from which it appeared that accurate information as to the number of Ayub's forces had reached this country. He also referred to the question he had asked on Tuesday, and the extract he had read from Major Leach's letter to the Times. The sending of those 2,400 troops to the Helmund was sending them to certain slaughter, as they were going to meet 20,000 of the enemy. The noble lord had always tried to throw discredit on the late Government. If the late Government were responsible for what had previously been done in Afghanistan, the present Government were responsible for the advance on the Helmund, and the question of the responsibility of that advance the noble lord had always avoided. Why had the Viceroy consulted Colonel St. John, political agent, instead of General Primrose? If Colonel St. John, with the knowledge which he must and ought to have possessed, advised that advance—as to which he felt some doubt—then no punishment could be too severe to inflict upon him. The noble lord said that General Phayre's reserves were ordered up, but they had not yet arrived, and coming from Quetta and Chaman they could not possibly have arrived in time to anticipate a battle between General Burrows and Ayub Khan. He contended, therefore, that General Burrows's troops were really sent forth to be slaughtered. The House had a right to know by whose orders, and with what object, General Burrows was detached from the garrison at Kandahar, and whether he and General Primrose were consulted by the Viceroy when the orders were given from Simla, or whether the troops were moved simply on the responsibility of the political agent.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that as to the advance of Gen. Burrows, the hon. member accused him of having concealed information from the House; but he must be perfectly well aware that a number of telegrams were daily received from India and from foreign Governments that could not be communicated to the House. With regard to the telegram read that day, such information as was contained in it was communicated to the House some time ago. The hon. member said that he had endeavoured to throw the responsibility of the disaster on the late Government, but he had endeavoured specially to avoid giving grounds for that imputation, and had only desired that injustice might not be done to Lord Ripon and his advisers. He pointed out, however, that the course that the Viceroy found necessary at Kandahar was decided on not by himself, but by the late Government, who were naturally responsible for the strength of the force judged by them to be adequate for the defence of Kandahar. The hon. member said that the advance of Ayub Khan had long been expected, and yet neither he nor the late Government ever thought it necessary to strengthen the garrison of that city. When authentic news arrived of the advance of Ayub the Government had to decide what action was necessary on our part. He denied that they ought to have known the extra strength of Ayub's army, and could not think that all of those who arrived at Kandahar left Herat in company. As had been proved by the evidence, and as the Government were aware, the reserve could reach Kandahar without very considerable delay. All that could be done by the Government was to decide in what way that force could be used for the purpose of securing the safety of Cabul and preventing the excitement and agitation throughout the country. What could the Government do but take the advice of their responsible military advisers? They took counsel, and came to the conclusion that has been unquestioned by military men—that the best thing they could do was to advance a brigade to the Helmund, so as to prevent its possession by Ayoub. The hon. member said that the Government were aware of the mutinous temper of the Wali's soldiers, but he (the Marquis of Hartington) did not know from what quarter they derived their information. It was very easy to criticise after the event, and to say that General Burrows's force was insufficient to cope with Ayub Khan. The House, however, would remember that if British forces, whether composed of British or of native Indian troops, were never to engage the enemy except we had an undoubted advantage in position or in strength we could not hope to preserve our military reputation. There was not a single officer in India who doubted the sufficiency of the force sent forward under General Burrows to cope with that of Ayub Khan. The hon. member sneers for having taken the advice of General Stewart with regard to military affairs in India. It must, however, be borne in mind that General Stewart was the man who was the most intimately acquainted with the military and civil position of Kandahar, and there was no one else capable of giving advice on the subject. The hon. member would have done better had he waited until he had seen the papers laid upon the table, which would be in the hands of members to-morrow. He trusted that the House at all events would not be disposed to endorse the censure which the hon. member had passed upon them until all the papers which would show the grounds upon which the Government of India have acted in this matter were in their hands. Above all, he was sure that the House would be the last to condemn the action of the Government taken on the best advice and after due deliberation merely on the ground that that action had not in all respects been successful. What would have been said if a considerable British force had been kept cooped up in Kandahar while Ayub Khan was driving before him the troops of our friend the Wali and was endangering our line of communications with that city? Had the Governor General of India or General Primrose adopted that course they would have been open to the just reproach that they were doing that which was unworthy of the honour of the British army. Although the Government deeply regretted and deplored the unfortunate loss of life that had occurred, yet he was certain from what they all knew as regards the courage and conduct of the British army that nothing had occurred which could injuriously affect the character of that army in India.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, SEPT. 3.

KANDAHAR.

Lord WAVENEY rose to move that an humble address be presented to her Majesty, praying that negotiations be commenced in order to constitute Kandahar, with the dependent territory, into a free city and emporium of commerce under British administration and Government. Judging from the telegram they had heard read, the disaster we deplored had been repaired, and the enemy was either now in retreat back to the place from which he started or he might turn northward and add another to the perturbing forces there. He believed the events of this war were looked to by the people chiefly as a means of consolidating the Empire. What was our position at the present moment? We thought we should have settled the question in one campaign; but a second and a third campaign had been necessary, and it was impossible, according to the policy adopted, to consolidate our rule. Our policy had been to have a strong, a friendly, and a united Afghanistan to serve as a bulwark against the confusions and intrigues of Western Asia. The question was whether some more fixed and better system could not be discovered—whether some further security could not be obtained in return for the thousands of lives that had been lost and the millions of money expended owing to the disturbances among the hill tribes of Afghanistan. He believed that by returning to the old paths of British statesmen and consolidating our resources India would be rendered secure for the future. We should take the opportunity of inaugurating a new and beneficent system external to our present territory, endeavouring to develop the national industry under favourable circumstances, and taking care that it was exercised under conditions which should secure the honour and dignity of the Empire. We found ourselves now a second time in secure possession of Kandahar. After all the sacrifices we had incurred, and after the gratuitous and wanton attack which had been made upon ourselves, we should be justified by the law of arms and of empire in fixing our standard on the fortress of Kandahar. The Wali would have been a wanderer on the face of the earth but for the British strength which supported him. Our blood has been poured out like water, and not a rupee had reverted to the Imperial Treasury. Surely it was time in the interest of humanity to discharge the duty we owed to India, and to see once for all that our Indian Empire was made secure. The opinion of all military men who knew the country well was that, whatever might become of Herat, Kandahar could be retained in the British power. He was told it was capable of substantial defence at a very slight cost. He conceived that such territories might be assigned to it as would form a military zone within which peace, commerce, and equal laws would flourish under British administration. Then, as for communication with India, the railway was very nearly completed. Kandahar had in all ages been the key of India. As he heard it well remarked to-day, it had been the gate through which invasions had come; and it had been one of the principal routes of Asiatic commerce. It would be greatly for the advantage of commerce were Kandahar placed under British administration. The noble lord referred to the opinions which had been expressed in favour of the proposition by high authorities in India and by various Chambers of Commerce at home. He did not desire to establish a high-handed military despotism at Kandahar, but to make that city a centre of commerce under the protection of Great Britain. He could conceive nothing more advantageous for the distracted cities of Afghanistan than that Kandahar should become a nucleus of civilisation, which would undoubtedly spread around and bring with it peace and prosperity. Before any decisive step was taken he trusted that the whole subject would receive the careful consideration of her Majesty's Government. The noble lord concluded by moving his resolution.

Lord DENMAN agreed with the noble lord as to the importance of the subject, but it is one which could not be dealt with until affairs had settled down in Afghanistan.

Lord LAWRENCE said it had been stated that we were wantonly attacked by the Afghans, but he could hardly conceive that such was the case. What he feared was that we wantonly attacked them. With respect to Kandahar, we had practically possession of the place for a year and a half, and if we had remained there our position would have been one of perfect security. The opinions of certain Chambers of Commerce had been referred to, but they had no proof that those Chambers of Commerce knew anything about India. If that which they were in favour of would extend commerce their opinions were sufficiently accounted for, and they might have effect given to them without running any risk on their part.

The Earl of NORTHBROOK said that in the present condition of things it appeared to him to be highly undesirable that any discussion should take place as to the steps which her Majesty's Government might think necessary when those affairs were settled. He should be very ill representing her Majesty's Government if he did not take that opportunity of expressing the great gratification which they had felt at the receipt of the telegram which had been read to the House that evening. The arrangements made by the Viceroy and the Government of India, the success of the march of Sir Frederick Roberts from Cabul to Kandahar, showing as it did the endurance and discipline of the troops, both British and native, concerned in the attack, and the successful action of which they had received the news to-day, were circumstances which could not but give to every Englishman feelings of the liveliest satisfaction. And those feelings were still more gratifying because they pointed to some not very remote time at which the arrangement of the affairs at Afghanistan might be concluded. But with respect to the motion which his noble friend had made, as he did not propose to take the sense of their lordships' House upon it, he would venture to ask for indulgence if he abstained from entering into the arguments his noble friend had advanced. He asked that indulgence for a reason which he thought their lordships would appreciate, and that was that at that moment there was but one noble lord (Lord Denman) representing the benches opposite—(a laugh)—and it would be impossible for him to discuss with any degree of satisfaction to himself a considerable portion of his noble friend's speech without perhaps using expressions or alluding to circumstances which he would prefer to abstain from doing unless those who in the late Government were responsible for the conduct of affairs in India when they were in office were present. He would only say, in reference to what fell from his noble friend (Lord Lawrence), that he entirely agreed, as he had ever done, with the opinions expressed before their lordships on the subject of the war in Afghanistan by his revered father, the distinguished late Viceroy of India. He hoped their lordships would not agree to the motion of his noble friend. Doubtless his noble friend, and those with whom he was associated, had assumed the somewhat exclusive title of Patriotic Association, and they had represented their opinions to the Secretary of State for India. He did not for a moment doubt the sentiments of patriotism which animated them, nor did he doubt they had advanced suggestions which were well worthy of consideration, but he had always thought that the gentlemen who belonged to those associations might show with advantage a little more boldness and courage in setting aside the evils and dangers which they were always bringing before the public, thinking, as he did, that the British Empire in India was amply strong enough to protect itself against attack; and the lesson which we ought to learn from what took place in our own campaigns on the steppes of Central Asia was, he thought, that much at any rate of the apprehension entertained by the Patriotic Association was not founded upon any real or substantial reason. After a few words from Lord WAVENEY, in reply, the motion was negatived.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, SEPT. 3.

DESPATCHES FROM AFGHANISTAN.

Sir H. D. WOLFF wished to ask the Secretary of State for India whether he was in possession of any despatches from Generals Phayre, Primrose, and Roberts, or from the Commander in Chief, and, if not, between whom correspondence on military matters in India was carried on.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON was obliged, for the extreme courtesy which the hon. member had shown, in putting this question without giving me any notice. He had not even got a copy of the necessary papers with him. His impression is that the papers contained copies of all despatches he had received relating to purely military questions. He had been so much occupied during the last week or two that he had not been able to compare the papers very carefully, but he had given instructions that all the information he had of a purely military character should be made public.

CASUALTIES.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Deccan, arrived at Southampton, reports having been in collision with, and sank, the Norwegian barque Andolf Andersohn, forty miles S.W. of Start Point; crew saved.

A telegram from Gibraltar, dated August 21, states that the Alghitha (s), from Rangoon had grounded, but came off without assistance and undamaged.

The Ben Rydding arrived at Calcutta, August 27, with loss of bowsprit, foretopmast, main and mizen topgallantmasts, and with head rails broken.

The Duke of Devonshire (s), bound to London, is reported from Calcutta to have grounded about four miles from the anchorage at Kedgerree at about 6.30 p.m. on the 29th July last, whilst proceeding down the river in charge of a pilot. The vessel is reported to have remained aground in an upright position until 2 a.m. on the 30th ult., when she floated, and has since proceeded on her voyage.

THE TRADE OF ADEN.—Geologically speaking, Aden is little more than a huge mass of volcanic rocks, but some returns which have just been issued by the statistical branch of the Department of Finance and Commerce show that Aden possesses a vast importance in connection with a considerable part of the world's business. During the year under report (1878-79) no less than 837 merchant steamers, of the total burden of 11,61,008 tons, and 15 sailing vessels, measuring 13,535 tons, visited the port of Aden. Some 65.35 per cent. of this enormous mercantile fleet were trading with India and British Burma, 13.26 per cent. British vessels trading with ports, some or all of which were foreign, and 9.08 per cent. trading with British colonies. Wholly independent of its value as a port of call, however, Aden possesses quite a trade of its own, the volume of which in 1878-79 was of the value of Rs.3,31,33,083, the average for that and the previous four years being Rs.3,32,39,325. The sea import trade of Aden during the year in question amounted to Rs.1,67,15,467, exclusive of Government stores and treasure, and its sea export trade to Rs.1,25,90,663. The inland trade with Arabia amounted to a total value of Rs.38,26,952, Rs.26,72,454 being imports, and Rs.11,54,498 being exports. The chief articles of import from Bombay that exhibited an increase were apparel, cotton piece goods, grey country and American, wet dates, seeds gingelly, silk raw, spices, sugar, timber and wood, grain and pulse; but there was a falling off in the value of cabinetware, cotton piece-goods in pairs and dozens, manufactured jute, gunny bags, and some other things. We notice that the trade in coffee, the most important product of Arabia, rose to a very considerable sum in 1878-79, namely, nearly half a million sterling. France took twenty lakhs, the United States eleven, Great Britain eight-and-a-quarter, and Austria four-and-three quarter lakhs. As regards the dealings of Aden with Arabia, it appears that an average of 625 camel-loads entered the town daily, and consisted—in the order of their bulk—of wood and charcoal, fodder, water, grain and pulse, fruits and vegetables, coffee, and miscellaneous.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of purchasing and working four several patents, namely—(1) An Improved Window Sash, called the Imperial Window. (2) A Blind Roller and Brass Window Band. (3) A Patent Window Fastener; and (4) A Patent Tension Apparatus, which patents are to be purchased from Mr. J. W. Eldrid, the present proprietor, for the sum of £1,500 in cash, £3,500 in vendors full-paid shares, and 10 per cent. on royalties and licenses. The Vendor's or B shares, only receive a dividend after payment of a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum on the A shares.

The Imperial Window.—This invention consists in constructing the sashes of an ordinary window frame, so that, while they are free to slide up and down in the usual way, each sash may at pleasure be opened to a horizontal position or inclined to any required angle, and can be readily fitted to all existing window frames, without the trouble, expense, and inconvenience of having to remove the shutters, linings, soffits, architraves, or any other internal fittings, at a moderate cost, varying from 10s. 6d. per window. It combines perfection of ventilation with safety in cleaning, as it can be slightly sloped to ventilate without draught, or reversed for cleaning. Its appearance also is improved.

These windows are already in use in the following establishments:—City Liberal Club, Walbrook; 53, Whitecross-street, City; New Ladies' Hospital, 16, Fitzroy-square; Stock Exchange Restaurant; Metropolitan Dispensary, Fore-street; De Keyzer's Royal Hotel; Cripplegate Bank; Metropolitan Hotel, Finsbury; Lake's Drapery Establishment, Fore-street; Dr. Bartlett's, Duke-street, W.; Sunnyside, Sidcup, private house; Dr. Wilkinson's, 268, Caledonian-road; and the offices of the Company. Arrangements are also in progress for fitting them in various other buildings.

The other patents are importantly connected with window fittings, and, together with the contract for the purchase of the patents, the Articles of Association, and opinions of the Press, can be seen at the offices of the Company, where forms of application for shares may be obtained.

A dividend has been reasonably estimated at the rate of 20 per cent.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 21; Madras and Allahabad, August 19; Calcutta, August 18.

The reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 10 state that the rainfall of the week has been heavy in British Burma, parts of Assam, Bengal, the Central Provinces, the Central India States, and Rajputana; elsewhere it has again been slight. In some parts of the Madras Presidency, in the Deccan, and in parts of Berar, where rain has hitherto been deficient, there is no improvement, and the prospects of the autumn crop are uncertain. In a few districts of Bengal, especially in Behar, heavy rain has damaged some of the standing crops. In some districts also of the Central Provinces cotton has suffered from a similar cause. In the Bassein district of British Burma considerable damage has been done by floods. Agricultural prospects, though somewhat unfavourable in parts of Southern India and in the Deccan districts, are still fair on the whole.

The health report for the same week is as follows:—
Bombay: Public health fair; fever in Sind and Dharwar. Bengal: Public health generally good; fever reported at headquarters, Baraset and Satkira, some thannas of Moorshedabad, prevalent in Rajshahye and Rungpore; some small-pox and fever in Purneah, and cholera in Chittagong. North West Provinces and Oudh: Some cholera in Benares city and cantonments; decreasing in Allahabad; increasing in Fyzabad; fever in parts of Meerut. Punjab: Health generally good; a little fever in Rawul Pindi, and small-pox prevalent in Dera and Ismail Khan. Central Provinces: Small-pox in Saugor and Seoni. British Burma: Health of province generally satisfactory. Assam: Public health good. Mysor and Coorg: Improving. Central India States: Reports good. Rajputana: Health good; but fever and diarrhoea in four tahsils of Ulwar.

We have received the following telegrams from the India-office for publication:—

"FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, SEPT. 4.—KANDAHAR, SEPT. 1, 6 p.m.—Ayub Khan's army was to-day totally defeated and completely dispersed, with, I hope, comparatively slight loss on our side. His camp was captured. The two lost guns of E Battery, B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, were recovered, and several wheeled guns of various calibre fell to the splendid infantry of this force. The cavalry are still in pursuit. Our casualties are Capt. Straton, 22nd Regiment, killed; 72nd Highlanders, Lieut. Col. Brownlow, Capt. Frome, killed; Capt. Murray and Lieut. Monro wounded, and seven men killed, eighteen wounded; 92nd Highlanders, Lieut. Menzies and Donald Stewart wounded, eleven men killed, and thirty-nine wounded; Lieut. Col. Battye, 2nd Goorkhas, and Major Slater, 2nd Sikhs, wounded. It is at present impossible to ascertain casualties among native troops, but I have no reason to believe they are excessive. Full details will be telegraphed to-morrow. The quite recently murdered remains of Lieut. MacLaine, Royal Artillery, were found on the arrival of the British troops in Ayub Khan's camp. Ayub Khan is supposed to have fled towards Herat."

"KANDAHAR, SEPT. 2 (through Chaman).—The report of the reconnaissances carried out by General Hugh Gough and Col. Chapman on August 31 afforded me all necessary information regarding enemy's position. I found it was quite practicable to turn his right, and thus place myself to the rear of the Baba Wali range, where Ayub Khan's main camp was. I decided on doing so, and commenced to attack shortly after nine yesterday morning. To cover my design I made preparations for a direct attack upon the Baba Wali Kotal. This feint was entrusted to the troops of the Kandahar garrison, under Lieutenant General Primrose, who also arranged to occupy my advanced positions of the previous day. At the same time the cavalry brigade, under Brigadier Hugh Gough, advanced upon our left, and without difficulty reached the Argandab, where it was well placed for pursuit, should the enemy break either towards Girishk or Khakrez. The attack was made by the 1st and 2nd Brigades, under Brigadiers General Macpherson and Baker respectively, with the 3rd Brigade, under Brigadier General Macgregor in support, the whole of the infantry being under the command of Major General I. Ross. An elevated village within 1,200 yards of our position was strongly held by the enemy and had first to be taken. This was done in the most gallant manner by the 92nd Highlanders and the 2nd Goorkhas, covered by the fire of the C Battery, 2nd Brigade, Royal Artillery, and the new screw gun battery. The two brigades then advanced through orchards and enclosures, fighting steadily; the left of the 2nd Brigade being brought gradually round until the village of Pir-Paimal was reached. At this point the enemy were in great force and fought most resolutely, but nothing could resist the determined advance of the British troops. Shortly after this the reverse slope of the Baba Wali Kotal was reached, and the standing camp of Ayub when at Mazra became visible. All the enemy's attempts to stem the torrent were fruitless. By noon the camp was in our possession, with twenty-seven pieces of ordnance, which include our own guns lost on July 27. The casualties, in addition to those yesterday reported, include three officers of cavalry slightly wounded, namely, Major Willock, 3rd Bengal Cavalry; Lieut. Baker, 3rd Punjab Cavalry; Lieut. Neville Chamberlain, Central India Horse. The 92nd Highlanders had fifty-one wounded, three of whom had since died. The 72nd had seventeen wounded, one of whom had since died. Among the natives eleven killed, seventy-two wounded. Total wounded of casualties about 210. The Cavalry Brigade marches to-morrow to Kokaran, where it will be well placed, and this will facilitate supplies being brought into the city. The 19th Bombay Native Infantry, with 3rd Bombay Cavalry, march to-morrow to open up communications with General Phayre, to whom I am writing, requesting him not to push on too many troops, but to utilise his transport as much as possible in the conveyance of stores and supplies."

"SIMLA, SEPT. 4.—St. John telegraphs from Kandahar under date 2nd:—Cavalry under General Gough killed about 300 fugitives of Ayub's army, and Bombay Cavalry, under General Nuthall, 100 more. Twenty-seven guns captured. Ayub is believed to have fled. Khakrez Cabuli infantry, which seems to have fled without fighting, has retired up Argandab Valley. Heratis made straight for Helmund. Colonel Shewell died last night of wounds received in sortie of 16th."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 6.—Roberts reports from Kandahar, under date Sept. 3, that cavalry brigade have marched for Kokaran. Wounded comfortably housed and mostly doing well. Total casualties on 31st and 1st amounted to 248, including two officers not before mentioned, Lieut. Col. Rowcroft, 4th Goorkhas, and Lieut. Chesney, 23rd Pioneers, both slightly wounded. Number of guns taken is thirty-two, including two guns lost at Maimand. Prisoners say that Ayub saved none. Following from Kandahar, Sept. 3:—The whole of Ayub's guns found and brought into citadel. Ayub fled to Khakrez without stopping; is probably in Zamendawar to-day. Hassim Khan and the other sirdars and chiefs, with two exceptions, went with him. He had no baggage and no troops but the Herati horse. He is said to have announced his intention of going straight to Herat. General Phayre reached Abdul Rahman last evening. The wounded are doing well."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 8.—Roberts telegraphs Kandahar 5th and 6th. Careful inquiry shows enemy lost very severely on 1st. This was expected, as they made very determined stand when our troops were quite close. A column starts shortly for Khushk-i-Nakhud, to bury our dead there and open out district for supplies. Phayre arrived 6th. Has encamped horse artillery and cavalry at Karezk-i-Rara, twelve miles south of Kandahar, where supplies and forage are ample. Weather unusually hot, but wounded doing well, and troops generally fairly healthy. Following soldiers killed or died of wounds received in action 1st of September:—72nd Highlanders.—Lance Sergeant William Cameron, Lance Corporals Josiah M'Ilvenna, William Gannon, Privates Mill Erskine, Alexander Hodge, James M'Queen, James M'Gowan, James Baggin, George Haseltine. 92nd Highlanders.—Colour Sergeant Richard Fraser, Corporal Lewin Friendship, Privates Alexander Easton, Thomas Kerr, John M'Kenzie, William Reid, Neil Ross, James Scott, John Strachan, William Wilson, William Henderson, Peter Hoey, James Wilson."

We cull the following extracts from the Calcutta telegrams of this week:—

"The Khan of Lalpura has been summoned by the Ameer to Cabul. His khanship has been guaranteed. The news from Cabul is favourable. Affairs there have so far stood the great strain to which they have been exposed. The Cabul and Peshawar road is becoming safer. Asmutullah Khan, a Ghilzai, has been appointed to superintend the management of the road and to establish posts. Recruiting is progressing favourably. The arsenal, military workshops, and armoury have been re-established, and he is building his family residence at Sherpur. He proposes visiting Jellalabad. The influence of Asmutullah has irritated some of the Ghilzai chiefs, but he is undoubtedly the most powerful among the northern Ghilzais. Mooshk-i-Alam, who has been granted a yearly allowance of Rs.6,000, has returned home. The Turkestan road is now fully open for traffic. The evacuation of Northern Afghanistan by the army was satisfactorily conducted. No cholera has as yet appeared. A brigade will for the present remain in the Khyber. The camps at Lawrencepur and Hassan Abdal are only temporary, as all the regiments cannot be passed down the country at once. General Stewart and Mr. Lepel Griffin have reached Simla. The latter returns to England in a month."

"Some further details regarding the battle of Maiwand and the siege of Kandahar which have reached us during the past week seem to strengthen the case of incapacity which the Indian Press has been for some time making out against General Primrose. It is alleged that, had he permitted the relieving party under General Brooke to advance a few miles further, a large number of stragglers from General Burrows's brigade would have been saved. It appears also that the heavy loss in the sortie of the 16th ult. might have been avoided had General Primrose availed himself of Ayub's delay in commencing the investment to destroy the Deh Khwajee village. Rightly or wrongly, the Indian public has lost all confidence in General Primrose, and, although it would be unfair to condemn him until after a full inquiry, it is to be hoped that the Government will not, pending such inquiry, leave him in high command. He is senior to General Roberts in the army, but the latter's commission as local lieutenant general is dated about three months before General Primrose attained that substantive rank. This will probably entitle General Roberts to the chief command. That, however, will hardly satisfy the public unless steps are taken to provide that in the event of any accident happening to that officer his successor shall not be General Primrose. The Civil and Military Gazette, a Lahore paper, asserts positively that prior to General Burrows's advance from Kandahar General Haines recorded in writing his emphatic protest against the weakness of the brigade, and also gave as his opinion that the Kandahar garrison should consist at least of 10,000 men, and that he was overruled by the Viceroy, who assumed the entire responsibility on both points."

The story of the battle of Kushk-i-Nakhud, with its deplorable mistakes, and with its splendid display of gallant bravery, is incomparably well told in a letter from a military correspondent to the Morning Advertiser. Our contemporary has furnished a contribution to military history which we advise our readers to study. The conduct of the Berkshires and their gallant colonel is as splendid an example of what our soldiers can do, even when fighting hopelessly, as our annals furnish; such a defeat is a regimental honour. But it is impossible to avoid echoing the words which draw a parallel between that "fearful disaster and that of Isandhlwana—the same overweening confidence in our invincibility, the same contempt of an unknown foe, the same attempt at scientific strategy, when the simplest old-fashioned British tactics would have won the day." At the same time, all the movements of the enemy indicate the presence of abler tacticians than any Afghan leaders could aspire to be.

A RECENT telegram states that preparations had been made at Bannu against an expected attack of the Waziris, but the alarm passed off.

A FAREWELL dinner was given on August 5 by the Political Staff at Cabul in honour of Lieut. Gen. Sir F. Roberts, V.C., and the forces marching with him to Kandahar. Mr. Lepel Griffin proposed the health of the general and spoke of the cordial and sincere friendly relations existing between the military and political officers at Cabul. Alluding to Cabul prospects he said:—

"In the decision at which the Government, in communication with Sir Donald Stewart, has arrived, and which I firmly believe to be as wise, politically, as it is bold from a military point of view, I see the best, if not the only, chance of the settled administration of Afghanistan, and the end of all this tangled net of complication which goes by the name of Afghan politics. The new Ameer I believe to be sincerely attached to the English interest; and, though his strength is not as great as his goodwill, he will do all he can to further the advance of the army." General Roberts, in his reply, said—

"Sir Donald Stewart willing to guarantee that we shall reach India again, via Kandahar, in November next. This is a country of great uncertainties. We have been living in a state of uncertainty for many months; but thanks to the political skill of our kind host, affairs have during the last few weeks progressed so rapidly and favourably that we have reason to hope the country may now have comparative rest and quiet, and that some settled form of government will be established. However, we must not be too sanguine; and I trust that our fellow-countrymen, who have not had the same opportunity that we have, had of knowing Afghanistan and the Afghans, will not be disappointed if matters do not go altogether smoothly after the British troops leave Cabul. No Ameer has ever yet occupied the throne for any time until he has proved himself capable of governing the country, and it is not likely that Ameer Abdur Rahman will be an exception. We all know what difficulties Mr. Griffin has had to contend with, and we all rejoice at the great success which has attended his efforts—efforts so ably assisted by the political officers now with him. It now remains for Abdur Rahman to show that he is capable of filling the great position in which he has been placed. From the commencement of this campaign the political officers have borne as important, if not as active, work as the soldier."

THE Government of India has conferred a good-service pension of £100 per annum on Lieut. General Sir F. Roberts, K.C.B.

A CABUL telegram states that the Viceroy will probably leave Simla early in November for a few days' tiger shooting. Should the proposed review of the troops returning from Cabul not be abandoned, he will then proceed to the camp at Campbellpore, and, after inspecting the division, will go, via Karachi, to Bombay, to meet the Marchioness of Ripon, with whom he will proceed to Calcutta in December.

THE Government of India have sanctioned, for the time that the troops remain in Afghanistan, the holding of lower standard examinations in Persian. The reward for passing is to be Rs.180.

A TELEGRAM from Constantinople states that despatches received from the Governor of Bagdad announce that the Arabs who made an attack upon the English steamer Khalifat on the Euphrates, have been captured and their chief severely wounded.

THE scare at Karachi was caused by the appearance of some Pathans sent down by the transport officer at Sibi to purchase camels.

GENERAL PALLISER's report of the cavalry action at Patkar Shana on July 1 has been published in the official Gazette. The Government and the Commander in Chief concur in giving great credit to General Palliser and the troops engaged, and make special mention of Major Atkinson, of the 1st Punjab Cavalry, Capt. L. Bishop, of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and Capt. Barrow, of the 10th Bengal Lancers.

THE story that was telegraphed up-country from Calcutta of a Naga raid on a tea estate at Gotoonga has turned out to be unfounded.

THE officiating military secretary to Lord Ripon notifies in the Gazette of India that their Excellencies the Viceroy and the Marchioness of Ripon will hold a Drawing Room at Government House, Calcutta, next winter. The date is to be notified hereafter. Ladies attending the Drawing Room will be expected to appear in full dress, but without trains.

LIEUT. MACLAINE, for whose murder in cold blood, while prisoner, Ayub Khan must be held responsible, entered the Royal Artillery in 1872, and was in his 29th year. He was the eldest son of Mr. W. O. MacLaine, J.P., of Kyneton, near Thornbury, Gloucestershire.

It is announced that on their withdrawal from the Khyber most of the troops returning from Cabul will be huttet at Campbellpore, near Rawul Pindi. The Punjab Government has been directed to put up shelter there with all possible speed for 11,000 men.

A MOVEMENT has been initiated by Dr. Busteed, assayer of the Calcutta Mint, and Major Luard, R.E., to restore the tablet erected by Mr. Holwell, in memory of the tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta, or to erect some fitting memorial. Major Luard will receive subscriptions through Messrs. Grindlay and Co., 55, Parliament-street.

ACCORDING to a Bombay journal there seems to be no truth in the report that Bangalore as a British cantonment is to be given up.

THE Pioneer thus contradicts "the impudent invention" about General Primrose being overruled by the Government of India:—"A theory has been invented in Bombay to account for the Kandahar disaster by throwing all the blame on the Government of India. The Bombay Gazette has twice stated that General Primrose desired to recall General Burrows's force to Kandahar after the desertion of a part of the Wali's army, but that he was overruled from Simla. The Englishman has since picked up the story, commenting on it freely. We have, however, the best possible authority for stating that the Government of India never heard of any proposal being made by General Primrose to withdraw the advanced brigade, and are wholly guiltless of such action as attributed to them."

It is stated that improved pensions for the three Presidential Staff Corps have been sanctioned.

A JUDGMENT has been recently delivered by Mr. Justice Straight which has met with great approval. The case itself is one of interest to many of our readers. A nurse belonging to a military hospital at Bareilly went to attend Mrs. Vansittart. Before the services of the nurse could be properly dispensed with Mr. Hayes, the doctor of the hospital, recalled her. The nurse remonstrated on the ground of the condition of the lady, and finally resigned her hospital post sooner than endanger her patient. Mr. Vansittart subsequently wrote an angry letter to Mr. Hayes, who in his turn prosecuted him for writing a defamatory letter. The Bareilly magistrate convicted Mr. Vansittart and sentenced him to an exceedingly severe penalty, "only stopping short of imprisonment, because of the social habits of the accused and the serious consequences imprisonment during the hot weather might have on him." On appeal, Mr. Justice Straight reduced the fine to Rs.200 and remarked that Mr. Hayes was not altogether without fault. We should think not.

OUT of the money subscribed in Bombay to defray a portion of the expenses of Mr. Fawcett's recent election a small surplus, which remained in the hands of Messrs. Nowrojee Furdoonjee and Sorabjee Shapurjee Bengalee, has been applied by those gentlemen to the purchase of a handsome tea-set of Kuchee silverwork. It bears an appropriate inscription, and was sent to Mr. Fawcett by a recent mail steamer.

THE monument to Mr. William Jenkyns, M.A., of the Bengal Civil Service, who perished with Sir Louis Cavagnari at Cabul about twelve months ago, has now been completed by Mr. John Hutchison, R.S.A. The leading feature of the memorial, which is to be placed in King's College, Aberdeen, is a bust in alto rilievo, the head being shown in three-quarters front. A bronze plate underneath the monument will record in Latin the main incidents of Mr. Jenkyns's career and the circumstances of his lamented death.

A MANUAL of Indian geography is being compiled by Dr. George Smith, the author of the biography of the Rev. Dr. Duff.

DURING the week ending August 7 there were 187 deaths in Calcutta, being a death-rate of 22·7 per thousand per annum. In Madras for the same week the deaths numbered 249, giving a death-rate of 32·5 per 1,000 per annum. In Bombay during the week ending August 10 there were 406 deaths, giving a death-rate of 31·14 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India contains the following obituary of the week:—The Rev. W. A. Sherring; Mr. J. D. Bell (standing counsel to the Crown); Mr. E. Gastrell; Hon.

Surg. Major T. King; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Elloy (of cholera) at Benares.

OFFICERS KILLED AT KANDAHAR.

LIEUT. COLONEL FRANCIS BROWNLOW, C.B., of the 72nd (Duke of Albany's Own) Highlanders, purchased his commission Sept. 8, 1854, became a lieutenant June 22, 1855; captain (by purchase), Aug. 19, 1862; major (by purchase), May 28, 1870; and lieutenant colonel, Aug. 15, 1877. CAPT. ST. JOHN THOMAS FROME, also of the 72nd, entered the army (by purchase) Feb. 22, 1861, became lieutenant (by purchase) April 19, 1864, and captain June 8, 1872.

MAJOR THOMAS BURTON VANDELEUR, of the 7th (Royal) Fusiliers, became an ensign (by purchase) Sept. 21, 1855, a lieutenant Oct. 23, 1857, captain (by purchase) June 21, 1864, and brevet major Oct. 1, 1877.

TURKISH ARABIA.

It is reported from Bagdad that the Hamawand tribe of Koords have again been giving trouble in the Kerkook and Sulimaniyeh districts of Turkish Arabia, plundering caravans and cutting off unarmed parties. The road between Bagdad and Kermanshah has been rendered very unsafe by them, and the operations of the Turkish troops to quell these disturbances and disperse the Koords have been hitherto quite unavailing. Several collisions have, it is known, occurred between the robbers and the military, generally, it is believed, to the advantage of the latter. Not long ago a party of about fifty zaptiehs were cut up near Kerkook, and since then it is rumoured that a further check to the troops has occurred. The whole of Mesopotamia and Koordistan is now in a very disordered and unsettled state. The Arabs continue everywhere disaffected and rebellious, though no hostilities are now actually pending between them and the Turks.—Press Commissioner.

DEATH OF MR. LEWIN.—A contemporary is now informed that the death of Mr. Lewin was caused by sunstroke. He was employed on the Sibi section of the Quetta and Kandahar Railway, and left Sibi for Nasi on July 31 in charge of stores under escort.—Times of India.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

TROPICAL READING BOOKS.*

THE unconscious insularity which accompanies the Englishman everywhere has had a curious effect on the means adopted in teaching the young children in schools in foreign lands to read out of books such as are adapted for English board schools. The Bishop of Kingston discovered the difficulties of teaching the children born and reared in the West Indies by the use of books which treated of ice and snow, daisies and buttercups, &c. The practical result of the Bishop's observations was to encourage the preparation of the present series by Mr. Phillips. The graduated differences, which, beginning with the objects of life which surround the little pupils, lead them gradually from the understanding of their every-day life to the perception of the ideas and conditions of English and other foreign lives, are well conceived and carried out. The idea is an obviously excellent one, and might be most usefully carried out in similar productions for other countries. For our English nursery is world-wide, and the little ones who learn our mother tongue are of all nations and kindreds and climes.

THE NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.*

A VERY happily chosen article is the translation from the Bengali of "An Indian Queen." There is no need for the native eulogist of "Aholya Bai" to say that his account of this admirable princess cannot be called "unworthy flattery." Dr. Pope says of Aholya Bai she was devout, merciful, and laborious to an extraordinary degree. While living she was one of the purest and most exemplary rulers that ever existed, and she is now worshipped in Malwa as an incarnation of the Deity. Mr. Andrew gives the Mahratta queen a foremost place in that chapter on Indian heroines which is one of the pearls of his "India and Her Neighbours." Professor Minaieff's "History of Sanskrit Literature" is the subject of a paper, and Niebhuh's "History of Old Bombay" is brought to a conclusion. This historical picture extends to Surat, and we regret that a description and plan of the garden of Jek Beg Khan is omitted. This process might have been well applied to the following passage in an otherwise harmless article on "The Love of Ornaments among Bengali Ladies":—"The ignorance of the Bengali language on the part of the rulers of the land, and the absence of anything like familiar intercourse with those over whom they rule, keep them utter strangers to the Bengali institutions, condition, habits, and modes of life."

A SILVER CATECHISM.*

IN his preface Colonel Smith states that, "although this is the fourteenth essay which has been printed by me for submission to the Indian authorities, only one publication has been made, and that, at the first, in 1876." The author's experience in charge of the Indian mints may at first sight seem to constitute him an authority on the complicated questions of commerce and exchange. But we do not think that the catechetical form in which he has thought fit to embody his statements and opinions at all facilitates the perusal of this fourteenth essay. The remedy which Colonel Smith advocates, and for the inculcation of which he has constructed these questions and answers, is expressed by him in his first publication in terms which he repeats in this, together with the objections urged against it: that the coinage of silver by private individuals be suspended in the Indian mints, so as to cause all rupee remittances to be made by Council Bills, the Secretary of State sending out bullion for coinage when necessary. The rate of exchange having been thus gradually raised to what Colonel Smith calls the normal value, as fixed in 1835, viz., 2s. per rupee, "gold would be taken to the mints, which would be open from the first for its purchase or coinage at Rs. 38 14as. per standard ounce." Colonel Smith endeavours to show that by working out the scheme Indian prices would "be based on gold with a silver currency," which he endeavours to show is not bi-metallism. There are some clear and useful statements contained in the answers, as well as some statements which will be hardly accepted. Thus the account given of what the author calls "normal prices of Indian produce in England" is either unintelligible or enough to demonstrate that management of a mint by no means imparts a knowledge of the principles of commercial exchange. But Colonel Smith is somewhat given to coin words, or rather to raise them to an unusual standard, and expects them to carry some imaginary value in ideas which metaphorically corresponds to the imaginary value of 2s. for an Indian rupee. Of this we take one example:—"Question—If you maintain the gold value of two shillings for the rupee, will not that be an artificial value? Answer—That depends on what you mean by an artificial value. If you mean that it is more than the world-wide saleable value of the metallic contents of the rupee, it no doubt is artificial in that sense. But if I say that it is the value actually paid in gold for the rupee, and for which it may be exchanged, I think it may be called a real value. In the same way the purchaser at an exorbitant price of a piece of china which has a fashionable fancy value may claim that his treasure possesses a real value measured by the sovereigns which went to acquire it." But, notwithstanding these and some other startling definitions, Col. Smith's catechism deserves to be carefully read, whether from an antagonistic or from a teachable point of view, by those who desire to know and compare the various panaceas recommended to stay the exhaustive depletion of the Indian Treasury caused by "the losses on exchange."

* "Silver and the Indian Exchanges." By Col. J. T. SMITH, R.E. London: Effingham Wilson.

THE close of the session has been signalised by the appearance of the third part of that amusing, though not complimentary, series of sketches of the members of the House, entitled the "Popular Dod." Mr. Trevelyan is described as "full of promise but dilatory in performance," and Mr. Adam is said to have been "sentenced to penal servitude in one of her Majesty's hottest climes." Madras will not thank "Tommy" for such a description, and Mr. Adam need not be commiserated, even if the Rampa rebellion be not finally settled before his arrival. We regret to read some of the lines in the very fulsome eulogium on Mr. Bright, for whom all the respect in the brochure is reserved.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NAGA HILLS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In page 806 of your paper of the 27th ult. you have called attention to the fears of some English planters in Assam that the Nagas will again display a strong desire to shoot English gentlemen in November next. It is not probable that these savages will make a raid northward into Upper Assam, but it is very necessary to adopt measures for protecting the tea planters of Cachar, south west of the Naga country: the whole of the Cachar district might have been plundered in the early part of this year had not the Raja of Jampi cleverly possessed himself of the intending raiders' spears and guns. The police posts at Semkhur and north of Semkhur are of little use for the purpose of preventing raids by Nagas into the Cachar district; these posts should be moved to Lukhema and Berrima, within sight of which the raiders are pretty sure to pass. The native police in India are usually anxious to close their eyes in order to save their precious lives from robbers; to be useful they must be placed in positions where they cannot avoid collision. In 1843 constant robberies were being committed on the Grand Trunk road between Cawnpore and Aylgurrh. The police were posted on high mud towers, while robberies were committed under their noses, they refusing to come down. Col. Steel pulled down the mud towers and posted the police in open sheds; the robberies immediately decreased. So it is now in the Cachar district; as long as the police are posted at a safe distance from the route which the robbers like to take there can be no security for life or property among the tea gardens; but if they be posted near or in the valley of the Barsk River they will give timely notice of raids, and perhaps deter the Naga savages from invading Cachar.—Your obedient servant,

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

A DEFENCE OF THE BOMBAY TROOPS.

WE regret to read in a contemporary the opinion that there is "little room for doubt" that "the severity of the disaster which befel General Burrows's brigade was due to misconduct on the part of the native infantry engaged." We say there was no ground for such an attack upon brave soldiers who did their duty as they were able, but went down under a fire of artillery which no troops could have borne up against. But let us see how the battle was really fought. General Burrows massed his cavalry, 500 sabres only, "not seven or eight hundred," and his horse artillery guns on his right, to check the immense body of irregulars, footmen and horsemen, posted on the Sirdar's left. He could not have manoeuvred to attack this body, as the Afghan reserve of three regular regiments could have swung round from the right and prevented such a movement as Havelock resorted to at Cawnpore. Inasmuch, however, as some cavalry was engaged, General Burrows must have had some cavalry on his left, watching the mass of two thousand horsemen hovering in that direction. Shaken by the fire of seven regiments, and thirty well-served pieces, the 1st and 30th Bombay Native Infantry regiments proved by their losses that they fought splendidly.

Allowing for 5 per cent. of absentees from sickness, the 1st Grenadiers could not have had more than 700 men and seven officers in action. The 30th was a weaker regiment, and it must have gone into the battle with a strength of 600 men and seven officers. The 1st Grenadiers lost 350 men, that is, half its strength; the 30th lost 350 men, which is more than half its strength. The Afghan main line of seven regiments and thirty guns must have extended fully a mile. Then, on the Afghan left, there was a great mass of irregulars, which could not have extended to a less distance than a quarter of a mile. If we allow the cavalry on the Sirdar's right to have been in close formation, their line must have extended half a mile; so that the Afghan front was at least a mile and three-quarters in length, and it occupied the "best ground," according to Colonel St. John. Now, the front line of the English consisted, if the regiments were deployed, to obtain the greatest possible weight of rifle fire, of 1,300 men two deep, with about 400 cavalry and a half-battery on one flank, and 100 cavalry on the other flank; there were also six small guns. Now, a battery of artillery requires 95 yards of ground, and a regiment of cavalry of the strength of those with General Burrows 200 yards. So that, in ordinary formation, General Burrows's front was to have occupied a space of about 700 yards, and if he extended his force as much as possible he could not have covered three-quarters of a mile of ground. He was thus immensely overlapped on both flanks, and was obliged to husband his cavalry in order to cover any moment the retreat of the infantry. We see, then, the front line of 1,300 infantry soldiers exposed to a devastating concentric rifle and artillery fire, charged in front by a multitude of desperate fanatics, and charged on their exposed left flank by a body of horsemen, almost double their own strength, and which could not have been less than a quarter of a mile in length; and when we remember this and remember also that these gallant 1,300 men had with them not more officers than the 468 or 500 English soldiers, and when we remember that, of their 14 officers eight were lieutenants—we say that, to impute the loss of the battle to their misconduct is to say something for which there is not the shadow of a foundation. We lost the battle of Kushk-i-Nakhud, not because the Bombay infantry failed in courage, but because a system broke down—that is, the system of officering—and because their leader set them to accomplish that which no soldiers—not even the picked soldiers of the British army—could have accomplished under the circumstances. If General Burrows had been a practical soldier, and if his force had been wholly British, the result, with the odds of position, numbers, and artillery, would have been the same. To our thinking, the Bombay native regiments behaved with devotion, gallantry, and perfect discipline, in that they went unhesitatingly to such an encounter. If they had fled without a blow we might have talked of their misconduct; but when we remember that they fought for six hours—we say that Bombay may be proud that she can furnish such soldiers, and that Englishmen may be proud to lead them. If they had had an equal amount of leadership with their European comrades they would have lost the battle, but would probably have preserved a better appearance of order. The lesson we derive from their fate is that in a real, bitter, stubborn fight, one officer to every one hundred native soldiers is a proportion which renders every defeat liable to be converted into speedy and irretrievable rout.—Indian Daily News.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THE DEFEAT?

WE see an attempt is being made at Simla to put all the blame of the defeat at Kushk-i-Nakhud upon General Primrose. Fair play is bonnie play, but this is not fair play. That General Primrose has shown himself unequal to the situation is beyond question. In former times, when an officer, placed at Kandahar, was quite a month distant from the Government, the whole responsibility of the operations of the campaign rested upon his shoulders. But now-a-days, when the Government can be in hourly communication with the officer commanding at Kandahar, the Government must share the blame of his want of capacity simply because it has the power to correct false strategy at any moment, and because it is to the full as well informed as the officer upon the spot. Now, the Government approved of General Burrows being detached with a strength of 2,400 men to the Helmund. It recognised the movement as necessary in order that Wali Shere Ali should not be left to bear alone an attack he was manifestly unable to support. The Government knew that Girishk is 73 miles from Kandahar; and it knew that, when General Burrows, with his brigade, reached that point, he was outside of supporting distance. Further, it knew on the day the Wali's infantry mutinied, July 14, that the Kandahar force was thus distributed:—At Khelat-i-Ghilzai, 87½ miles from Kandahar to the north, a small force of all arms, holding a strong fort in a sterile country and numbering from 700 to 800 men; at Girishk, 73 miles west of Kandahar, a brigade of 2,400 men, watching for the advance of an army from Herat, and compelled to watch the local levies of the Wali. The Government knew from experience that a mutiny was a thing to be expected. Now, the troops at Khelat and Girishk were both beyond supporting distance, and further, beyond the possibility of support, for under General Primrose there was left a brigade, commanded by Brigadier Brooke, and certainly not much stronger than that under General Burrows. What did Government do? That it knew the pinch of the position is certain, for it began at once to prepare to reinforce General Primrose; yet had General Burrows been successful those reinforcements would not have been necessary. It had become necessary to provide a force to keep the field as well as a force to garrison Kandahar. There was need of a support for Girishk at Kushk-i-Nakhud and for Khelat at Sher-i-Safa, at the ford across the Turnak River. Besides, the Government ordered up Mr. Boteler, the telegraph superintendent, to lay down a line of wire to General Burrows's camp. Therefore, the Government beyond question saw the error committed by General Primrose and allowed him to persist in it. It even went so far as to give orders directly for the advance of the troops along the line of communications; and yet, whilst thus proving how urgent was the need in its own eyes, it actually took its time to move the troops, and sent up artillery and European infantry at the rate of only 100 men per day. The issuing of orders direct to the brigadiers, instead of through the Government of Bombay, was thus proved to be a folly, or else it made the subsequent dilatoriness a folly. The result was that, instead of General Primrose receiving a reinforcement of a regiment of cavalry and at least two regiments of native infantry, he only received an addition of a single regiment, the 4th Bombay Rifles. Why was not the 14-9th Battery R.A. pushed on from Quetta to Kandahar? Why were not the two mountain guns at Chaman strengthened by the two at Quetta and all four sent on to the point where they were wanted? For the delay in moving the reinforcements of European infantry from Sind the Government is responsible. It had it in its power at any time during the month of July to correct General Primrose's strategy; that it did not do so saddles it in common fairness and justice with the major responsibility for what has occurred. When the mutiny took place the retirement on Kushk-i-Nakhud ought to have been the signal for a concentration of the army for a decisive battle. The Government could have ordered that concentration and could have ordered that battle to be fought. The fact that this is true surely makes the Government responsible, for, first, permitting errors to be committed, and then loitering over their correction. That General Primrose is an incompetent commander requires no proof. But, even if he were not so incompetent, he has failed, and England cannot permit generals to fail in the field. His supercession is therefore a matter of course. But we hold, for the reasons we have given, that he cannot be made to bear the whole blame. The Government of India must, in the face of England and India, bear its full share, and that share amounts simply to driving home the conviction of both countries that the present Indian administration has lost the art of making war.—Indian Daily News.

A NEW TAX ON TEA PLANTERS.

FROM certain facts that have lately come to our knowledge there appears to be a tax on the tea interest in Assam, which, though perhaps not very great, is still of importance in these days of heavy expenditure and small profits, and of which planters, agents and owners alike are unaware; or, if they suspect the fact, are, in a manner, powerless to remedy it, or even prove it. We refer to the land revenue they pay. We believe that the areas of most of the grants of land, as given by the amins attached to the various courts, are grossly incorrect, and that the error is almost invariably in excess of the correct area; often ridiculously so. Up to the year 1869 or thereabouts all the grants then taken up were surveyed by professionals of the Revenue Survey Department, and may be fairly assumed to be correct. But, since that date, the areas of grants taken up depend solely on the surveys of a few native amins who work entirely unchecked by any professional supervision, and who are generally men with but slight qualifications for their business. It is well known in the Survey Department that trained and experienced amins of that department can rarely be trusted to survey even the cultivated lands of a single village unchecked; hence their work is always rigorously examined by an officer on the ground before it is accepted. And yet here are men who, if they have ever received any professional training at all, are presumably bad bargains, who have been weeded out of the survey, and some of whom, as a matter of fact, know as little of surveying as a village patwarri or mouzadar, sent out utterly uncontrolled and unchecked, responsible to no professional superior, to give the area of the grants applied for by the planters. They are paid by the acre too, a fact which requires no comment when it is borne in mind that they are fully aware that their work will not be examined. Even granting the existence of such a lulus naturæ as a thoroughly honest and incorruptible second or third class native amin, it must be remembered that Assam jungles and waste lands are not exactly paths of pleasantness or ways of peace. Bhils and marshes, canebrakes and heavy forest, are objects which require both physical pluck to get through, and sundry professional

"dodges" only known to the initiated to circumvent, in laying out a boundary line. Hence, with the most honest intentions in the world, the amin may find it more convenient to manufacture a map than to go over every foot of the boundary line with his chain. Why should he be bitten by leeches and torn by thorns when he can make a good guess at the direction the line runs in and the distance it goes? No one will check his work; le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle. And so the planter who applies for a particular piece of land is told that it is so many acres, and, in the innocence of his heart, pays up eight annas per acre for the survey, and goes on yearly paying up so much per acre, at whatever rate he may be assessed, utterly unaware that he holds probably only half the land he is paying for, until some fine day, when he has cleared and planted out all his grant and measured up his cultivation, he finds that it amounts to so much less than he thought, and naturally begins to wonder where the rest of his land has gone to. Eight annas an acre is a large sum to pay for a boundary survey of waste land, and the least the grantee can expect is an accurate survey and to get all the land he has to pay for.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—The Raja of Bijnee, in Assam, has subscribed the sum of Rs.3,000 to the Indian Patriotic Fund, for the benefit of the families of the soldiers who may be killed or wounded in the Afghan war. The money has been paid by the Raja into the Durrung District Treasury.—Indian Daily News.

A USEFUL REFORM.—Sir George Couper has introduced a simple but very useful reform. From January 1, 1881, the use of English, instead of vernacular, figures is to be insisted upon in the preparation of all accounts in civil courts.—Ibid.

AN ENCUMBERED ESTATE.—The debts and liabilities of the Morar Mhow estate, in the district of Roy Bareilly, having been discharged, the Lieutenant Governor N.W.P. has restored the management of the estate to the talookdar, Raja Sheopal Singh.—Ibid.

EDUCATION IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The total number of pupils receiving instruction in 1879-80 was 54,457 in Government schools, 19,457 in aided schools, and 2,832 in unaided schools. This gives a total of 77,746 children receiving instruction. The cost to Government averaged about Rs.8 per head. Out of the total expenditure on schools, 82 per cent. was expended in purely Government schools. The assistance which Government money gives to education, and other causes, should only be bestowed where the people are manifestly unable to help themselves. As an incentive to the development of the grant-in-aid system, it may be noted that, in the vernacular aided schools, the education of each pupil cost the Government exactly one rupee per annum. The university and high class education cost in Government schools Rs.291 and Rs.38, respectively, per head. There is a carpenter school department, and the number of scholars in the fourteen schools of this class is 186. We should have thought that an agricultural class would have been of more importance in a country like India, and certainly the agricultural school in Madras has shown us how much may be effected in improving the principal—one might almost say the only—industry in India.—Ibid.

THE NAGA HILLS.—It is reported in Calcutta that, owing to the extreme unhealthiness of some of the military stations on the Naga Hills, a requisition has lately been made by the local military officers for a supply of more medical comforts for the troops located there, and that the contract with the India General Steam Navigation Company, for the transport of commissariat stores to the hills, has been renewed for three months more. From this it would appear that the troops in the Naga country are likely to remain there for some time longer than was at first supposed.—Bombay Gazette.

BRITISH BURMA.—The customs collections in British Burma for the first quarter of the current financial year amounted to Rs.16,24,929, as compared with Rs.16,33,447 during the corresponding quarter of last year.—Ibid.

A SPLENDID DONATION.—Babu Debendra Nath Tagor, the son and sole surviving executor to the estate of the late Dwarka Nath Tagor, has made over the sum of one lakh and Rs.3,000, invested in 4 per cent. Government promissory notes, to four trustees, to be held for the benefit of the poor blind of Calcutta.—Times of India.

PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—From the report of the Calcutta Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals we learn that the total amount of subscriptions and donations received in 1879 was Rs.2,729,10, of which Rs.2 were given by Armenians, Rs.7 by Jews, Rs.397 by Hindus, and Rs.2,323 by Christians. Special donations for water troughs of Rs.250 and Rs.500, respectively, were made by the Maharaja of Burdwan and by several gentlemen of Dacca. The number of convictions for cruelty obtained by the agents of the society during the past year amounted to the heavy total of 2,465! involving an increase of 427 beyond the total of the preceding year; the number of animals relieved by these convictions being 2,956; of which cases 819 were for ill-treatment of horses, and 1,590 for similar treatment of draught bullocks. The total of the fines, a moiety of which is received by the society, was Rs.5,897. The society, with a natural feeling of gratification, refers to the influence of its example in conducting to the establishment of much welcomed and flourishing societies in some of the most important centres of other parts of India—Bombay, Madras, and Bangalore; and it firmly hopes that their example will be followed in other centres. On the subject of the use of the bearing rein the committee refer to the strong and zealous condemnation in England and elsewhere, and earnestly acquiesced in by upwards of 520 eminent veterinary surgeons, of the useless and cruel bearing rein seen only upon the horses of those persons whose attention has not been drawn to it, or are more desirous of attracting attention to the supposed "spirited action," proud bearing, curved necks, tossing heads and foaming mouths, but in reality cruel suffering, of the fretted, cramped, and tormented animal, than of exhibiting their humanity. Happily, the committee say, it is but seldom seen in Calcutta, and amongst native drivers never. The committee hope that the use of the bearing rein will soon be utterly abolished from India.—Times of India.

REWARD OF VALOUR.—Sepoy Nurbahadur, 43rd (Assam) Regiment of Native (Light) Infantry, has been admitted to the 3rd Class of the Order of Merit for conspicuous gallantry at the action of Konoma on the 22nd November, 1879, on which occasion, when a detachment of the regiment was advancing in skirmishing order to attack a breastwork held by the enemy, he rushed ahead under a heavy musketry fire and showers of spears, and was the first to climb over the breastwork and jump into the enclosure.—Gazette.

HINDI.—In order to encourage the study of Hindi the Maharaja of Darbhanga has offered the following prizes:—For the best original work on any scientific subject, Rs.200; for the best original work in poetry, Rs.150; for the best work in the form of a novel, Rs.150; for the best original work in the form of an essay, Rs.100.—Times of India.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—The seventeenth annual report of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles is in every way a satisfactory document. Not only is the corps still popular, but its efficiency is a matter about which the members may indulge in a little justifiable vanity. The regiment is stronger by 123 efficient members, and the capita- tion grant has swollen to the respectable sum of Rs.15,850. We are glad to notice that the number of "extra efficient" is on the increase, and has now reached a total of 294 in a strength of 673. So that more than 43 per cent. of the total strength is "extra efficient." The year opened with a strength on the rolls of the corps of 383. During the year there were 125 secessions and 172 recruits, so that at the end the strength stood at 450 men. The cadet companies also increased, having received 112 recruits against fifty secessions. The regiment stood at the end of the year with—volunteers, 430; cadets, 243; total, 673. Of the companies, A is the strongest in numbers, and amongst the cadets the I, or La Martiniere Company ranks, first in numbers, having 100 on its rolls. A Company, moreover, has fifty-nine extra efficient out of its total of seventy-six members. Of the 243 cadets 217 are efficient, and twenty-five extra efficient. Owing apparently to a change of range, the shooting figure for the corps has fallen from 117 to 114; but, on the whole, the regiment has not fallen off from its reputation for good shooting.—Times of India.

THE LATE MR. J. D. BELL.—It is with deep regret we announce the death, at the age of 55, of Mr. J. D. Bell, standing counsel for the Crown. Mr. Bell had been ailing a few days and expired on Sunday afternoon somewhat suddenly. Mr. Bell came to this country in the year 1849, and soon obtained a lucrative practice at the bar, which he enjoyed till the year 1866, when, owing to symptoms of impending failure of eyesight, he, under medical advice, left India. He subsequently exercised his profession in London, where he practised for the most part before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council till the long vacation of 1876. In the latter part of that year he again returned to Calcutta, and was shortly after appointed standing counsel for the Crown. During the greater portion of last year he acted as advocate general of Bengal, and sat in the Council of the Lieutenant Governor, reverting in November last, on the return of the Advocate General, to his permanent appointment as standing counsel. Mr. Bell had been ailing since Tuesday week, but his illness was not of a nature to cause alarm to his medical attendant or friends. On Sunday morning, however, he had an attack of apoplexy, to which he succumbed at 4 p.m. of that day. Mr. Bell was widely known as an able and kindly hearted advocate, and as a genial and warm-hearted friend. Many, on hearing of his death, will recall to mind his numerous and able speeches at the annual dinner of the Calcutta Trades' Association and on other public occasions, while many also will bear testimony to his able, but always strictly fair, advocacy in conducting cases, whether for or against them, in the courts of law. In short, to many and many a one, both here in India and at home, there will always be pleasant and sunny memories associated with the name of "dear old J. D. Bell." Mr. Bell's funeral took place on the 16th (morning) at six o'clock at the Circular-road Burial Ground. There was a large attendance of members of the Bar and others. The High Court was closed out of respect to the memory of the deceased, whose death was the subject of the following very touching and graceful speech by the Chief Justice (Sir Richard Garth):—"Since we last met here, Mr. Advocate General, both the judges and the bar of this court have sustained very grievous loss. We little thought, when we were making arrangements for his presence here to-day, that our good friend John David Bell was so soon and so suddenly to pass away from amongst us. We have not only been deprived of one of the brightest ornaments of the bar, who, for years past, has done his duty to the Government and the public with admirable talent, zeal, and fidelity, but we have all lost a warm and generous friend, an honest, highminded gentleman, who was always ready to do a kindly act whenever he could to a brother barrister, as well as to support the honour and integrity of the profession to which he belonged."—Englishman.

DR. KING.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned the grant of a special allowance of Rs.300 per mensem to Dr. G. King, superintendent of the Botanical Gardens, as ex officio superintendent of the cinchona plantation in British Sikkim, in addition to the substantive pay of his post, viz., Rs.1,500 a month. This concession, we believe, is to be considered as a personal allowance, and is not to be made applicable in the case of his successors.—Indian Daily News.

THE CALCUTTA PORT.—The Port Commissioners are about to lay out a sum of Rs.1,07,952 for improvements in their tramway, and the Lieutenant Governor has also sanctioned their raising a loan of five lakhs of rupees for the purchase of Armenian Ghat and the buildings thereon.—Pioneer.

BHOPAL.—The Begum of Bhopal has put a stop to the indiscriminate destruction of timber by establishing a Forest Conservancy Department. The Begum of Bhopal and the Kudsiah Begum have encouraged vaccination by employing a large number of vaccinators in the districts; 20,047 children have been vaccinated by them.—Pioneer.

MANUFACTURE OF CARTRIDGES.—The Commander in Chief has directed general officers commanding divisions and districts in Bengal to detail one or two non commissioned officers or soldiers from regiments of British and native infantry to be instructed in the manufacture of blank cartridges on Morris's system.—General Order.

IMPRISONMENT OF A COLPORTEUR.—It now appears that the native colporteur imprisoned by H.H. Holkar was only in gaol two days. He had previously been warned not to sell Christian books in the town, although permission was given to him to sell them in the camp at Indore.—Times of India.

THE PUNJAB COMMISSION.—Colonel Munro, commissioner of the Derajat Division, should, under the rules of the Pension Code, be called upon to retire from the service on August 20. Owing, however, to the war in Afghanistan, and the deputation of several officers beyond the front on political duty, the strength of the Punjab Commission is much reduced, and it is specially difficult to fill up vacancies which occur in the administration of the frontier districts. Although a considerable number of officers will be returning shortly from furlough the reinforcement of the ranks of the commission which will thus ensue will not begin till November 1 next. The Government of the Punjab have, therefore asked that, for the convenience of the public service, Colonel Munro be retained in his appointment till that date.—Pioneer.

FIRE AT SRINAGUR.—News comes from Cashmir of a great fire, which for a time threatened to destroy Srinagur. Over 150 houses were burnt down, and some people were killed and hurt. Owing to the city being built of wood the flames spread with great rapidity, and but for the exertions of the troops the damage would have been much greater. The Maharaja, with his heir apparent, the Dewan, and the Commander in Chief, gave valuable personal assistance to the efforts to save the city.—Times Telegram.

THE RAIN AND CROPS AT SIMLA.—Heavy rain has fallen, and some in the North West, relieving the anxiety for the crops. In the Punjab more rain is wanted. The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab leaves in three weeks for Kulu. He will meet the Viceroy at Lahore in November, where a durbar will be held.—Ibid.

MEETING OF COMPANIES.—At a meeting of the Chitpore Hydraulic Pressing Company held August 7. The report and accounts were duly passed.—Englishman.

THE DEATH OF MRS. HORACE BROWNE.—Rangoon society has just sustained a loss in the death of Mrs. Horace Browne, the wife of the Commissioner of Pegu. The deceased lady left this a few weeks ago for England with her husband and died at Madras on her way home.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

MYSOR.—A revulsion of feeling in favour of Mr. Runga Charlu at Mysor has taken place, and he is now considered a maligned man.—Times of India.

THE DOCTOR OF NEGAPATAM.—The following petition has been submitted to the Governor of Madras by the residents of Negapatam:—"That your petitioners have heard with much regret that it has been decided to remove the civil surgeon at present stationed in this town to Tranquebar, and to replace him by a warrant officer. That your petitioners respectfully beg a reconsideration of this decision on the following grounds. That the town of Negapatam is one of the largest in the Tanjore District and possesses a population within the municipal limits of over forty-eight thousand souls. That in the town of Negapatam are located the headquarters of the following Government officials—the sub-collector of Tanjore, the deputy and assistant commissioners of Salt Revenue, the executive engineer Public Works, the assistant superintendent of police, the deputy examiner of the P.W.D., the port officer, the court of the sub-judge of North Tanjore, and the emigration agent of the Straits Settlements; and to such officers it has been laid down to be 'the primary duty of a civil surgeon to afford aid.' Your petitioners beg further to state that the removal of the civil surgeon from Negapatam would deprive many families of a class of medical attendance to which they have been accustomed, and to whom it is a necessity. Under the present arrangement there is no difficulty on the part of the civil surgeon in affording medical assistance at Tranquebar in the few cases in which he is called upon to render it; whereas from the number of families residing in Negapatam it would be impossible to meet their demands for his services were he removed as ordered to Tranquebar."—Madras Times.

RETIRED COLONELS.—Three well-known old Madrassees have been added to the lengthening list of retired military officers by the attainment to colonels' allowances:—Cols. Buck, Elliot, and Marsack. Col. Buck has been in command of the forces in Rampa, having taken the mantle dropped by Col. R. Mnell, on the latter being compelled to give way from shattered health. All under his command speak in the highest terms of his courtesy, tact, and military discipline. He obtained his commission on August 20, 1842; and saw service early, having served with the expedition to China in 1857 and 1858, being present at the capture of Canton in the latter year, for which service he received the China medal. He has twice been favourably mentioned, once by the commander in chief in China in February, 1858, and again by the Madras commander in chief in May, 1865. The details of his services are as follow:—Ensign, August 20, 1842; lieutenant, Feb. 11, 1850; captain, Oct. 20, 1856; major, August 20, 1862; lieutenant colonel, August 20, 1868; colonel, August 20, 1873; aide de camp to General M'Leod, commanding Ceded Districts, April 9, 1858; acting deputy assistant quartermaster general Ceded Districts, Dec. 18, 1858; acting paymaster Northern District, Sept. 1859; acting deputy assistant adjutant general Northern District, Feb. 1860; acting commissary of ordnance, Vizagapatam, Dec. 1860; probatory superintendent of Madras police, and specially employed in raising the police force in the Vizagapatam District, May 9, 1861; commandant 20th N.I., May 26, 1876. In recognition of his long and unform good service Col. Buck was granted the £100 per annum, the reward for distinguished good service, and which he continues in receipt of; and he has now been allowed the rank of general commanding the forces in Rampa and Golcondah. Col. C. Scott Elliot entered the service on August 29, 1842, obtained his lieutenantancy on June 4, 1847; his captaincy, November 23, 1856; brevet major, August 29, 1862; major, July 10, 1843; lieutenant colonel, August 29, 1868; brevet colonel, August 29, 1873. He has held the following staff situations:—Adjutant 1st Madras Fusiliers, August 16, 1853; acting deputy assistant military auditor general, September 19, 1856; acting brigade major, Lucknow Garrison Column, June 12, 1858; brigade major, Fort St. George, March 27, 1860; assistant adjutant general Ceded Districts, March 21, 1867; acting deputy military secretary to Government, October 8, 1867; deputy military secretary, December 1, 1860; officiating pay examiner, March 14, 1871; officiating military accountant, Jan. 9, 1872; officiating commissariat examiner, Sept. 30, 1873; pay examiner, February, 1875; and lastly commissary general, Sept. 1, 1878. Col. Scott Elliott served in the Burmese war in 1852-53, was present at the destruction of the enemy's stockade on the Rangoon river, and at the operation in the vicinity and capture of Rangoon in April, 1852, and at the capture of Pegu in November of the same year. He commanded the advance guard of the force under Major General Godwin which relieved the Pegu garrison in December, 1852, for which services he was mentioned in despatches and recognised by the Government of India, receiving the Medal for Pegu. On the outbreak of the mutiny Col. Scott Elliott was again to the front, serving with the famous Madras Fusiliers from December, 1857, until the return of the corps to Madras. He was with Sir J. Outram's Corps of Observation at the Allum Bagh, at the capture of Lucknow and at the subsequent operation of the Oudh Field Force under Sir Hope Grant from June to December, 1858, receiving for these services the medal and clasp for Lucknow. Col. Scott Elliott served as deputy military secretary for a time, when his appointment was abolished. He then entered the Military Account Department, but having done so late in life, he had of necessity to hold a junior appointment until his Grace the Duke offered him compensation by appointing him commissary general. His Excellency the Commander in Chief showed his appreciation of Col. Elliott's services by awarding him last year the good service pension of £100. Col. Marsack, of the 35th Chicacole Light Infantry, entered the service in 1842, so that he completed the full period of thirty-eight years on the 20th ult.—Madras Times.

RIGI GHAT RAILWAY.—We are glad to learn that the Government has reconsidered the concessions it is prepared to make to the promoters of the Rigi Ghat Railway, and they are now of a more encouraging nature. It only remains to satisfy Government regarding the formation of the company and the raising of the necessary capital.—South of India Observer.

A SUBADAR CASHIERED.—Subadar Rungasawmy, of the "Queen's Own" Sappers and Miners, was tried last month at Thayetmyo by a native general court-martial for borrowing Rs.76 from a naique of the same corps and for being drunk. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to be dismissed the service. The sentence has been confirmed by the Commander in Chief.—Times of India.

A GOOD-SERVICE PENSION has, on the recommendation of the Government of India, been conferred by her Majesty's Government on Col. R. H. Bolton, Madras Staff Corps, vice Surgeon General G. Smith, retired.

SEVERE WEATHER.—Yesterday evening, August 15, at about half-past eight, a severe thunderstorm burst over Madras. The lightning was singularly vivid, and the thunder peals followed one another with startling rapidity. Torrents of rain seemed to fall, and we are somewhat surprised to find that only 1.64 inch was recorded. Messrs. Appacooty and Co.'s premises on the Mount-road were struck by the lightning, one of the outer doors being shattered and the glass panes of an inner door broken. The adjoining edifice, known as Lowe's-buildings, was also slightly injured. The grand mosque at Triplicane was also struck, and some damage was done to the building. Some of the worshippers who were detained in the building during the storm were thrown to the ground. There was, we learn, a heavy downpour of rain at Perambore at noon on Saturday, which lasted for three-quarters of an hour. From Bangalore accounts reach us of a week of heavy rain. On Thursday night, at nine o'clock, the thermometer marked eighty-three, but this most unusual heat was soon relieved by a heavy shower, which at once cooled the atmosphere. During Friday night the rain fell steadily, but Saturday night witnessed the most copious downpour that has been known in Bangalore for many months. Several houses in the Petta are said to have fallen during the night owing to the soaking rain.—Madras Mail.

BOMBAY.

THE PARSEES.—Several memorials having been forwarded by the Parsees of Bombay and the Mofussil, a bill has been introduced into the Legislative Council of India with a view to exempt the Parsees from certain provisions of the Administrator General's Act, 1874; and Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy was requested by Government to convene a meeting of the leading members of the community in order to ascertain their wishes with regard to the bill. A meeting was recently held at Mazagon Castle, when it was resolved to accept the bill, with one slight modification, as well calculated to effect the object prayed for. The "best and most grateful thanks" of the community were acknowledged to be due to the Government of India, as well as to the Bombay Government, for the prompt attention they had accorded to the prayer of the memorialists.—Bombay Gazette.

ICE MANUFACTURING.—Messrs. Forbes and Co., secretaries and agents of the very successful Bombay Ice Manufacturing Company, have issued a prospectus of a similar company to be formed at Puna. The capital of the new company is to be Rs.1,05,000, divided into shares of Rs.100 each. Six hundred shares are now offered, the calls on which are fixed as follows:—Rs.10 on allotment, Rs.25 on Sept. 15, Rs.25 on Oct. 15, Rs.25 on Nov. 15, and Rs.15 on Dec. 15. It is intended to erect a three-ton machine to start with, which will be supplemented by another should an increase of demand require it.—Ibid.

THE IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.—The weekly report of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, issued on Saturday last, brings the details of the trade to the end of July, and is very gratifying as showing a large increase in the exports of merchandise. As there have been no general complaints about business this year we may conclude that our merchants have had a good as well as an active season. For convenience of comparison we give the principal items in a tabular form:—

		Seven months, 1879.	Seven months, 1880.
Cotton	bales 551,978	816,036
Wool	" 40,228	59,506
Linseed	cwt. 421,931	1,400,318
Wheat	" 8,590	1,075,509
Coffee	" 90,969	106,895

It will be seen that cotton has increased 48 per cent., wool 47 per cent., linseed 230 per cent., wheat 12,304 per cent. (!), and coffee 18 per cent. No little part of the enormous increase in wheat shipment is owing to the opening of the short distance of the Rajputana Railway. There is still a good deal of wheat and seeds to go forward, and our stock of cotton here is much larger than for many monsoons, so that prospects for the rest of the year may well encourage our merchants.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MARMAGOA-HUBLI RAILWAY.—No news of any moment regarding the proposed Marmagao-Hubli line of railway. Mr. Sawyer, the head of the surveying staff, only left for England late in July with his plans and sections. I hear that the probable cost of the line is likely to exceed the estimate a good deal and will return but 2½ per cent. on the outlay. This the Duke of Sutherland and his committee will not, I think, consider a good investment, especially in India, and the project may after all drop through. Perhaps a line from Karwar will be selected, for it is now rumoured that the Portuguese Government will find it a difficult matter to raise the money required for the proposed railway, so far at least as that part of it which is to run through their territory is concerned. Three engineers have lately been sent from Belgaum to this district to survey the line which is to run from Gadag to Bellary.—Correspondent Bombay Gazette.

THE "MAHABLESHWUR" CASE.—Judgment in the Mahableswhur inquiry has been given. The court orders Capt. M'Kinnon's certificate to be suspended for nine months, and censures the conduct of Mr. Hawkins, chief officer. They have promised to consider whether the Board of Trade should be recommended to grant a mate's certificate to the captain.—Times of India.

The head of the political staff in Kattywar, Col. Barton, is about to retire. He will be succeeded by a civilian, Mr. J. Nugent, Secretary to the Government of Bombay.

RAO BAHADUR GOPALRAO HARI DESHMUKH has been, and Aga Ali Shah (son of his Highness Aga Khan) is about to be, appointed a member of the Bombay Legislative Council. These gentlemen will represent the Hindu and Mahomedan interests respectively.

HINDUS AND MAHOMEDANS.—There have recently been some disturbances between Hindus and Mahomedans of Goolburga, a place within the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad. A mixed commission of Europeans and natives appointed to inquire into the dispute met a few days ago, but were unable to proceed with the investigation on account of the opposition of a large mob of Mahomedans, who are reported to have destroyed a temple and committed other mischief. On the first disturbance being reported to Salar Jung he ordered a committee, consisting of three Europeans and three Parsees, to inquire into it and report fully on the case. It is while this committee is sitting that this last row has taken place. The Hindus disapproved of the European members, as they knew nothing about caste rules, &c., being engineers in H.H. the Nizam's P.W.D., and they petitioned the Nizam's Government to appoint one who had a knowledge of their caste rules and customs. Meanwhile the second disturbance broke out.—Deccan Herald.

EXPENDITURE ON PUBLIC WORKS.—In accordance with the policy of economy adopted by the Government of India last year a general order was issued that no new public work costing over Rs.2,500 should be undertaken without special sanction. Expenditure on public works in the Bombay Presidency during the official year 1879-80, under the heads "Imperial and Provincial," was accordingly restricted to that necessary for the continuance of works which had already made considerable progress, and to important minor works and repairs. According to the buildings and roads branch of the administration report which has just been issued the entire expenditure of the year in question was Rs.67,72,067. The expenditure in India was Rs.63,41,924, or, excluding local loans, Rs.62,59,246; of which, in round numbers, twenty-one lakhs were on new works, and twenty-six and a half lakhs on repairs. The balance for "establishment" is fourteen and a half lakhs, and for "tools and plant" half a lakh. Of the total sum spent in India, Rs.14,32,910 was on "imperial" and Rs.25,84,348 on "provincial" account, Rs.3,30,370 being contributions and Rs.19,11,618 local funds. The local loans, &c., amount to only Rs.82,678. All this expenditure resolves itself into three kinds—namely, military, civil, and communications. The entire expenditure in connection with the first named was Rs.9,35,548. This expenditure is distributed over fortifications, accommodation for troops, ordnance and military water supply. For instance, the water supply to the European Military Barracks at Colaba was improved at a cost of Rs.3,432, by laying additional service pipes and raising the service tanks, and at Butcher's Island, in the harbour, a gun-cotton magazine, a cable pond with corrugated iron shed, a tramway, and certain alterations to one of the barracks were undertaken in connection with submarine mining defences, the outlay for the year under report being Rs.17,500, although the total cost of the whole when completed will be Rs.30,227. The expenditure under the head of "Civil Buildings" was Rs.14,36,768, Rs.7,29,988 being for original works, and Rs.4,06,294 for repairs, the balance being for "Establishment" and "Tools and Plant." The total outlay on communications, including roads, bridges and accommodation for travellers, was Rs.32,60,277, of which Rs.8,09,805 was for original works, and Rs.16,14,057 for repairs; the remainder being for establishment (Rs.8,17,323) and tools and plant (Rs.19,092). Under the head of "Miscellaneous Public Improvements" Rs.10,56,796 was expended. It will be seen that, on the whole, the economical policy of the Government of India has been ably seconded by the Bombay Government during the year under report.—Times of India.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND MEETING.—The event of the week in India has been the great public meeting in Bombay on behalf of the Patriotic Fund, or, as it is called in Western India, the Military Relief Fund. H.E. the Governor came down from Puna to preside, and the Commander in Chief would have accompanied him but for the very heavy duties entailed upon him by the present state of affairs in Southern Afghanistan. The meeting was one of the largest and most successful public gatherings of the kind ever held in this country, every section of the population of Bombay being represented. In the course of his excellent speech, which by the way is the only speech he has delivered since his arrival in India, Sir James Fergusson reminded the meeting that the soldiers who are fighting their country's battle in Afghanistan are members of that army which has fitly represented the glory, the freedom, and the civilisation of their country all over the world. Those who live under the shadow of the British Government, who pursue their vocations without molestation from any one, are apt to forget how great are the blessings conferred by a powerful Government. In other times men's lives and property are insecure; in other times merchants are unable to amass their well-earned wealth without the risk of irregular exactions; and the cultivator never knows how he may be dragged away against his will to be a soldier, or see his property devastated by an invading army. In the times in which we live every man, from the highest to the lowest, has his rights protected without fear and without favour under the British administration. His Excellency went on to refer to the long and honourable association of British and native soldiers on the battle-fields of India, and beyond the sea in China and Persia; and, alluding to the Malta expedition, he remarked that native soldiers had even crossed the black water, to Europe, to redress an attempted wrong.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—The 13th N.I. arrived on August 17 from Mhow and embarked for Karachi en route for the front. The numbers that embarked were 7 Europeans and 14 native officers, 534 rank and file, 82 followers, 7 horses of the 13th Regt. N.I.; 6 officers, 130 rank and file, and 3 warrant officers of different regiments. The following are the names of the officers of the regiment and others who proceeded to Karachi in the Chinsurah:—Col. Mallaby, Lieut. Col. Castell, Major Grant, Captain Laing, Captain Walker, Lieut. Down, Surg. Major Halliday, 13th Regt. N.I.; Surg. Major Batty, 15-9 R.A.; Lieut. Wood, 15-9 R.A.; Surg. Reeves, 28th Regt. N.I.; Lieut. Aplin, 28th Regt. N.I.; Lieut. Soulez, 16th Regt. N.I.; and Captain Mayers, 66th Regt. Col. Sartorius has been appointed second in command of the 8th Bengal Cavalry, now on its way to join General Phayre's force. Col. Carey, R.A., commanding the Artillery in the Allahabad Division, has been appointed to command the Royal Artillery with General Phayre's reserve division.

The 78th Highlanders arrived at Karachi on Friday week in the best of health.

The following Madras medical officers have received orders to proceed to Bombay for duty with troops proceeding to the front:—Surg. Major A. C. Gaye, 14th Hussars; Surg. J. M. Cogan, R.A., Mount; Surg. E. A. Roche, Wellington Depot; Surg. J. Mulrenan, Centre District; Surg. A. Kirwan, St. Thomas's Mount.

The executive commissariat officer advertises that he will receive offers for the supply of one thousand country carts, leather ropes, spare wheels, &c.

The 13th Madras N.I. has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to march from Meean Meer to Kandahar.

It is stated that the 2-2nd Regiment (Queen's) are not to move from Bareilly, at all events at present.

MAJOR DE L. R. F. WOOLDRIDGE (of the 22nd N.I.) who has been connected with the transport work from the time Sir Richard Temple went to the front to look after the arrangements, has, we see, been promoted from general transport officer, 1st Division, Kandahar Field Force, to director of transport, 2nd Division, Kandahar Field Force. Next to Brigadier General Hogg, who was associated with General Burrows in the Quartermaster-General's Office for so long, there is probably no officer who has more experience of the difficulties of the work and knows better what is necessary to overcome them than Major Wooldridge.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE TOWN HALL MEETING.—The Samachar calls Tuesday's meeting a memorable event in the history of Bombay. The meeting was in every way a great success. The attendance, the dignity with which the proceedings were conducted, the zeal displayed, the large sums subscribed on the spot, and, above all, the leading part taken in it by Sir James Fergusson, all these conspired to lend additional importance to the occasion. Its most satisfactory feature is the collection of nearly half a lakh of rupees in half an hour. The Jam-e-Jamshed thinks that the proceedings at Tuesday's meeting showed that the public felt deep sympathy with the brave fellows who have fought and died in the country's cause. Though the war was commenced on imperial grounds, still one of the aims of the Government was certainly to check Russian aggression. This country has been repeatedly invaded through Afghanistan in times past, and it is the duty of the Government to guard against such invasion in these days. Our army, by fighting the Afghans, has not only served the British Government, but even the native States of India; and, therefore, the Jam-e-Jamshed hopes that native princes will not be behind-hand in showing by their contributions to the fund that they appreciate those services.

THE MILITARY RELIEF FUND.—An interesting question was raised at the meeting in the Town Hall, when Sir James Fergusson suggested that the balance of the fund raised after the Afghan war should be handed over to the secretaries of the present fund. It was found, however, that the balance of Rs.25,000, remaining from the Military Relief Fund of 1842 had been formed into a trust for the education of soldiers' children, and it is difficult to see how it could have been more appropriately applied. The Bishop of Bombay is, as he said on Tuesday, unable to divert the capital of the fund of which he is a trustee from its original purpose. But the interest of the money can be utilised, and we hope to hear that all the educational nominations afforded by the fund will be confined for a long time to the children of soldiers who have fallen in the present war. In addition to the balance of the old Military Relief Fund, which was formed into a trust fund, there is, we hear, a small balance of some Rs.1,000, which had accrued as interest before the money was applied to its present purpose, and this can probably be utilised at once.—Times of India.

THE MARRI ATTACK ON THE CONVOY AT KUCHOWLI.

The Pioneer's Simla correspondent says that further intelligence concerning the deplorable destruction of the convoy at Spintangi seems to show that it was the consequence of a misapprehension or disregard of orders on the part of the officer in charge, Major E. N. Peters, R.E. The instructions were that all stores along that portion of the railway line which was to be evacuated should, unless of a kind to be left for safe custody with the Maliks, be conveyed under a military guard to Pishin. But Major Peters at Sharing was slow in despatching his carts, and then sent them through the worst parts of the Pathan and Marri Hills towards Sibi. The escort merely consisted of 180 sepoy, though the carts contained, besides a quantity of heavy baggage, a lakh and half of treasure. Country rumours magnified this to ten lakhs, and the bait naturally drew together all the robber population of the hills. The carts were attacked in the pass between Kuchowli and Gundakin Duff. Their progress had already been impeded by heavy rain and floods in the Nari River. All the treasure and baggage were lost. The following extract is taken from the letters of the special correspondent of the Times of India:—"The convoy was coming down towards Sibi, but halted at Kuchowli for the purpose of allowing Lieut. Tobin and a party of the 23rd N.L.I. to reinforce the original escort, as the Murrees along the line were reported to be in an excited condition. While proceeding from Spingai, where he had been posted, to Kuchowli, Lieut. Tobin fell in with a body of Murrees, with whom he had a sharp encounter. The Murrees were eventually driven off, but not until Lieut. Tobin had been severely wounded in the left arm in a hand-to-hand encounter with one of the enemy's leaders. In spite of the wound he fought on gallantly until he cut down his opponent, and he then continued to direct and assist his men, receiving subsequently a cut on the forehead, which, fortunately, has not proved severe. When the convoy was attacked at Kuchowli, Lieut. Tobin with his party had joined the original escort, and the whole force of the party then numbered about 100 men of the 23rd N.L.I. and fifty sowars of the 2nd Sind Horse. The attack was commenced as the convoy left the camp; the Murrees, crowning the hills on either side, commenced firing, and, rushing down from the hills, were for some time so mixed up with the crowd of coolies and followers who accompanied the baggage that the troops were unable to open fire on them. When the actual struggle commenced the whole convoy was in a state of confusion, and, notwithstanding the efforts of Dr. Duke, the political officer, and Major Peters, R.E., who had taken command of the party when Lieut. Tobin was incapacitated by his wounds, no effectual resistance could be made. The flight which the coolies had already commenced soon became general, and had the Murrees continued the pursuit with the same vigour with which they had commenced it there is scarcely a doubt but that the whole of the troops and followers would have been cut up. The seizure of the booty abandoned by the fugitives proved, however, a task more agreeable to the enemy than the slaughter of their defeated opponents, and after the first two or three miles the chase was abandoned."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1880.

THE SESSION.

At the opening of the first session of this Parliament, which was concluded on Tuesday by the long-desired prorogation, we ventured to indicate the probable or possible measures or topics of direct Indian interest which would occupy the attention of the Legislature. We have to confess that the programme remains still one of imagination. This, however, cannot be said to have been the effect of any indifference on the part of the members of the Legislature to the great or small questions waiting for solution in the administration or policy of our Indian Empire. There has been necessitated by the sudden and startling development of affairs in Afghanistan a postponement of the settlement of difficulties and complications which, had they not been overshadowed, would have loomed large on the parliamentary horizon. A new Ministry found itself overmatched by the financial consequences of the phenomenal miscalculation in the Indian estimates, which naturally enough led to an endless series of suggestions and inquiries. We must do Sir George Balfour the justice to note that he, at the very outset of the previous short session, uttered his complete mistrust of the accuracy of the estimates which proved to be so erroneous. But the occurrence of this blunder and the consequent derangement of the Indian Budget perforce postponed the discussion of the Indian revenue and expenditure until a period when no more could be done than to give audience to the financial statement made as clearly as could be expected under the circumstances. There was also an opportunity afforded for an able defence to be made by Mr. Stanhope of the Administration of which he proved himself to be so earnest and useful a member. The discovery that, notwithstanding the outlay on the war and the predictions of the pessimistic economists, India could hold her own and pay her way, was opportune. The pressure for a commission of inquiry into Indian finance, although it might be welcomed as a safety valve for inopportune curiosity and empiric schemes of fiscal reform, has been wisely resisted, at all events for the present. At the same time, a check has been given to the expectant Indian supporters of the Liberal Government, who seemed to imagine that the first duty of the Legislature in regard to India was to abolish the taxation and annul the Acts of Parliament to which they manifested their dislike by frequent and lengthy petitions. Such expressions of opinion, even though it be the opinion only of a small section of our Indian fellow-subjects, should never be, and will never be, disregarded in the Houses of Lords and Commons of Great Britain. But the lesson which this session will have taught the Indian malcontents is that they have not quite mastered the duties of an opposition and the obligations of a Government. The questions which have been pressed on the not unwilling, but the over-tasked, attention of the Government, and have been postponed ad referendum to the Viceroy, have been of various importance. The Vernacular Press and Arms Acts, the License Tax, and the regulation of the Salt Tax have been left over for future consideration. But there are others of greater importance which have been squeezed out by the constant need of discussion and information on the Cabul and Kandahar difficulties—viz., our relations with the kingdom of Burma, the regulation of that realm of Kashmir which is something between a feudatory and a responsibility, or, again, the discussion of the report just presented by the Famine Commission, as well as that made on the vastly important question of the Indian army. All these waited, as they wait still, for the review of the Legislature. Inasmuch as the Vernacular Press Act admits of being used, with varying moderation from zero upwards, and the Arms Act has not resulted in an unusual consumption of human beings on the part of wild beasts, there is little or nothing to regret in their temporary oblivion. Of the other postponed questions which wait for more leisure on the part of the Government of India, and another session of the Legislature, it is only by the exceeding difficulty which has been experienced in getting not Indian measures only, but domestic and imperial interests also, attended to in the course of a session which commenced with a wretched wrangle about an obtrusive agnostic, and ended in what may be called an Irish row, that the neglect can be excused. The promise of fuller information on the subject of the Indian finances contained in the Royal Speech seems to point to careful preparation being made for some early action in the next session. We wish that we were sure that Lord Hartington's promise of a fuller and revised edition of all the documents that can be made public on the question of the campaign in Southern Afghanistan could be held to convey any assurance that no decisive conclusion would be arrived at as to the future of Kandahar. Lord Waveney's motion in the House of Lords, the able speeches in the House of Commons, together with the admirable arguments of the Patriotic Association, which have been further supplemented by letters in the columns of our contemporaries, have made it at least to be expected that Kandahar will be held at all events till there shall be an opportunity of fully debating the question of its ultimate settlement, and we have so far the assurance that no absolute decision had been arrived at by the Government of India up to the day when the opportunity of free and full discussion was closed by the prorogation of Parliament. That the legislative season, though not technically the late session, was marked in its first days by miserable imputations of unjust severities, nay, actual cruelties, cast upon General Roberts, and lasted long enough for the news of that general's brilliant exploits to be received in both Houses with the applause due both to the march and the victory, is more than a curious coincidence. The influence of the men who, because they nourish utopian predilections for peace at any price, seem to indulge in a belief that our officers and soldiers are capable of any crime, has been throughout the session manifested in various forms. It is hard to say whether they or the humanitarians deserve most credit for waste of time in useless questions and unprofitable suggestions. The latter, however, have made their usual attack on the opium revenue without succeeding in advancing any new arguments or correcting their habitual misrepresentation of facts. On the question of corporal punishment in India they have succeeded in eliciting considerable ridicule from those practically acquainted with the actual facts of the case, and it might be well for the gentlemen who think that they have discovered cruelty in Indian gaol discipline to utilise the recess by ascertaining what would be the effect on the victims of their merciful protection were they allowed to introduce their imaginary reforms. The session has been marked by a manifestation of religious rancour which, although the expression of it in debate was speedily brought to an end, has continued up to the very end to exhaust itself in petitions against the appointment of a Roman Catholic Viceroy. We have noted on several occasions the utterances of astonishment with which this sectarian display was received in India itself. Neither Lord Oranmore's parliamentary eloquence nor the concurrent protests of Exeter Hall, and the petitions which week by week were presented, have succeeded in convincing Anglo-Indians, or the native population, that the Government of India would be in any degree prejudiced by the Viceregal profession of faith. If the petitioners who fear evil results to the Christian inhabitants of India would combine to oppose the attempt made from time to time to attack and abolish the provision made for the spiritual wants of their fellow-countrymen and co-religionists, they would be using their religious zeal for some purpose. We cannot but regret that among the silences of the session we are obliged to reckon that which has almost completely prevailed with regard to the well-founded complaints of the Indian Medical Service. The officers of the Public Works Department, who have had occasion to complain of the hardships inflicted on them by economical reductions, may find consolation in the views enunciated by the Secretary of State. But it will be more difficult next session, than it might have been in that which has closed, to obtain a fair hearing and discover a remedy for the proved grievance of a service which has earned so much well-deserved honour in the annals of India.

THE DECCAN.—The state of affairs in the Deccan begins to cause serious anxiety. For two or three weeks there has been little rain over the greater part of the Bombay Presidency, and unless copious rain falls within the next few days there will be some reason to apprehend severe scarcity, if not an actual famine, over an area almost co-extensive with that affected in 1876. The three districts in which the danger is greatest are Ahmednuggur, Puna, and Sholapore; but although the situation must cause grave anxiety, it is yet too soon to give way to a panic. A telegram received on Saturday tells of rain in Sholapore and Kaladgee, and some showers have fallen during the last week in the country from Dharwar to near Puna. This may be sufficient to save the khariff crop, which is reported to be withering in many places. A good rain during the current month will save the rabi or winter crop, and so long as that is not lost there is little danger of an actual famine. The rain-fall at Puna during June and July was nearly 6in, and at Ahmednuggur nearly 5in. below the average. The Bombay Government seems to be on the alert and ready to undertake relief measures if necessary.—Times Telegram.

REPORT OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND COMMISSIONERS.—

The eighteenth report of the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund has been issued. It states that the total amount of contributions on Dec. 31, 1879, was £1,460,862. A short general statement of the disposition of the fund shows that the amount of contributions received, including some for special purposes, was £1,466,000, and dividends, interest, the result of changes in investments, exceeded £1,502,000 more, making a total of £2,968,000. The expenditure shows the following items:—In the purchase of annuities, £668,000; to widows and orphans, including payments for children in asylums, for educational, sick, and other allowances, £1,518,500; purchase of nominations to various schools and asylums, £46,000; for the Royal Patriotic Asylum for Girls, £218,100; Royal Victoria Patriotic Asylum for Boys, £61,200; expenses of management, including salaries, allowances to staff officers of pensioners, and sergeants &c., £96,100; showing a total expenditure of £2,607,900. The actuaries' estimate of the value of the capital remaining is £355,300, and there is a cash balance of £4,800. The usual estimates of the assets and liabilities have been prepared by Mr. Finlaison, the actuary. They show—liabilities, £452,945; assets, £469,826. It will be seen that, according to his calculation, the assets of the fund cover its original liabilities, and leave a small surplus of £12,587. The commissioners thought proper, however, to direct in 1874 that a sum of £30,000 should be set aside for the clothing, maintenance, and education of Roman Catholic orphans. The interest is so applied, but the capital sum is not covered by the surplus, nor will it meet accruing claims to the additional allowance granted since 1868 to widows on attaining the age of sixty. The commissioners have directed the subject to be gone into in greater detail, and in the meantime have ordered the interest of the sum set apart for an endowment of the boys school, which is at present accumulating, to be paid into the general fund until they are more fully informed.

HOME NEWS.

ISLAM IN ENGLAND.—Mr. Syud Sharfuddin writes on this subject:—"Monday morning, September 6, was the great festival of 'Id-ul-Fitr among the Mahomedans. The morning of that day saw nearly the whole of the Mahomedan world bending themselves down in worship of the same God. This is the first day after our Lent, if I may be allowed to call our days of fast by that name. On this occasion particularly there are gatherings in different parts of the world to offer up prayers for the welfare of the 'Commander of the Faithful,' in other words, the 'Ameer-ul-Mumeneen.' On that day, for the first time, there was a tolerable good gathering of the Indian Mahomedans residing in this country for the purpose of celebrating the festival. There being no mosque in this country—but we hope we shall soon have one—an Indian Mahomedan gentleman had lent his private residence at Notting-hill for the occasion."

LIEUT. MACLAINE.—We have received the following extract from Battery Orders by Major W. Ward, commanding 1 Battery, 2nd Brigade, R.A.:—"Athlone, Sept. 6.—It is with deep regret that Major Ward has read the announcement in the telegrams from India of the murder of Lieut. MacLaine, E Battery, B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, near Kandahar, while a prisoner of war in the hands of the Afghans. The deceased officer joined the late B Battery, 18th Brigade, now 1 Battery 2nd Brigade Royal Artillery, in India, soon after entering the service in 1872, and remained with the battery until 1878, when he was appointed to the Royal Horse Artillery. By those who knew him he will be remembered as an officer of singularly soldierlike qualities, winning the regard and esteem of all with whom he was associated. All ranks of his old battery have now to deplore his untimely end, and in paying their tribute of respect to his memory the battery would also express their sympathy and condolence with his bereaved relatives. Of the late Lieut. MacLaine it may be truly said, 'He died at the post of duty.'"

PENSIONS OF COMPANY'S OFFICERS.—A correspondent seeks to ventilate what, in the columns of a morning contemporary, will be generally admitted to be a great injustice, which he thus describes:—"In all branches of her Majesty's naval and military services, and, I believe, also in all civil branches of the public service, officers and others entitled to pension no retirement are allowed, should they wish to do so, to commute their pensions. The solitary exception to this almost universal rule is in the case of officers in her Majesty's service who, prior to the amalgamation, in 1862, were in the East India Company's service. The only reply to applications to the India-office on the subject is that to allow such pensions to be commuted is contrary to practice. Why should this privilege, which is granted in all other cases, be denied to these officers? It is only in very few cases that officers would wish to commute their pensions, as they would generally incur pecuniary loss by doing so; but in some individual cases, where a little capital is almost a matter of life and death, this privilege would act most beneficially. The State can in no case be a loser by permitting officers to capitalise their pensions. Why, then, is this boon denied in this solitary instance?"

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs. 30,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs. 29,95,000; and to Madras, Rs. 5,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 18. 8½d. will receive about 52 per cent., above that price in full. Compared with last week, this price shows no alteration. The same amount will be tendered for next Wednesday.

OBITUARY.—Lieut. Col. George John Davies Heath, of the Madras Staff Corps, and formerly of the 38th Madras Native Infantry, and deputy assistant commissary general, died at 6, South-parade, Southsea, of dysentery on the 3rd inst., in his 49th year. He served with the Saur Field Division in Central India, and was present at the relief of Kirwee, the subsequent assaults upon the heights of Punwarree, and defeat of the rebels on December 29, 1858 (medal with clasp). He became lieutenant colonel in 1876.

STAFF COLLEGE.—The following will be the subjects of examination in military history and geography at the examination for admission to the Staff College to be held in June, 1881:—1. The campaign in France in 1814, with battles of La Rothiere and Laon in detail. Candidates will be expected to have a general knowledge of the geography of the country. 2. The general principles of war. Text-books: Jomini—"L'Art de la Guerre;" Hamley—"Operations of War."

CADETSHIPS AT THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE.—The following circular has been issued by the War-office:—"An examination for cadetships at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, will take place at the University of London, Burlington-gardens, W., on Monday, Nov. 29, and following days; the first day being devoted to the medical examination of the candidates. There will be 110 cadetships to be competed for, of which ten will be for candidates for West India Regiments. Twelve cadetships will also be offered for competition by university candidates. The successful competitors will be required to join the Royal Military College, as gentlemen cadets, on Feb. 10, 1881. Applications cannot be received unless made in strict accordance with the regulations, Oct. 15 next being the latest date on which applications can be received. Candidates who have been previously examined should forward with their applications a certificate of good conduct for the intervening period. If intending competitors wish for any further information relative to the examination they should apply by letter to the Military Secretary, Horse Guards, War-office, S.W."

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 4.

KANDAHAR.

Mr. BRADLAUGH asked the Secretary of State for India whether it would be possible at an early date to publish a list of the names of the killed and missing of the rank and file in the engagements under General Burrows and in the sortie at Kandahar.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had received a telegram from the Viceroy on this subject, but the returns were not complete. General Primrose had been telegraphed to for information with regard to the matter, but no particulars had been received.

Mr. ONSLOW asked the Secretary of State for India whether he could now state, without detriment to the public service, whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government permanently to occupy Kandahar.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The Government have not been able to come to any decision other than that which was announced some time ago. Certain recent events have not diminished, but, on the contrary, rather increased, the difficulty of coming to an immediate decision as to our future relations with Kandahar.

KUSHK-I-NAKHU.

On the order for the third reading of the Appropriation Bill, Lord R. CHURCHILL said that it would be ungracious and ungenerous on the part of any member of the Opposition if he were, while calling into account the conduct of affairs in Southern Afghanistan, not to allude to the great victory which had just been gained by our troops. He must offer to the noble marquis his congratulations on the result of that famous march of General Roberts. He willingly recognised the brilliant success which had attended the calculations of the Indian Government. In such curious times as these, when it was the fashion to sneer at and deride military renown, he thought it was especially gratifying to find that the country still had at its command skilful and accomplished generals, and the successes which they had achieved were legitimate sources of pride to the British name. He would call the particular attention of the House to the telegram (No. 3) from Kandahar to the Foreign Secretary at Simla. (The noble lord then entered into the details of the telegrams which appeared in the papers of Saturday, and commented on the instructions given by the Viceroy to General Primrose not to allow any of the enemy's forces to cross the Helmund.) He would also express his great regret that the forces under General Phayre had been practically useless, owing to the plans which had been followed. The noble marquis opposite had more than once impressed upon the House that Lord Lytton's Government were involved in the disasters that had taken place, on the ground that they had made no preparations for securely defending Kandahar. But he held that among the telegrams one would be found showing that this charge could not justly be made, as it contained instructions to the reserve division at Karachi to proceed to Kandahar. The present Viceroy, he maintained, was informed day by day that the Wali's troops were perfectly unreliable, and yet he made no modifications in his plans. On July 13 the Viceroy knew that the Wali's troops had so far confirmed the information he had previously received from Col. St. John that three of the officers of that force had mutinied. The Viceroy also knew from Col. St. John that the march of Ayub Khan towards Herat was now definitely set on foot, and that the Helmund, which the brigade of 2,000 men under General Burrows was to defend, was fordable everywhere. In spite of this knowledge, however, no change was made in the orders given to General Burrows. On July 12 Col. St. John telegraphed to the Viceroy that Ayub was close upon that general. On the 14th the mutiny of the Wali's troops took place. What did the House think of the fact that an officer who was seventy miles from Kandahar, and who was told to coerce the Wali's rebellious troops, and to oppose the large army of Ayub Khan, had among his instructions an order not to cross the Helmund? Had the force of General Burrows been allowed to cross that river on the 10th, 11th, 12th, or 13th of July a very slight effort would have sufficed to disarm the mutineers. Thus, through these fatal instructions that the British troops were not to cross the Helmund, the Wali's troops were able to mutiny, and to mutiny with impunity. On July 13 General Burrows decided to break the Viceroy's orders, and he determined to cross the Helmund on the 14th, in order to disarm the rebellious troops, but it was then too late to do so. On the further side of the Helmund was the fort of Girishk, where the Wali had for a considerable time been accumulating stores for the support of the advance division of our troops. Now, fettered by the Viceroy's orders, neither Col. St. John nor General Burrows took steps to protect this vast accumulation of stores, which were destroyed by the mutinous troops. Never was a more disastrous order given than the instruction from Lord Ripon to General Burrows not to cross the Helmund. On the 15th or 16th of July the Viceroy knew that the Wali's troops had mutinied, and that Ayub Khan had 12,000 men.

But no fresh orders were given to General Burrows, who was left there as before, and had to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud. Having received orders that no hostile force was to be allowed to cross the Helmund, and knowing that Ayub had crossed, General Burrows seemed at length to have grown desperate, and to have delivered, as a forlorn hope, the attack on July 26 which ended so disastrously. Twelve hundred effective soldiers were killed or were missing, and among them one of the finest British regiments, consisting of tried and picked soldiers, had been annihilated, as well as nineteen officers of great skill, while 400 Martini-Henry rifles, 700 Sniders, two guns, and every scrap of ammunition had been captured or destroyed. Such was the nature of the event as to which he asked the House not to separate without some explanation from the Government. The losses he had mentioned, moreover, great as they were, did not include the camp followers, who were probably as numerous as the fighting force. They had a despatch from Colonel St. John, dated July 17, but they had none from General Burrows or from the Commander in Chief relating to the mutiny of the Wali's troops on the 14th. It seemed to him unaccountable that despatches on that subject should not be produced. There must, at all events, be one from General Burrows in the hands of the Government here or in India. On whose shoulders did the responsibility for the defeat of General Burrows fall? The House, on entering upon the consideration of this question, was confronted at once by the fact that the Viceroy had given positive orders for a force of 2,000 men to meet an army of at least 8,000, and to defend an indefensible river. (Hear, hear.) The idea of leaving General Burrows to operate, so to speak, en pair with 2,000 men, at a distance of fifty miles from Kandahar, with which his communications were only of the most imperfect character, was preposterous. He feared that the Viceroy had ordered operations which he ought to have known could not have been carried out by so inadequate a force, and until General Burrows was defeated, and in spite of warning information received from Col. St. John, he had taken no effective steps to cause General Burrows to fall back. The noble marquis had said the other day that it was easy to be wise after the event, but he ventured to think that, with the information possessed by Lord Ripon, it might have been possible to be wise even before the event, and to have checked the advance of Ayub Khan. The Viceroy knew perfectly well how serious would be the consequences, direct and indirect, of a disaster, and yet he had all but courted a misfortune for which he was in no way prepared. Telegrams had been sent asking for reinforcements, five troopships had been despatched, and the hazardous march of General Roberts had been found necessary. It was also to be remembered that if Ayub Khan had had any energy—and, of course, his inaction was not foreseen—in all human probability Kandahar would have been taken and we should have been hurled back as far as, if not beyond, Quetta. Providentially time was given for the march of General Roberts and the advance of General Phayre; but no success, however brilliant, could blind the country to the risks that had been run. Of course a heavy responsibility rested upon Lord Ripon, whose first important act as Viceroy had ended disastrously. It was to be regretted, perhaps, that the subject should be discussed on what was practically the last day of the session, but it was very desirable to have an official explanation of the extraordinary facts to which he had called attention. He moved—"That the disaster sustained by General Burrows on July 26, far exceeding in magnitude any reverse which has befallen the British arms for more than a quarter of a century, is mainly attributable to the want of foresight, military knowledge, and caution on the part of the Indian executive."

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that he did not regret the motion, which gave an opportunity of making an explanation due in justice to Lord Ripon and the officers conducting the campaign. The papers were, however, still incomplete, and no despatches from Generals Burrows and Primrose had been received at home. He regretted the omission of a number of military telegrams, which showed that the military authorities had not been superseded. On the examination of the information received he thought it would be fairer to present no further papers till despatches could be published containing full accounts. He fully admitted that the country would not rest till it knew where the responsibility lay of one of the most serious disasters which had befallen our arms in recent years, and one which was discreditable to our military character. About a fortnight after Lord Ripon arrived at Simla he was informed that Ayub Khan's advance, which had been spoken of months previously, had actually occurred. Lord Ripon obtained the best military advice at his disposal, and he acted upon it. Lord Hartington did not understand the first telegram in the papers to be of an interrogatory character, but as information of what the Viceroy intended to do. It did not appear to require an answer. In a few days the Government, however, telegraphed their decision. No doubt the home authorities were responsible for the military conduct of the campaign. He did not conceive he should be doing his duty in giving any advice to a Viceroy on military matters who was amply provided with military advice. If the telegram omitted had been included in these papers it would have shown that reinforcements were energetically pushed forward. He could state to the House with the utmost confidence that from the day the order was given no effort was spared by the Government at Simla, by the Government at Bombay, or by the Commander in Chief at Bombay to push forward reinforcements with all possible speed. The noble lord said that everything had been ruined by orders given to General Burrows not to cross the Helmund. The conclusion at which the noble lord had arrived had been derived from an extract of the military diary of events, containing only the briefest summary of the instructions that were issued. No doubt the intention was that General Primrose should oppose the advance of Ayub Khan. It was not intended he should undertake operations of an extended character on the other side of the River Helmund. He had every reason to believe that the military discretion of General Primrose and General Burrows was greater than was at present supposed. Complete information should be published without favour or partiality to any person concerned, whether it reflected upon the Government or anybody else. He believed that when full information was before the House it would be seen that the Government acted on the advice of the responsible military officers concerned, that sufficient freedom of action was left to the officers concerned, that up to the last moment there was no expression of doubt as to the measures to be taken, that reinforcements were pressed forward with all the energy that was possible, and that responsibility should be divided between the Government of India and the officers who were responsible.

Sir H. WOLFF said there was no wish to throw any blame on Lord Ripon, especially after the answer of the noble marquis, which was as full as circumstances permitted. But he would point out that it was perfectly clear that the orders to General Primrose were that there was to be no crossing the Helmund. Of course, as the noble marquis asked them to suspend their judgment on the Government of India they had no alternative but to suspend that judgment. The object of his noble friend had been secured in bringing the remarkable papers before the House. Under the circumstances he did not think it would be judicious to press the motion.

Lord R. CHURCHILL said the reply of the noble lord had precluded him from going further. The noble lord's remarks, in fact, rather tended to disarm him. He had given public notice of his motion, but the noble lord did not think proper to request him not to bring the subject before the House.

Sir G. CAMPBELL said it was quite clear that it was the Government of Lord Lytton and not the Government of Lord Ripon that was responsible. It was the former Government which maintained the force at Kandahar and provided the reserves for that force. What had happened in 1880 was exactly what had happened in 1841. The troops of our protégé had been turned against us and brought disaster upon us in 1880 as in 1841. The censure was due, not to Lord Ripon, who had barely entered upon office, but to Lord Lytton.

Sir W. PALLISER said that he had not intended to speak, especially after the speech of the noble marquis, and of the deputation to the noble marquis of which he had formed a part. But when it was attempted to transfer all blame from Lord Ripon to Lord Lytton he was bound to remind hon. members that the present Government had been in power since April. He wished also to deny emphatically that he had ever stated that General Roberts would not arrive at Kandahar. On the contrary, he had always felt sure that he would arrive there, but that was no reason why any means of precaution should be neglected. All that he had done was to write a letter to the press pointing out an existing danger and commenting on the inaction of General Phayre.

The motion was then withdrawn.

EAST INDIA REVENUE ACCOUNTS.

The debate on the East India revenue accounts resolution was resumed, and the resolution was agreed to.

On the motion that the resolution should be reported to the House,

Sir G. BALFOUR regretted that he could not at that period of the session bring certain points in reference to the East India revenue accounts under the consideration of the House. He felt so entirely the inconvenience of prolonging the present sitting that although he was most anxious to make a full statement on the subject of Indian finance he would of his own accord at once conclude his observations.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON assured his hon. and gallant friend that he greatly regretted it was not possible to bring on this question earlier in the session. He was deeply indebted to his hon. and gallant friend for the important evidence he had given before the committee now sitting at the India-office, and he would take care that, although his statement had not been made in the House, it should receive the fullest consideration.

The House resumed, and the resolution was reported.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY, SEPT. 7.

The Parliament was prorogued by royal commission. The Queen's speech referred to Indian affairs as follows:—"I have not been unmindful during the few months which have elapsed since I last addressed you of the considerations which I have stated would guide my policy on the North Western frontier of my Indian Empire. Measures have already been taken for the complete military evacuation of North Afghanistan, and some progress has been made towards the pacification and settlement of the country. A renewal of hostilities by the Afghans, under Ayub Khan, has rendered necessary further military operations in Southern Afghanistan. The prompt measures taken by the Government of India for the relief of the garrison of Kandahar, and the conspicuous ability and energy displayed by my officers and troops in the execution of those measures, resulting in the brilliant victory recently gained by the gallant force under the command of Sir Frederick Roberts, will, I trust, speedily bring to an honourable termination the war in that division of the country. I regret that it has not hitherto been possible to give you such information on the general state of Indian finance and the recent miscarriages in presenting the accounts of military expenditure as you would justly require before entering on a practical consideration of the subject. You may, however, rest assured that I shall redeem my pledge to supply you with this information at the earliest period in my power."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, SEPT. 7.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

A petition was presented by Mr. A. Arnold, from D. Macgregor, at Aden, surgeon major, Bombay Army, for redress of grievances, East India (Army Medical Department).

ATTACK ON THE STEAMSHIP "KHALIFET."

In answer to Mr. Arnold, Sir C. DILKE said: A despatch recently received from her Majesty's Consul General at Bagdad states that a military force had been despatched by the Governor General against the Arab tribe which attacked the Khalifet, and it was hoped that the steps taken would very shortly result in the suppression of the revolt and the punishment of the guilty parties.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA—DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

SIMLA, JULY 30, 1880.—The Governor General in Council understands that it is not probable that Mr. Monteath will return to public duty in India. His Excellency in Council therefore desires to place on record his high sense of the value of Mr. Monteath's public services during the twenty-three and a-half years which have passed since he signed his covenant with the Hon. the Court of Directors of the East India Company. During that period Mr. Monteath has been absent on leave for about two and a-half years. He was employed for some four years as under secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department, and has been for thirteen years as Director General of the Post-office. The Governor General in Council has not forgotten the good services rendered by Mr. Monteath in the Home Department, but it is for his administration of the Post-office that he will be chiefly remembered. Mr. Monteath has devoted exceptional abilities and unsparing industry and energy to the development of the Post-office, with a success which his Excellency in Council desires to acknowledge cordially. Under his administration the number of post-offices has risen from 2,205 to 5,422; the length of postal lines has increased from 47,929 to 57,954 miles; the revenue of the department, exclusive of official postage, from Rs.40,75,213 to Rs.65,92,031, and the number of covers delivered from 59,849,000 to 131,899,000. Mr. Monteath's administration has been marked by an earnest desire to utilise the resources of the post-office for the public convenience, and he has ever advocated the most liberal concessions financially possible. If the extent of the Indian Empire be considered, and the still backward state of the communications in many parts, there is not, it is believed, a cheaper or more efficient postal service in the world. The continual expansion of the department has been achieved only by an unremitting and intelligent attention on Mr. Monteath's part to detailed reforms which have attracted little public notice, but which, it is believed, few officers would have been as competent to effect. In his negotiations with the British Post-office, and with the post-offices of foreign countries, Mr. Monteath has ever manifested a jealous regard for the interests of British India, coupled with a liberal readiness to facilitate communications with foreign countries by every means in his power. Among the special measures for which Mr. Monteath's administration of the post-office will be remembered are the first compilation of the Postal Guide and Post-office Manual, and the issue of repeated editions of these works, the organisation of the system of sorting the mails on board the mail steamer between Suez and Bombay, and of travelling post-offices on the railways in India, the introduction of the Post-office Mutual Guarantee Fund, the provision of a system of insurance for the delivery of valuable articles entrusted to the Post-office, the value-payable system, and lately the money-order system. Under this system, which is the latest illustration of the peculiar powers of detailed organisation for which Mr. Monteath is distinguished, internal remittances from the public through the State have been increased six-fold in six months. With Mr. Monteath at the head of the Post-office, the Government of India has felt perfect confidence that the department would be managed with efficiency, liberality, and credit to the State, and its confidence has not been disappointed. The Government of India cannot part with this distinguished officer without sincere regret.

AYUB KHAN'S ADVANCE.

THE official correspondence respecting Ayub Khan's advance on Kandahar has been issued, commencing with the telegram dated June 27, which reported Ayub's advance "with a large force," and stated that the Viceroy intended to order General Primrose to advance with sufficient force to prevent the passage of the Helmund. The following telegram was on June 28 sent from the Resident at Kandahar to Simla:—"Letters from Herat of June 5 report that Ayub had some time before sent 1,200 letters to Cabul, addressed to different chiefs and officers, announcing his approach with a powerful army. Informant reports Ayub more than ever in the hands of the Cabulis, and personally unwilling to make any move; also expresses disbelief that any move will be made, and predicts that if it does the Herat and Cabuli troops are sure to quarrel before they have gone far." On July 2 the Resident at Kandahar telegraphed to Simla:—"Ayub Khan appears to have left Herat finally about the 18th, and to have reached Furrah about the 24th. He has with him 2,500 horse, including 900 regulars, ten regiments of infantry, varying from 350 to 500 men each, and six batteries of artillery, including at least one mule battery. He is said to be well provided with ammunition, except caps, of which a supply expected from Meshed had been seized by the Persian authorities at the frontier. A party of 1,000 cavalry under the Luinab, Khudil Khan, are four or five days' march in frontier, and at date of latest report were in Bakwa. Before leaving Herat the Ulemas assembled in a mosque and invested Ayub with title of Ameer. He has also had money coined in his name." On July 7 the agent of the Viceroy at Quetta telegraphed to Simla:—"I have received information from fairly reliable sources to the effect that Ayub's march on the Helmund is not so much with the object of fighting with Shere Ali as to keep the country in a state of anarchy, and make its administration and collection of revenue as difficult as possible. Ayub will, if he can, avoid fighting with the British troops. Sirdar Abdulla Khan, Nassar, is with Ayub Khan, and is said to have been mainly instrumental in adjusting the differences existing between the Herat and Cabuli troops, which formerly prevented the march of Ayub's army. Dissensions still exist. One of Wali Shere Ali's regiments is said to have deserted." Three days later the agent reported that "the march of the Herat army under Ayub Khan towards the Helmund has caused much excitement in country, but the impression seems to be that Ayub Khan does not intend to oppose the British."

The following account of the mutiny of the Wali's troops, sent by Col. St. John on July 17:—"The next morning, after consultation with the Wali as to the possibility of feeding the troops at Girishk, I reluctantly came to the conclusion to recommend General Burrows to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud, whither the Wali had sent the whole of his sows the night before. The position of Kushk-i-Nakhud offers many advantages. Should the enemy cross at Girishk and follow the road we came, he would have to meet us either in an entrenched position here or on ground of our own choosing, covering the first water-course on this side of the desert which separates us from Girishk. Should he take the northern road, he would have to meet us at Maiwand, ten miles off, or, if he keeps to the river line, the Argandab is less than that distance to the south. In fact, we are half way between the mountains to the north and the sandy deserts to the south, at the point where these approach each other most nearly. Should Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan carry out what is, according to some reports, his intention of moving to Tirin and Darawut, and stirring up the country from there, the situation would be entirely changed, and the presence of so large a force here useless. In conclusion, I have the honour to make a few remarks with reference to the effect on the country of this so far successful invasion. It is well known to you that for many months Ayub Khan and his partisans have used every effort to inflame the religious and patriotic feelings of his chiefs and people against us and our protégé Shere Ali Khan. These had apparently little or no effect at the time, and as long as the possibility of an invasion from Herat seemed more than remote, particularly after the failure of the first attempt. But the actual presence on the frontier of an army of their own fellow tribesmen, under a prince of their recent ruling family, the memory of whose oppression a year and a half of prosperity has sufficed to obliterate from the minds of this fickle people, has, I have reason to suspect, created a more powerful and general feeling in Ayub's favour than one who had only known Kandahar a year ago would believe possible; and it is far from improbable that unless Ayub Khan's army be defeated and dispersed at once, something very like a general rising may take place. That this could attain the formidable dimensions which have been reached in Cabul, the unwarlike character of the modern Durani and the physical features of the country forbid, but it may cause considerable trouble and annoyance and involve somewhat extended operations." On August 3 the Government of India sent to Lord Hartington particulars of the defeat of General Burrows' force, and stating "The report that the whole of General Burrows force had been annihilated, which was transmitted to England, and which is inconsistent even with the few details contained in the first account of the affair at Kandahar, seems to have been founded upon a telegram sent direct by General Primrose to the Bombay Government. Nevertheless, the account of the action received this morning from Col. St. John by a telegram, dated Kandahar, 29th, leaves no doubt that the British force encountered an enemy greatly superior in numbers, well posted, and of formidable strength in artillery and cavalry, that our force was defeated, and that it fell back in great disorder on Kandahar, suffering heavy loss during the retreat, mainly through the exhaustion of the troops."

THE COCOANUT FESTIVAL.—The great Cocoonut Festival of the Hindus was celebrated on Thursday in Bombay with all the customary ceremony; and, the weather being extremely favourable for outdoor amusements, the streets of the city from an early period in the afternoon were crowded with people, all wending their way in the direction of the Fort, where the principal interest centred. The fair was held as usual on the open ground between Rampart-row and the Esplanade, and a thriving business was done by the numerous stallkeepers in European and native toys and other articles which were offered for sale. As in former years, Mody Bay was the principal place resorted to by devout Hindus for throwing their offerings of cocoanuts and flowers into the sea; but the sea face, near the Church Gate Station, was also used for the same object. A large force of European and native police were concentrated in the Fort for the purpose of regulating the traffic in the streets, and by means of the supervision thus provided the thoroughfares were kept as clear for vehicular traffic as the enormous number of pedestrians would allow. The day passed off without a serious casualty of any kind, and in every respect the festival was as successful as in former years.—Times of India.

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

ASH'S "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines, from 50s. each.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

Ash's Freezing Powders, 34s. per cwt., or in Boxes at 11s., 22s., and 40s. each.

THE SELF-FEEDING REFRIGERATOR.

PATENTED BY MR. CLARKE
ASH, 1872.

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, a uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1884.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken, and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines: when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 28; Madras and Allahabad, August 26; Calcutta, August 25.

The reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 17 state that in Bengal, Assam, Burma, Rajputana, Oudh, and the Central India States prospects continue favourable, though more rain is said to be wanted at Morar and Sutna, where, however, there was, in each case, a fair fall in the preceding week. The accounts from the Punjab are also satisfactory, except in the Peshawur district. In the North West Provinces and the Central Provinces the rain has been slight in most districts, though heavy in a few. Prospects are generally good, except in Nimar. In Allahabad, Agra, Nagpur, Saugor, and Seoni more rain would be beneficial. There is a distinct improvement in the Madras Presidency and in Mysor. Rain has fallen in the Kolar and Tumkur districts, where it has hitherto been very deficient. From parts of several Madras districts complaints still come that crops are withering for want of rain; but the fall has been general, and in some places fairly abundant, so that crops previously suffering have revived. In Berar rain is still much needed at Amraoti. In the Bombay Presidency water is required for the autumn crops in Sind, and more rain is urgently wanted in the Deccan districts. There have, however, been slight and partial showers during the week in Puna, Ahmednuggur, and Sholapore. On the whole, prospects are good in the Eastern, Central, and Northern Provinces; in Southern India they have improved; and it is only in parts of Western India that the want of more rain is as yet urgent.

The health report for the same week is as follows:—
Bombay: Public health generally good; fever of mild type in Karachi and Hyderabad, North West Provinces, and Oudh; cholera decreased in Allahabad city, but increased in the district, and also in Lucknow; fever in Meerut, otherwise health fairly good. Punjab: Health generally good. Central Provinces: Small-pox continues in some districts, and cholera reported from Shambalpur. British Burma: With the exception of a little small-pox, public health good. Assam: District healthy. Mysor and Coorg: Health good. Central Indian States: Health good. Rajputana: Health good.

We have received the following telegram from the India-office for publication:—

"FROM VICEROY, SIMLA, SEPT. 12.—A brigade of Cabul-Kandahar force, under General Macgregor, marched from Kandahar on Sept 8 for Killa Abdula to ease pressure regarding supplies. General Roberts goes with it, and will meet Sandeman at Killa Abdula to discuss questions of transport and supplies between Sibi and Kandahar. Convoys of carts are reaching Kandahar, but road requires improvement. A brigade consisting of three infantry and two cavalry regiments was to march from Kandahar on the 10th in the direction of Kushk-i-Nakhud to collect supplies and bring in some guns believed to be lying on the road. St. John telegraphs, under date 9, that Ayub Khan and other fugitive sirdars passed Zemindawar some days ago. Ayub is now said to have fled to Herat with his chief followers and two or three hundred horsemen, the Herat infantry having scattered over the country. Reports of a serious insurrection at Herat; the Governor left by Ayub said to have been murdered."

The usual weekly telegram, published on Monday, contains the following items of Cabul news:—

"The last regiments of the Cabul army have now passed through the Khyber, with the exception of those forming the brigade which temporarily garrisons the Pass. The troops have not suffered from the march, nor has there been any sickness. Four cases of cholera were reported three days ago in the 9th Regiment at Peshawur, but none of them have proved fatal, and it is believed that they were not true cases of cholera. The news from Cabul is satisfactory. Letters have been received from the Ameer, couched in most cordial terms, and expressing gratitude to the Government for having left him the surplus stores and forts at Gandamak, Kozabad, and Jellalabad. Affairs at Cabul were quiet, and there was no cause for anxiety. Sirdar Wali Mahomed Khan, ex-Governor of Cabul, Sirdar Ibrahim Khan, and Mustaufi Habibullah (the latter now under surveillance at Murree), have been summoned to Simla. The family of the ex-Ameer, Yakooob Khan, including a large number of ladies and children, have reached Mussoorie, where accommodation has been prepared for them. It is stated that the chiefs of Khyber tribes and of that portion of the Shinwarri tribe which holds Largi and Lundi Kotal will be summoned to Peshawur this month for the purpose of making arrangements for keeping the Pass open and for securing us a right of way through. We shall probably recognise their independence and pay them a fixed sum in lieu of tolls for the Pass. The present allowance may be reduced, as it is believed to be unnecessarily high. It seems likely that our troops will be withdrawn from the Khyber and that the tribes will be left in occupation as long as they keep the Pass open. Pending final arrangements regarding the frontier, Brigadier General Charles Gough, lately commanding the Second Infantry Brigade of the Second Division of the Cabul Field Force, will command the brigade which is to hold the Khyber line from Lundi Kotal to Jamrud. The troops will be—No. 1 Mountain Battery, the 5th Bengal Cavalry, the 18th Foot, and the 16th and 41st Native Infantry. In the event of the troops returning from Cabul being encamped at Hassan Abdul, Brigadier Gib will command the camp."

A CALCUTTA telegram states that it is announced that Sir Edward Johnson, in consequence of a communication from the Secretary of State to the effect that he had incurred the censure of her Majesty's Government in connection with the failure of the war estimates, has resigned his office as military member of Council; but, at the Viceroy's request, he had agreed to retain his seat until Tuesday, when he was to be relieved by Sir Donald Stewart. It has been notorious for some time past that Sir Edward Johnson's health is such as wholly unfits him for the laborious and responsible office he held, and the news that he is making way for a more vigorous and better-known man has been received with general satisfaction. It is rumoured that Col. Johnson, secretary to the Government in the Military Department, will shortly retire, and be succeeded by Col. George Chesney.

The Gazette of India contains, besides General Primrose's despatch on the mutiny of Wali Shere Ali's troops at Girishk, an extract of correspondence and despatches describing the operations of a force under the command of Brigadier General W. A. Gib in the Mazina Valley from 18th to the 23rd May. In forwarding the despatches to the Government of India the Adjutant General says that Sir F. Haines concurs with Sir Donald Stewart in thinking that the complete success of the expedition reflects great credit on Brigadier General Gib and all engaged.

A TELEGRAM from the Press-Commissioner, dated Simla, August 23, states that "no list of the non-commissioned officers and men killed and wounded at Kushk-i-Nakhud has yet been obtained. The Government have published all the names of killed and wounded of General Burrows's brigade received up to date." None of the papers received by the present mail contain any further information than that known to our readers.

BRIGADIER GENERAL H. F. BROOKE was adjutant general of the Bombay army, and at Kandahar was in command of the 2nd Infantry Brigade of the 1st Division Kandahar Field Force. He was an officer who had before seen active service, having been with the 48th Regt. at the siege and fall of Sebastopol, and as aide de camp to Sir Robert Napier in the campaign of 1860 in China, when he was severely wounded in the assault of the Taku forts. Lieut. Col. W. H. Newport was second in command of the 28th Bombay Native Infantry. He, too, had seen service. In 1858 he served in the Bombay force under Sir Hugh Rose in the Central India campaign, and was severely wounded at the storming of Lohari, near Jhansi. He was also present at the battle and capture of Gwalior. Major R. J. Le Poer Trench commanded a wing of the 19th Bombay Native Infantry, of which regiment also Lieut.

F. C. Stayner was officiating adjutant. Frederick Philip Wood and Everard Marsh were second lieutenants in the 2nd Battalion of the 7th Fusiliers. Capt. G. M. Cruickshank, R.E., was field engineer with the 1st Division of the Kandahar Field Force. Lieut. H. St. Leger Wood, the transport officer reported killed, belonged to the 15th Foot.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY, it is reported, will leave Simla about October 7 and proceed to Rawul Pindi or Hassan Abdal, there to hold a review of the troops returned from Cabul.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India, writing from Bushire, under date August 8, says:—

"An internecine war on a small scale is being carried on amongst the tribes of Tangustan. Some soldiers and artillery have been sent out from here to awe them into peace. Articles of food continue dear, and, if like last year, we are to have a drought, famine in its worst form will reign throughout the country. The gold mines at Zinjaun are receiving the attention of the Persian Government. General Schindler has been entrusted with the mining expedition, but the results are for the present kept entirely secret."

THE news that her Majesty has been pleased to confer the Grand Cross of the Bath on Generals Stewart and Roberts has given much pleasure to all classes in India.

A GIFT of three lakhs of rupees has been made to the town of Krishnagar, Nuddea, for the purpose of establishing waterworks, by Babu Nafar Chandra Pal Chaudhuri of Latuda.

THE grant of six months' batta to the troops in Afghanistan, to be paid before audit, is gazetted.

A SUCCESSFUL expedition against the Marris who resided near Mittri has been undertaken by 200 men of the 3rd and 4th Bengal Native Infantry, under Major Douglas. The Marris were dispersed in every direction at the first volley. Their camp was surprised and a quantity of arms, cattle, and stores were taken. It seems probable that this affair will effectually stop the raiding by that tribe.

THE secretaries of the principal cricket clubs throughout India have received copies of a letter asking for information as to the possibility of inducing an English eleven of professionals to visit the country. Nothing has as yet been definitely arranged in the matter, but there is still hope that something may be done. That a twenty-two could be got together in the N.W.P., very much superior to the majority of American and Canadian teams, which these wandering elevens are in the habit of meeting, there can be no doubt. But whether the secretaries of the various clubs will feel themselves justified in recommending the tour on pecuniary grounds is another matter; and a professional eleven can hardly be expected to start on so costly an expedition without reasonable assurance that their expenses will be covered.

A SUCCESSFUL meeting was recently held at Baroda in connection with the Military Relief Fund, at which his Highness the Gaekwar, Mr. Melville, C.S.I., his Excellency Raja Sir T. Madava Row, K.C.S.I., and a large number of European officers, sirdars, darakdars, durbar officers, native bankers, &c., were present. Several speeches were delivered and great enthusiasm prevailed. About twenty-one thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot. A similar meeting will take place at Puna at which Sir James Fergusson is to preside.

THE returns of accidents on Indian railways for the first quarter of the year show that from accidents to trains one passenger was killed and seven injured; six railway servants were killed and eight injured.

WITH the view of promoting agricultural improvement in Bengal and encouraging the study of scientific agriculture the Bengal Government has created two annual special scholarships of £200 each, to be held by science graduates of the Calcutta University at Cirencester College. The first two will be tenable for two and a half years from the commencement of 1881. An allowance of Rs.1,000 will be made to defray the expenses of scholarship holders proceeding to England, and a similar allowance for the return journey on completion of the course.

THE net Indian sea and land customs revenue for the first four months of the year are returned at Rs.71,07,000, as compared with Rs.66,71,000 in the corresponding period last year.

It appears from the yearly report of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association, just issued, that there are in the Presidency of Bombay nineteen branch societies with 1,279 members; in Bengal, ninety-four societies with 6,414 members; and in Madras fifteen societies with 1,309 members. The association appears to be doing a great amount of very useful work.

It is said that the Chief Commissioner of Assam has strongly recommended to the Government of India the retention of an entire native regiment in the Naga Hills, to be stationed at Kohima or some other central position. It is probable that all the frontier outposts will be transferred from the military to the frontier police, whose numbers will be increased, and who will be armed with breech-loaders.

DURING the past week the prospects of the crops throughout India, especially in the Punjab and North Western Provinces, have much improved. Rain, although light, has been general, and the anxiety before felt has been relieved.

THE revenue of the colony of Ceylon for the past half-year was Rs.3,22,000 below that of the corresponding period last year; of this amount more than two-thirds arose from the deficiency in railway receipts. The next largest item showing a heavy decline is that of land sales. The customs, stamps, and interests also show a considerable falling off, whilst the items yielding a larger amount than last year were spirit licenses, sales of salt, and various reimbursements to Government. The pearl fishery contributes Rs.1,39,000, without which the deficiency would have been certainly very serious.

In an article refuting Mr. Dutt's statements concerning the salt tax, which appeared in a recent number of the Journal of the National Indian Association, the Madras Times shows that the average consumption of salt per head is, in that Presidency, at the rate of 12·28lb. per head, and the incidence of the salt tax only about seven annas per head. Taking the average price—viz., Rs.3 5 annas—and "the consumption is at as high a rate as 15lb. per head, the actual cost of the tax to each individual is not 1 anna per month."

WE give below the comparative abstract of the salt revenue of India for the first quarter of the current official year, as compared with the like period for the previous seven years:—

Year.	Duty.
1873-74	Rs.1,48,41,000
1874-75	1,42,92,000
1875-76	1,49,44,000
1876-77	1,48,12,000
1877-78	1,70,64,000
1878-79	1,71,40,000
1879-80	1,74,19,000
1880-81	1,82,46,000

The result shows a steady growth of the revenue since 1877-78 and an increase on the eight years of Rs.34,05,000.

THE Ceylonese seem to be much exercised at the fact that a large number of Afghans have taken up their residence in the island, and several letters appear in the Ceylon papers in reference to the subject. A correspondent of the Ceylon Observer, signing himself "Precaution," writes:—"It is currently reported that a large number of rifles and guns (said to have been imported by a firm in Colombo) were lately removed in carts from Kandy to Kurunegala, escorted by a number of Afghans. It is also said that numbers of them have been seen drilling on the Kurunegala road. This may be false, but there seems no doubt that a large number of firearms are now in their possession. As Afghans are now by thousands in Ceylon don't you think it high time Government took some notice of them; any way, prevent their obtaining more arms? What their object can be in thus arming I know not, but a very uneasy feeling now exists among many planters and others on the subject." In a private letter to the editor the correspondent states that, at a funeral of an Afghan in Matale lately, upwards of one thousand of his countrymen were estimated to have attended.

DURING the week ended August 14 there were 185 deaths in Calcutta, being a death-rate of 22.4 per 1,000 per annum. In Madras, the same week, the deaths numbered 254, a death-rate of 33.2 per 1,000. In Bombay, during the week ending the 17th, there were 358 deaths, a death-rate of 26.95 per 1,000.

THE Times of India contains the following obituary of the week:—Brigadier General Brooke, Major Cruickshank, R.E., Lieut. Col. Newport, Major Trench, Lieut. Stayner, Lieut. Marsh, Lieut. Wood, Rev. Mr. Gordon, Rev. Dr. Wenger, J. B. Barry, Captain A. J. C. Rawlins, R.A., Surgeon Major J. Simpson, Joseph Forest Chard, formerly a gunner in the 21st Light Field Battery of Bengal Artillery and a trooper in Outram's Volunteer Cavalry.

FROM the report on the administration of civil justice in Oudh for the past year we learn that litigation generally declined during 1879, and, in fact, had not been so low since 1871. The total number of cases instituted was 60,105, against 69,230 in the preceding year. This falling off is supposed to be due in great measure to the improved condition of the population in 1879 after the scarcity which overtook them in the previous year; although, of course, the sickness which prevailed towards the close of the year must also have affected the institution of suits, as it did complaints of crime. An increase in the litigation for land was a deplorable feature, and indicated that many borrowers of previous years had failed to extricate themselves and were harder pressed than usual. It was well known that the terrible drought of 1877 led to a great increase in loans on the security of immovable property. The tables appended to the report showed that the bulk of litigation which came from the new courts was of the nature of Small Cause Court cases (for money and movables) not exceeding Rs.500 in value. Applications to sue as paupers decreased from 288 in 1878 to 240, and of these only 48 were admitted by the new and old civil courts. The total value of property under litigation was Rs.38,30,065, or Rs.4,33,390 less than in 1878; a decrease to be accounted for by the decline of litigation. There was a slight increase in the costs of petty suits, due in some measure to the fact that the suits were more hotly contested in the year under review than in 1878. Compared with 1878 the results as to duration of suits were on the whole rather favourable, sixteen days in contested and thirteen in uncontested cases. The figures given showed that landlords filed fewer suits, while tenants resorted more frequently to the courts than in the preceding year.

THE prospects of the forthcoming Native Industrial Art Exhibition, notwithstanding the war, are very encouraging. The Government of Madras, we are told, is sending to Simla, where the exhibition will be held, a complete collection of Tanjore and Madura brass work. The Governor of Bombay has enlisted the aid of a number of gentlemen to secure a good collection of Bombay carved wood of the best kinds; and Mr. Gibbs, the president of the Simla committee of management, has been in correspondence with his friends in Bombay to help in the same cause. The Government of the North Western Provinces has taken up the task of collecting a goodly array of Benares brassware; Sir George Couper, the Lieutenant Governor, lending all his influence and sympathy towards the objects of the committee. Sir Robert Egerton, following the example set by himself last year, has addressed all the deputy commissioners in the Punjab in order to get their co-operation and help in collecting artistic pottery made in the province; and it is expected that Delhi—thanks to Mr. Smyth, the deputy commissioner—will be practically strong in well-shaped porcelain and earthenware vessels of all kinds. Mr. Kipling has prepared a small collection of native art workmanship from the Lahore School of Art. From Burma, Mr. Bernard is sending niello and other metal work, whilst Sir B. Meade at Hyderabad has arranged for contributing the best possible collection of bidri work, together with such other native art specimens as can be collected in time. Some collections are expected from the schools of art in Calcutta, at Jeypore, and in Bombay; but from the Madras school, Mr. Chisholm, the principal, is sending a collection of special character to represent the application of native art to useful objects. To add to the general interest and to fill up the vacant corners of the Exhibition there will be a small number of loan objects from Afghanistan and from private owners in Simla.

DURING his recent visit to Patna Sir Ashley Eden was presented with two addresses, one from the Mahomedan inhabitants of the city, and the other from the Behar Upkar Sabha. The first address contained an expression of gratitude from the inhabitants at the introduction of the Kaithi character in the place of Persian, and at the interest which his Honour has taken in their education and welfare. They further expressed a hope that he would not sanction a change which would tend to clog the wheels of their progress in education, to prevent them from adequately availing themselves of the educational advantages offered by Government. Sir Ashley Eden, in reply, referred to the introduction of Kaithi as the vernacular character of the courts, observing that during his tour in Behar he had received unequivocal proofs that the change had been received with the greatest satisfaction by the mass of the people. He alluded to the advantages which the Kaithi character possessed, observing that the object of Government in making the change was to simplify the Urdu language, by excluding big and pedantic Persian words so as to render it in easy Hindustani. While fully recognising the claims to consideration of the old servants of the Government who were only acquainted with the Persian character, he intimated that orders of Government on the point, which had hitherto been neutral and evaded, must now be promptly and thoroughly carried out. The address from the Behar Upkar Sabha also referred to the introduction of the Kaithi character in terms of gratification, the address expressing a belief that the measure would not only release the mass of the people "from the clutches of touts and other legal harpies infesting our law courts, but will tend in a very marked way to the improvement of genuine native literature, now languishing for want of the fostering care of Government." Sir Ashley Eden, in his reply to this address, made a somewhat similar speech to that in reply to the first address, remarking that the reform to which allusion had been made was one which Government had long had in view; but it had been enforced gradually and slowly in order that it might injure as little as possible the interest of those few persons who gained their livelihood from the knowledge of the foreign character. In the course of further remarks he called attention to the draft of rent law recently circulated by Government, and expressed a belief that Behar could never really flourish until the land question was adjusted in a broad and liberal spirit.

THE Standard correspondent telegraphs from Kandahar under date Sept. 8:—The body of troops detailed to march to Kushk-i-Nakhud for the purpose of burying the remains of our countrymen who fell there starts to-morrow. It will consist of the 7th Fusiliers, the 2nd Belooches, the 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, C-2 Battery R.A., and the Puna Horse. The force will be commanded by Brigadier Daubery. There is no information whatever as to what has become of Ayub's cavalry and regular infantry. It is certain that very few were engaged in the battle, and none were seen in the pursuit. The direction in which they have gone, and the time at which they quitted his camp, are alike complete mystery to us. Supplies are being collected at the posts along the road in order to provide for the return march of the troops."

THE KANDAHAR RAILWAY.*

THE papers read and the discussions held thereon before the Institution of Civil Engineers are generally somewhat too technical, however interesting, to be regarded as claiming a popular hearing. The republication, in a separate form, of the contents of the pamphlet before us must be considered of public interest at present, and that both on account of the engineering feat recorded, as well as the paramount importance just now attaching to the undertaking, the inception and progress of which is described in the three papers, which may not be so pictorial and graphic as Sir Richard Temple's prelection, but are more strongly confined to details and actual work. Mr. Bell, in his opening pages, recalls the fact, which the late Governor of Bombay also pressed upon his appreciative audience at Karachi, that to Mr. W. P. Andrew belongs the credit of having, about the time of the Indian mutiny, urged, with arguments which time has only strengthened the force and ripened the truth, the construction of a line of railway to the Bolan Pass. Sir Andrew Clarke confines himself in his brief introductory note to telling us how he, in 1876, foresaw the necessity for keeping open, at all times and seasons, at least one available route from British India into Afghanistan, and solicited authority from the Supreme Government for the immediate construction of a line of railway from Sukkur to Quetta. Sir Andrew Clarke deserves credit for foresight and for his exertions to make the way easier for the commencement of the work. But the veteran pioneer of Indian railway enterprise deserves that in all speeches or writings concerning the Kandahar Railway his far-seeing prevision of the want that at last became borne in upon the Government, of a tremendous waste of transport and treasure, should be recorded. The story of the building of the first section, to speak in American fashion, as told by Mr. James Richard Bell, is singularly free from any attempt to magnify the difficulties met with and the energy displayed in overcoming them. His terse technical, unadorned description presents all the facts, and leaves the reader to pause and reflect on the labour and science requisite to enable such a record as this to be written:—"On the 18th September, 1879, the Viceroy's council determined on the construction of a fair-weather line of railway to the Bolan Pass. By the 21st telegraphic orders reached the officers selected for the work, and by the end of the same month a staff of engineers had arrived on the ground. Four months after the issue of the first order, a railway, 133½ miles long, was opened for military traffic. The line, as laid and equipped, cost for, in all, 163½ miles, including the branches and sidings, as nearly as may be three quarters of a million. Mr. Bell admits that the facilities for platelaying were great. The ground was an almost absolutely smooth plain, and the men and the carts were kept together and close to their work by the very conditions of a desert, in which it was as dangerous to stray as it was impossible to hide from the supervising Europeans. There was a staff of officers who for years had carried on public works with the same labourers; while the Governor of the Presidency placed all the resources of a great province at the disposal of a work which was felt to have a material bearing on military operations at Kandahar. The construction of the first section of the Kandahar Railway is a feat that the engineers concerned in it may be proud of. How much was due to the energy and impulse of "the Governor of the Presidency" is briefly hinted in the above words. What will be the record, when or how written, of the completion of the concluding section of the railway, which will then deserve its name, and crown all the patience of Mr. Andrew, and the urgent perseverance of Sir Andrew Clarke and Sir R. Temple, is a problem for the future, the solution of which will be waited for with anxiety by those who believe that there is now in our hands a grand opportunity for securing a profitable and advantageous footing in Southern Afghanistan. The work that Messrs. Bell and Moyle, and their assistants, so ably commenced will only bear its full fruits when it opens the market of Central Asia to the seaports of British India. To quote the words of Mr. Maclean:—"When the railway is finished from Sukkur to Kandahar the latter city will be brought within 750 miles by rail from Karachi, and it will be possible to deliver English goods at Kandahar more expeditiously and cheaply than at Lahore. The capital of Southern Afghanistan would in that case become a great entrepôt from which our manufactures would find their way to Cabul and Kashgar on the one hand, and Herat and Teheran on the other, and would compete on favourable terms with Russian manufactures throughout all Central Asia."

OCEAN HYGIENE.*

THE helplessness of the constantly increasing number of persons who, despairing of health at home, set forth to seek it, not as of old, by residence in particular countries, as by voyaging on the ocean, has excited the compassion of Dr. Wilson. As a medical man, evidently much experienced in ocean transit, he has himself learned the needs, the injuries of ignorance, which are the natural lot of most navigating invalids whose object is to discover and appropriate the hygiene of the ocean. It will be somewhat of a surprise to many to learn that at the present time "the favourite passenger ships (to Australia), especially in the autumn, are half filled with invalids of every kind and degree, who are looking forward hopefully to testing the restorative influences of the ocean climate." Mr. Wilson has earned, we should think, the gratitude of all such travellers in search of health. It would be impossible to find a point on which advice was needed by the most nervous or inexperienced voyager which has been left untouched by him. Shrewd common sense, much practical experience, and a thoroughly professional estimate of the importance of little things inspire every page of this work, which is at the same time written in a plain, pleasant style. We fancy that some who have journeyed by the overland route to India or the long oceanic route to Australia would, on perusal of Mr. Wilson's pages, say to themselves, "That is a good idea; I never thought of that before." We are certain that to use the authors words, "those who take a voyage, whether as invalids or otherwise, must not fall into the mistake of looking upon the sea as a panacea for every ill, but must make up their minds to face many inconveniences, and perhaps even a few dangers in their ocean life." Those who will take the trouble to read, recollect, and practically apply the useful advice offered in these pages will manage to avoid many of the inconveniences, and will find themselves enabled to be more agreeable fellow-travellers than are a large proportion of people who seem to think that voyaging is much the same as a railway journey in a Pullman's car. We must add that the ocean routes and physical geography of the sea are well illustrated on a chart securely placed in a pocket.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF PATNA.

The admittedly impoverished condition of the population of Behar and the exaggerated statements that have been made regarding it invest the annual administration reports of the Patna division with a special interest. It is satisfactory to find that for the past year, just submitted by Mr. Edgar, is pervaded by a more hopeful one than usual, and tends on the whole to confirm our view that much of the wretchedness that has attracted so much attention of late is traceable to the succession of bad seasons with which the province has been visited. Though this year's early crops, in all the division except Gya, were more or less injured by the excessive rainfall, the damage was more than compensated by a bumper cold weather harvest, and, except in respect of indigo, the year was one of agricultural prosperity. As a consequence, most of the district officers report a decided improvement in the material condition of all but the lowest classes of the people, the landless labourers and the rayats with small holdings and heavy debts, who live from hand to mouth, while the good harvest and abundant work placed even these classes beyond the reach of want. The Commissioner of Patna notices it as a significant fact that, while the lower classes of Behar are the meanest and poorest he has come across, there is no district where so many wealthy men are to be found. This, he thinks, is the natural result of the relations between landlords and tenants. We doubt, however, whether the explanation covers the whole of the facts. Our experience of the division is that the wealthy men are far from being confined to the landlord class; the tenantry furnishing abundant examples of the contrast noted by Mr. Metcalfe. A far more general cause of inequality is to be found in the custom of the province, which imposes the highest rates of rent on the poor and lets the well-to-do off at disproportionately favourable rates. Mr. Macdonnell, we observe, was surprised at the comparative prosperity of the people of Sarun, and in Champaran there is said to have been a decided increase of cultivation and a brisk export trade, which is improving the condition of the cultivators. The commissioner thus states his general conclusions: "I have made unusually full quotations from the district and sub-divisional reports, because they seem to show, in spite of considerable variations of opinion, that the keenest and closest observers discern a decided improvement in the condition of the people, and this coincides with the result of my own observations. Of course, in dealing with so large and complex a subject as this there is great danger of making untrustworthy generalisations from insufficient data, and the difference so often found in the condition of tracts neighbouring to one another warns us of the folly of making sweeping statements to cover all the facts of an area so great and so varied as that of Behar. Still, while keeping these considerations full in view, I can state with some confidence that all the available evidence seems to point to a steady improvement in the material condition of the people throughout the division. In some places this improvement may be scarcely appreciable, and in most places it may be slow; but in others, again, it is well marked and comparatively rapid. I would ascribe this mainly to the improvement of communications and to the consequent rise of the price of agricultural produce; but I think it is also in some measure due to a gradual, but very real, awakening of intelligence among all classes of the people. It may be said that the increased prices of produce, if profitable to the holders of land, must press heavily on the landless classes; but Sir Stuart Bayley showed, in former reports written by him as Commissioner of Patna, that this does not hold good when wages are paid in kind." Under the head of manufactures and trade the only facts of importance noted are that the year was a bad, and, but for high prices, would have been a disastrous one for indigo; that the opening of the Tirhut State Railway has diverted a large forwarding trade from Patna, and thus affected that city injuriously; and that the Pusa tobacco farm turned out 130,000 lb. of manufactured leaf during the year. Under the head of agriculture the wonderful success of Messrs. Burrows, Mylne, and Thomson with their sugar mills justly formed the subject of appreciative comment. "Sir Ashley Eden," says the writer of the Government resolution, "is satisfied that none of the expensive Government agencies for improving the agricultural system of the country maintained in other provinces, and so persistently pressed upon the Government, can show such a result as Rs.6,30,000 expended by the people of a single district in a single year in the purchase of an improved implement, giving a result of Rs.4,73,000 as an addition to the annual income of the district." The public health of the division was unusually bad, epidemic cholera and small-pox being generally prevalent, and the former disease alone causing nearly five thousand deaths in Patna and Bankipur. In connection with this epidemic it is noteworthy that Dinapur, which is only seven miles from Patna and in constant communication with it, was untouched by the disease, a fact which would seem to tell very strongly against its contagiousness.—Englishman.

THE KHASIA HILLS.

COL. J. F. SHERER, who has recently retired, has just issued his final report on the administration of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills for 1878-79. The year under notice was a rather trying one for the dwellers on those hills, as they were visited by two epidemics, had an extra flood towards the close of the rainy season, and in consequence suffered from dear food. Notwithstanding all this, however, Col. Sherer testifies to the almost universal good conduct of that class who usually suffer most from such visitations, viz., the non-criminal. The epidemics were small-pox and cholera; the former having a stupid superstition connected with it which interferes with a cure being attempted. The idea being that small-pox is "the manifestation of the presence of a deity, and they therefore think it impious to adopt measures to avert an attack of the disease." In spite of this feeling, however, and chiefly owing to the indefatigable exertions of the civil surgeon of Shillong, Dr. J. O'Brien, nearly twice as many people were vaccinated as during previous years. The benefits of this will doubtless be felt later on. Cholera was very bad in certain villages, and in two, out of a total of forty cases, there were twenty-one deaths; while of small-pox, the number of deaths was 180 out of a local population of 500, or 36 per cent. An idea of the price of food will be obtained by a glance at the following figures:—

		Seers	per	Rupee.
Rice	9½	to 14½	4 to 10
Salt	5½	to 7½	5 to 6½
Fish	4	to 5	4 to 4½
Potatoes	16	to 32	16 to 26

The most painful consideration in connection with this state of things is the fact that, while the heavy rains certainly did contribute to a certain extent to this rise in prices, the deputy commissioner attributes the increase more to the "bad state of the road between Gowhaty and Shillong, and the outbreak of cholera at Cherapunjee and its vicinity." The former cause should not have been permitted to exist. We are inclined to attribute any scarcity that existed owing to high prices more to laziness than anything else. While rice was selling at four to ten seers per rupee we must not forget that the cost of labour was high, very much higher than it is in the mofussil—in any other part of India—except, perhaps, in Burma. Ordinary workmen got from five to eight annas per day, and women from three to five annas, while with rice at twelve seers per rupee in other parts of India labour is only worth Rs.4 per month as a rule. But we have had some experience of these tribes, and know they prefer idling to working at any time. Education seems to be popular, at least when it can be had cheaply. A number of natives, employed principally in Government offices, asked Government to provide a "school, teaching up to the standard of the Calcutta University Entrance Examination," and their prayer was granted. Last year, we are informed, there were fifty pupils, and the cost of their education was Rs.41-13-11, of which Government contributed Rs.35-7-9. To present this in another form, we may say that each pupil paid at the rate of eight and a-half annas per month for a high class education. The people of Assam are praying for higher education generally, and we hope their prayer will be granted. At the same time, they must be prepared to pay considerably more for the privilege than the young men at Shillong do. We observe, too, that the amount subscribed by the entire native population of Shillong towards the Charitable Dispensary is only Rs.8 to Rs.9 per month.—Indian Daily News.

WHAT OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN DONE: WHAT MUST BE DONE.

THE events of the last few weeks in Southern Afghanistan will probably have the effect of indefinitely prolonging the war and modifying materially the future of the country, as we cannot possibly retire far until our military supremacy has been completely reasserted and all opposition crushed. They will lead also to the creation of some security against all possible future attempts to unseat and drive out that helpless puppet, Shere Ali Khan, Kandahari. Partial annexation would have been the safest course, and, this having been decided on, the important strategic places should have been occupied, levies consisting of Hazaras, Tapeks, Kazilbashes, &c., could easily have been raised, supplemented by regiments of Sikhs, Dogras, Punjabis, Pathans, and Goorkhas, enlisted for special service in Afghanistan. This force should have been backed by an army of at least 25,000 British soldiers, and by degrees our army of occupation might have been withdrawn and the country guarded by the local and specially raised force. As the country quieted down strong parties escorting our politicals and survey officers should have traversed each district, making a rapid survey, and the politicals might then have exercised their legitimate duties by making assessments and collecting information and data for the future administration of the country. A few members of the geological survey should have gone with these parties and thus have placed before us much interesting and valuable information on the mineral resources of Afghanistan. In the course of a few years Afghanistan might, by vigorous measures, have quieted down to something like the Punjab in 1847 or 1850; but no half-measures would have answered, no false clemency, no forbearance purchased, no mistaken views resulting from advice tendered, or orders dictated by political officers, who (whatever their merits as members of the judicial and police services) have proved themselves a positive incubus to the military chiefs ever since Ali Musjid fell. A few words as to the treatment of the country and people. First, the military chief should have announced the intention of Government to introduce order, safety to life and property, and that all alike would share the benefits of a settled form of government, but that all opposition would be met with prompt measures. All marauders to be instantly executed. Any villages sheltering marauders or known proclaimed offenders, or on being searched found to contain Government property or the property of any European, native soldier, or camp follower, to be promptly punished. At the same time, certain influential chiefs should have been invited to levy local police and maintain order, being liberally subsidised as long as this was done, but to be held liable for offences against life and property. In addition to this roads and communications should have been made as rapidly as possible, and every measure taken to make our occupation as light a burden as possible on the Indian and home revenues. At present as matters stand we have to completely re-establish our ascendancy and crush Ayub. To ascertain how far Ayub's attack on General Burrows may be the result of a combination between Ayub and Abdul Rahman. To ascertain how far, if at all, Russia has identified herself with Ayub Khan, or whether he "is fighting for his own hand." To permanently annex as much of Kandahar as possible, and relegate Shere Ali to the pension list, installing General Sir D. Stewart in his place as "Wali," with full power, and not handicapped by the presence of any political. As Abdul Rahman will not hold his own long after our back is turned, and our folly in counting on him as a "constant factor" will soon have to be rectified by completely annexing the whole country, we should, therefore, turn our present opportunity to the best advantage, reorganise our army, recuperate our finances, and await the not very distant crisis when we must again—and it is to be hoped finally—settle the destinies of the country by making it a dependency of the British Empire.—Civil and Military Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

PRISON ADMINISTRATION IN BRITISH BURMA.—From the Prison Administration Report of British Burma for the year 1879, with the chief commissioner's resolution thereon, we learn that during the greater part of 1879 there were 14 gaols in the province. The number of convicts at the beginning of the year was 4,459 against 4,723 in 1878; and 7,222 persons were committed to gaol in 1879 against 7,696 in the previous year. The total number of convicts in the province was therefore 11,681, or 738 less than in 1878. At the close of the year there were 4,412 convicts under sentence. The daily average number was 4,335, as compared with 4,595 in the preceding year. The number transferred to undergo sentence has decreased from 2,128 in 1878 to 1,106 in 1879; but, except in the case of the Shway-gyin gaol, there was less overcrowding than in the previous twelve months. These figures are exclusive of prisoners under the Excise Act in civil gaols. The number of European convicts admitted has decreased from 161 in 1878 to 148 in the year under review, notwithstanding the considerable increase made to the European garrison, the daily average number for the two years being 53 and 58 respectively. The proportion of convicts to the entire population on the last day of 1879, 0.14 per cent., was the same as on the last day of 1878. As regards the race and religion of convicts, the proportions do not differ materially from those of the previous year. The order of criminality remains unaltered; but the percentage of Buddhists and Hindus was slightly lower, that of Christians and Mahomedans somewhat higher. Of the convict population at the close of the year nearly 50 per cent. were agriculturists, a proportion considerably lower than in 1878, when it was over 62.39 per cent. The financial results of the year may be considered satisfactory. The cost of maintenance under all heads was Rs.3,29,008, as compared with Rs.3,58,193 in 1878, the average cost per head having fallen from Rs.72-15-5 to Rs.71-14-8. The recommendations of the prisons conference with respect to police guards and establishment were carefully considered during the year, but it was found impossible to make any general alteration in the existing arrangements.—Madras Times.

DESTRUCTION OF A LIGHTHOUSE.—A telegram, dated Sept. 8, from the officer commanding the naval forces in the Dutch Indies, announced that the stone lighthouse on First Point, Tanjing Koelong, West Coast of Java, has been thrown down by a violent earthquake. This lighthouse was completed in 1877. The light was of the first class, and was for the guidance of vessels entering Prince's Strait in the Straits of Sundra.

THE LATE MR. SHERRING.—We quite support the Pioneer when it says that the labours of the late Rev. Mr. Sherring "will merit some recognition from the Government." Mr. Sherring has left a widow and five children. This is a case in which the Government might well, in the interests of literature, education, and Indian scholarship, bestow upon the widow a pension. Mr. Sherring's merits as a scholar were many, but we consider that he did great and rare service when he took up the subject of caste, a subject almost foreign to European residents in India, and yet a subject of such importance that a knowledge of it is the only door by which Europeans can come to a familiar and friendly knowledge of the Indian peoples. If Mr. Sherring had done nothing more than bring out his great work on the castes of Upper India we consider he would still have established a foremost claim to recognition, and even to the gratitude of the Government of India.—Indian Daily News.

THE TAGORE PROFESSOR.—Mr. W. T. Agnew, barrister at law, has been appointed Tagore law professor, and has chosen for his subject the law of trusts. The candidate who secured the next highest number of votes is Baboo Upendronath Mittra, late law lecturer of the Dacca College, and now practising as a pleader in the High Court.—Ibid.

HEALTH OF N.W.P. AND OUDH.—During June last the deaths in the N.W.P. and Oudh were 104,474 as against 83,802 in June, 1879. Of this large mortality the deaths from fever are put down at 78,200.—Ibid.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the general meeting of the Howrah Mills Company, held on August 14, the reports and accounts were passed.—At the general meeting of Watson's Patent Press Company, held August 17, the report and accounts were passed and it was resolved by Baboo Toolsy Dass Roy "that of the balance of Rs.4,599 at credit of profit and loss account Rs.4,000 be invested in Government paper."—At a meeting of the Empress of India Cotton Mills Company, held on August 21, the following resolutions were passed:—"That the directors' report and accounts for the half-year ending June 30, 1880, be adopted and passed as correct." "That a dividend of Rs.30 per share, equal to 12 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital, be declared payable on and after the 1st proximo, and that the balance of Rs.81,494-1-8 at credit of the profit and loss account be carried forward to next half-year." "That the directors be and hereby are empowered to construct the additional accommodation required for the proper storage of cotton and yarn and for quarters." "That the directors be instructed to procure from England machinery for carding and other purposes."—Englishman.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—Regarding indigo prospects, we gather from the reports of Messrs. Moran and Company, and Messrs. Thomas and Company for the last fortnight, that the season in Lower Bengal is now drawing to a close, and the result, on the whole, may be considered satisfactory, and, in many instances, very favourable. There is no alteration in prospects to report in Kishnagar. In Jessore, produce has improved until lately, when unfavourable weather set in and interfered with the yield; the plant, however, has continued to cut out well, and this district will shortly close manufacture with much over last year's outturn. This remark applies also to Moorsshedabad and Rajshahye. The accounts from Midnapur are less favourable, and from Burdwan they are very unsatisfactory. Bhagulpur is reported to be doing fairly, but Purneah has of late had cold and rainy weather, and produce, which throughout the season has been bad, has again fallen off. This district will shortly close manufacture, and the result, except in a few concerns, will be much smaller than was hoped for. As far as we can at present judge, the outturn promises to be about 20,000 maunds, against some 15,000 maunds last year. The accounts from Behar are not so satisfactory. About a fortnight ago complaints began to be received of too much rain from Tirhut, Chapra, and Chumparun; the fall was heavy and continuous, varying from fourteen to twenty-eight inches, the two former zillahs feeling it more severely than the latter; the yield from the plant naturally fell off very much, and many factories were compelled to partially suspend mahai, the state of the roads being such as to make it well nigh impossible to bring the plant in to the vats; the heavy rain was succeeded by a few days of sunny weather, but the produce did not show so much improvement as planters expected, and the latest letters and telegrams received from Tirhut and Chapra advise further heavy and continuous falls of rain, which are not only most injurious to the plant now being worked off, but are very detrimental to the khuntis.—Ibid.

THE CHURCH AT MANDALAY.—The church erected by Mr. Marks, missionary of S.P.G., at Mandalay seems to be in a strange predicament. It was built under the auspices of the late King of Burma, and Queen Victoria sent out for it a font of coloured marble. When Mr. St. Barbe so suddenly quitted Mandalay about a year ago Mr. Marks went with him, leaving the church without anyone to look after it. Fortunately very little damage has happened to it during the past year. Mr. Marks is now prohibited from entering Burmese territory, and can therefore no more take possession of the building. King Theebaw is offering it to the Baptists, and if they won't take it he will offer it to the Roman Catholics or to any religious body that will accept it. It happens, however, that a deed exists made out for the late Bishop Milman, according to which the ground on which the church stands belongs to the Church of England for ever. The fate of the building is not so decided as that of the ground. In Theebaw's present humour no religious body seems to be anxious to take over possession of the church. His coming child (the astrologers are afraid to indicate the sex for fear of consequences in case of failure) may be baptised in Queen Victoria's font.—Madras Times.

TRADE IN WIVES.—A somewhat novel branch of trade—a trade in wives—has sprung up in some of the Punjab frontier districts. Women are kidnapped beyond the frontier, purchased by the Afridis and others from their kidnappers, and hawked about for sale in British territory. These women are often forcibly married to their purchasers in spite of the fact that they may have husband and children at their own homes. The trade is extensively carried on in the districts of Dera Ghazi Khan and Kohat. Unfortunately some defect in the Indian Penal Code makes it impossible for the British courts to punish that portion of the offence which is committed in British territory. If this should be the case the sooner the defect in our law is removed the better for the interests of all concerned, Government included.—Indian Herald.

TEA AND INDIGO.—The last fortnight's report from the tea districts is somewhat unfavourable. Unseasonable cold and heavy rains have interfered with the growth of the leaf and also with the manufacture. The same causes have also checked the indigo output to some extent.—Times Telegram.

THE ATTACK ON LORD LYTTON.—Deesa, a Eurasian, the youth who fired a pistol at Lord Lytton last Christmas, has been put on trial before the Calcutta High Court. The jury found that he fired the shot, but that he was of unsound mind. He was ordered to be confined during her Majesty's pleasure.—Ibid.

RAJPUTANA STATE RAILWAY.—The new terminal station, at Agra, of the Rajputana State Railway has just been finished at a cost of over two lakhs of rupees. It is said to be one of the finest stations in India. Under present arrangements it will be formally opened by Sir George Couper in the early part of the cold weather.—Times of India.

GLANDERS.—We regret to hear that six cases of glanders showed themselves and had to be destroyed at the remount depot at Haupur lately. This can scarcely be wondered at when it is known that the director of remounts, upon his own responsibility, ordered up from Calcutta a batch of remounts, out of which some seven or eight had been a short time previously destroyed for the same disease, and before the effects of contagion could have been detected.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE ILLNESS OF THE METROPOLITAN.—The Bishop of Calcutta, who is recovering satisfactorily, but slowly, from his recent severe attack of fever, having been forbidden by his medical adviser to travel in the plains during September, will remain at Darjiling until the end of that month; when he hopes to visit the stations of Jalpaiguri and Sa'dpur, arriving in Calcutta by October 5, and continuing his visitation from that point in accordance with his published programme.—Times of India.

MAKING PRESENTS TO A JUDGE.—Sheik Nural Huq, the record-keeper of the Calcutta Small Cause Court, has been obliged, by an order of the judges, to send in his resignation owing to some misconduct on his part in presenting to Mr. Douglas White, the 5th judge, a case of champagne and other articles, with a view, as it was believed, of influencing the learned judge to bestow upon him an appointment in the warrant department, the emoluments of which were larger than those enjoyed by the record-keeper.—Englishman.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION.—It is said that the senate of the Calcutta University are proposing a measure which must considerably increase the cost per annum of all the mofussil colleges. The project spoken of is a revised scheme of studies for the fine arts—the B.A. and the honour examinations—which has been prepared by a Calcutta board, and is to be very shortly submitted to the senate for approval. It is said to be a most sweeping measure.—Times of India.

REPAIR OF GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—The Government of India has sanctioned Rs.10,000 for expenses to be incurred in repairing Government House, Calcutta, this year. The amount sanctioned last year and the year before last exceeded Rs.15,000.—Times of India.

SIR ASHLEY EDEN IN BEHAR.—His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was received at Chuprah, on the 12th, by the Maharaja of Hutwa and the European and native gentry, who presented an address of welcome to his Honour. On the 15th a splendid entertainment was given by the Maharaja, the party consisting of more than fifty gentlemen and ladies. There was also a display of fireworks, the success of which was, however, greatly interfered with on account of the rain. His Honour and party arrived at Buxar on the 15th at eight in the morning. After visiting the Central Gaol, the party came by a special train to Doomraon, where they were the guests of the Maharaja. After luncheon his Honour and party started for Arrah, where they arrived in the evening. Grand preparations, including fireworks and illumination, were made at the latter station. The Maharaja of Doomraon came to Arrah by the same special train.—Pioneer.

AN INGENIOUS PLEA.—A Mahomedan of Calcutta was charged last week with having fished in a tank without a pass. Defendant admitted the charge, saying that he went to try whether there were sufficient fish in the tank to induce him to take out a pass, the price of which was Rs.5 per month. His worship fined the defendant Rs.5.—Ibid.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR NATIVE GRADUATES.—The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has created two scholarships of £200 per annum each to be held at the Cirencester College by native graduates of the Calcutta University for the study of scientific agriculture.—Englishman.

THE LATE DR. BARRY.—A telegram has been received in Calcutta announcing the death of Dr. Barry, who was (says the Englishman) for many years well known as one of our most successful and popular medical practitioners, and who had long occupied a conspicuous place in the front rank of the promoters of British enterprise in India. Dr. Barry was formerly managing partner of the firm of Messrs. Scott, Thomson, and Co., and for the past twenty-seven years, in many capacities, one of the most energetic workers on that side of India. Though young to the last in strength and spirits, Dr. Barry commenced his active career in this country thirty-five years ago as surgeon in the Bengal Marine, where he won the esteem and affection of every one in the service. From 1849 till 1853 he was civil surgeon at Tezpur and Gowalpara, in Assam, where he rendered valuable service by the reforms which he effected in gaol discipline and the sanitary improvements which he carried out. His more immediate connection with Calcutta began in November, 1853, after which he had for many years a large river and considerable town practice, and was widely known for his thorough devotion to his profession and for the generous promptitude and unremitting care which characterised his services to all who required them, whether rich or poor.

CALCUTTA.—The Lieutenant Governor has sanctioned the outlay by the Port Commissioners of a sum of Rs.1,20,000 for a further extension of the jetty embankment between jetties Nos. 4 and 5, and for taking down import shed No. 1 and re-erecting it at No. 4 jetty.—Pioneer.

SUFFOCATED TO DEATH.—Two coolies, while working on board the B.S. Cape Verde in port at Calcutta, on Aug. 16, were suffocated to death. It appears that the vessel in question sprang a leak on Aug. 12, and, having put back, was beached on the river bank at No. 4 Hastings; the water getting into the hold of the vessel damaged a large number of bags containing gram, which, becoming rotten, emitted a noxious gas. The deceased were employed with other coolies in discharging the gram and seed, and, while they were thus engaged on the 'tween decks, one of them accidentally fell into the after cargo hold; his brother hastened into the hold to render him assistance, and both men were suffocated. The ship's stevedore (an African) also attempted to go to their rescue, but fainted just as he got into the hatchway; he was dragged out and restored to consciousness after some time. The deceased had to be hooked out of the hold, as no one could get into it, and a light would not burn therein.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—The disengaged tonnage in port at date of mail stood at 38,178 tons. London via Canal: Rates on the whole have been maintained, and the market closed quiet at £2 10s. for rice or wheat; £3 2s. 6d. to £3 5s. for jute; £3 5s. to £3 10s. for tea and hides; £3 to £3 2s. 6d. nominal for linseed or rape. For London via Cape: The market closed firm at £1 18s. 9d. to £2 for rice or wheat; linseed and jute, £2 5s.; rape and poppy, £2 7s. 6d. For Liverpool via Canal: Rice or wheat, £2 10s. to £2 12s. 6d. nominal; measurement and oils, £3 to £3 5s. For Liverpool via Cape: Rice or wheat £1 17s. 6d.; jute, £1 17s. 6d.; linseed, £2; measurement and oils, £2 to £2 2s. 6d.

MEDICAL.—The Surgeon General of Bengal having referred to his Honour the Lieutenant Governor relative to medical students entering Government service, Sir Ashley Eden has been pleased to issue the following notification for general information:—"It is hereby notified that medical students who have already passed the qualifying examination for employment as assistant surgeons should declare their intention of entering the service of Government on or before August 16. It is further notified that in the years which still remain of the presents system, that is, up to January 1, 1884, such declaration must be made within one month of passing the qualifying examination."—Pioneer.

CHOLERA AT ATTOCK.—A bad outbreak of cholera is reported at Attock amongst the engineering party completing the ferry arrangements for the troops expected shortly. Mr. Granville, assistant engineer in charge, who has been attacked by it, together with his European subordinate and the greater part of the native workmen, is to be temporarily replaced by Mr. Wallis.—Englishman.

THE SITTANG VALLEY RAILWAY.—We hear that the Sittang Valley Railway has been shelved for the present, and that the intention now is to construct a line to Pegu, which is to be susceptible of extension, with time and an improvement in the financial position of the Indian Government, to Tounghoo. The line will, it is stated, be about forty miles long. It will, doubtless, help to open out a fair extent of country and give an impetus to trade and agriculture in those parts.—Bombay Gazette.

DISTURBANCE IN THE MANDI STATE.—The Mandi State is occupied in settling a disturbance that has broken out in its Sheoraj ilaqua. Mr. Anderson, assistant commissioner, Kulu, and an official of the durbar have been despatched to the disaffected villages to report on the real state of affairs. The disturbances are not serious at present. The people are said to be dissatisfied with certain measures recently taken by Mian Man Sing, the raja's half-brother and wazir, and especially with a proposal to commute the begar labour furnished by the zemindars for money dues. Objection is made to this proposal by the classes who have been hitherto exempt from furnishing forced labour, and who imagine that they will be called upon to pay the demand. One of the raj officials, who had been sent to ascertain the extent of the disturbances, has been arrested by the zemindars and placed in confinement; but this, so far as is yet known, is the only overt act of insubordination committed by them. It is said that the raja has personally nothing to fear from his disaffected subjects; and in this view of the matter the easiest solution of the difficulty would probably be for him personally to visit the villages and himself make inquiry and redress.—Pioneer.

THE LATE REV. DR. WENGER.—We regret to have to record the death, on August 20, of the Rev. Dr. J. Wenger, the well-known Baptist Missionary. Dr. Wenger was, we believe, of Swiss parentage, and early in life displayed a remarkable aptitude for acquiring languages. After leaving home he first went to Greece, and, after a short stay there, to England, from whence he came out to join the Baptist Mission in 1839. From his linguistic attainments he was soon associated with Mr. Yates in preparing a Bengali translation of the Bible, a work which he had to complete alone after Dr. Yates's death. This translation has gone through several editions, one of which was supervised by Dr. Wenger and issued only lately. In addition to this he was engaged upon a commentary on the Bible, which he had completed as far as the Epistle to Timothy, which will shortly be printed. This, however, gives but a faint idea of Dr. Wenger's work, for he was always engaged in translating tracts and hymns into Bengali or Sanskrit, of which language he was also a master. Quiet and unostentatious in his manner, he went about, after the manner of his Master, doing good amongst the poor, by whom his loss will be greatly felt, as it will also by his numerous friends.—Englishman.

TIPPERA.—The district of Tippera, at present in the Dakka administrative division, is to be transferred to the Chittagong division from Nov. 1 next.

THE JETTY EMBANKMENT.—The Lieutenant Governor has sanctioned an outlay of Rs.1,20,000 by the Port Commissioners for an extension of jetty embankment.

GAS FOR BENARES.—The municipality of Benares have decided to light the city with gas.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS PIER.—The expenditure on the works up to June 30 has been about Rs.40,01,601, and the progress of each pier during the six months ending June 30 has been greater than the progress in any previous corresponding six months since the first block was set, as this table will show :—

		North pier.	South pier.	Total.

MADRAS RAILWAY PROVIDENT FUND.—The tenth annual report of the above fund for the year ending December 31, 1879, is as follows :—272 members joined the fund during the year, and 495 withdrew, leaving at the close of the year a total of 1,539 names on the register. The income of the year from subscriptions was Rs.13,274, which exceeds the amount subscribed in the preceding year by Rs.64-8. The amount refunded to members during the year was Rs.11,458-13. The total sum at the credit of subscribers at the end of the year was Rs.83,686-7, or an average of Rs.54-6 to each member. The net profits realised during the year amounted to Rs.9,172-7-6, admitting of a distribution to each subscriber of a dividend of 10 per cent. of the total sum at credit, which percentage has accordingly been distributed. The purchase of Government paper during the year amounted to Rs.9,500, costing Rs.8,880. So that at the close of the year the total nominal value of the Government bonds amounted to Rs.93,500. The large amount of subscriptions refunded during the year is partly due to the numerous applications that have been received and passed for refunds under Rule 9. This subject has been under the consideration of the executive committee of the fund, who have recorded a resolution to the effect that in future no applications under this rule will receive attention unless the head of the department concerned recommends that it be complied with. The heads of departments have been directed to recommend only exceptional and deserving cases.—Madras Times.

LOSS OF THE BARQUE "LASSA."—Our Bimlipatam correspondent writes under date August 6 :—"The barque Lassa, 1,139 tons register, commanded by Capt. J. Higgins, on her voyage from Madras to Calcutta, struck on the Santipilly rocks at 11 a.m. on the 5th instant and sank in ten minutes without leaving a vestige behind her. Fortunately there were no lives lost; the captain and crew having been saved by the ship's boats, landed at Santipilly on the same day at 6 p.m., and from thence they arrived at Bimlipatam this morning. There were forty-one hands on board, nine of whom were Europeans. Nothing is known at present as to how the vessel got on the rocks. At the time she struck the weather was clear, with a moderate breeze from the south. She was carrying a ballast of sand and had no cargo on board. The Lassa is an iron vessel, built at Glasgow in 1877. Her owners are Messrs. S. Potter, London. This is the second vessel wrecked on the Santipilly rocks since December, 1876, when the s.s. Dacca was lost."—Madras Standard.

THE MADRAS JOURNAL OF LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.—We are glad to hear that there is every prospect of the Madras Journal of Literature and Science for 1879 being published very shortly. It is rather late in the year 1880 for a journal of 1879 to make its appearance, but better late than never. The following are the contents of the journal :—1. On Hygiene in Ancient India. 2. Antiquities of Namundar in North Arcot District. 3. On the names of places in Tanjore. 4. A brief sketch of the Yerukula Language as spoken in Rajahmundry. 5. Historical Tables concerning the Presidency of Fort St. George. 6. The ultimate source of Common Salt. 7. On the Army Organisations and Political Maxims of the Ancient Hindus, with special reference to gunpowder and firearms. The editor, Dr. Oppert, fills nearly half of the journal with his article on firearms, &c., No. 7 in the contents. In the last number of the journal Dr. Oppert propounded his theory on the classification of languages. The Academy of July 17 remarks thus on Dr. Oppert's theory :—"It must be allowed that the linguistic classification which he proposes is in many respects better than any hitherto advanced." Whatever might be his theory, it must be admitted that the doctor is unremitting in his labours in the cause of literature and science.

THE MYSOR ADMINISTRATION.—This certainly seems to substantiate what is stated by the champions of Mr. Gordon's administration—namely, that he has not, as is alleged without a shadow of a shade of foundation, been flooding Mysor with Madrasses; that, on the contrary, he has not himself imported one single individual from outside, but has resisted such importation when it has been urged upon him, on the ground that he believes there is fairly good material to be found within the province. His friends contend that he has simply been impartial in promoting officials whom he has already found in the ranks of the administration without regard to their place of origin. A table classifying the native commissioners down to amildars shows that, out of a total of 125 posts of the upper class, 16 only are held by outsiders of all kinds, whereas the influential family or clan of local Iyengars alone monopolise thirty-three out of the 125. As regards the officials of the lower grades, the state of the case is as follows :—Iyengars, 519; other Brahmins, 3,254; Madras Brahmins, 16; Sudras, 844; Mahomedans, 310; Eurasians or Europeans, 102; total, 5,045. This statement has reference to officials drawing pay under Rs.100 a month, and it speaks for itself. The Madras Brahmins are nowhere in the race apparently. The cry about the undue supersession of the native Mysoreans by outsiders seems, in fact, on close investigation, to break down utterly.—Pioneer.

COURT-MARTIAL.—A private of the 44th Regiment, named William Rankin, was tried by court-martial at Thayetmyo, the other day, for ten different offences of insubordination, theft, &c. He was sentenced to five years' penal servitude, to be put under stoppages of pay until he makes good certain articles which he stole, and to be discharged with ignominy from her Majesty's service. Sir Neville Chamberlain, in confirming the sentence, says :—"The prisoner deserves no consideration. He is a man of very bad character, and most reckless and insubordinate. The army is well rid of so bad a soldier."—Athenæum.

A DISTURBANCE IN HYDERABAD.—We have received further information regarding the disturbance at Goolburga. The cause of it arose about three weeks ago. The Hindus were burying a body near a Mahomedan mosque at Goolburga, but in a place where Hindus have always buried their dead, when the Mahomedans suddenly took umbrage at this, attacked them while they were in the act of burial, and threw the body out in the road. This created a disturbance at the time, and there was a free fight, in which one person was killed and several severely wounded, when the police interfered and restored order. On the disturbance being reported to Sir Salar Jung he ordered a committee, consisting of three Europeans and three Parsees, to inquire into it and report fully on the case. It is while this committee is sitting that this last row has taken place. The Hindus disapproved of the European members as they knew nothing about caste rules, &c., being engineers in H.H. the Nizam's P.W.D.; and they petitioned the Nizam's Government to appoint one who had a knowledge of their caste rules and customs. Meanwhile this second disturbance broke out.—Deccan Herald.

GENERAL PRENDERGAST.—We are glad to be able to state that Colonel Harry N. D. Prendergast, V.C., C.B., of the Royal (late Madras) Engineers, commandant of the Madras Sappers and Miners, has been appointed Brigadier General of Malabar and Canaro, in succession to Brigadier General Burton.—Mail.

THE RAMPA REBELLION.—The latest reports received from Brigadier General Buck, commanding the troops at Rampa, are to the effect that everything is quiet at Mulkangiri, and the villagers are settling down. It has been decided to send back the 10th Regt. N.I. to Madras with the exception of 200 men, who are to be retained for a short time.—Madras Times.

CRUSADE AGAINST A MAN-EATER.—We hear that a few well-known shikarees intend to proceed to Kodaikanal, Pulney Hills, where a man-eater is said to be at large and committing great depredations among cattle, &c., for the sworn purpose of giving stripes his quietus.—Athenæum.

CHOLERA.—We regret to hear that cholera has been imported into Madras from Periapoliem, a village thirty miles distant, where the annual heathen festival had been celebrated lately, two cases proving fatal at Chintadrepettah. Active measures, we learn, have been adopted to stamp out the disease, which we trust will prove effectual.—Ibid.

THE BUCKINGHAM MILL COMPANY (LIMITED).—At a meeting, held on August 24, the audited accounts, &c., were passed and a dividend declared. The profit for the half-year ending June 30 is Rs.37,941-15-7; a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum was declared—viz., Rs.50 per share on 700 shares, equal to Rs.35,000.—Athenæum.

THE TELEPHONE.—An interesting experiment with the telephone was recently made between Madras and Arcot, a distance of over forty miles. A concert of vocal and instrumental music performed at both places was transmitted and heard with distinctness at the opposite ends of the wire.—Englishman.

AN OFFICER UNDER ARREST.—An officer in the Royal Artillery, stationed at Secunderabad, is at present under arrest on the charge of circulating or causing to be circulated an anonymous communication reflecting in strong language on the character of the family of another officer in the station. There is, we believe, much difference of opinion as to whether the act, even if proved, can, strictly speaking, be called a military offence. A court of inquiry has been held, with what result is not yet known.—Athenæum.

COL. DREVER.—Col. Drever, C.S.I., the commissioner of police, Madras, leaves Madras in the French steamer for Marseilles, and will probably retire from the service before the expiration of his present leave. His health was undermined by his exertions during the famine. Col. Drever is both one of the most experienced and most popular of the officers in the Police Department, which he entered in June, 1859, five months before Col. Hearn, and eleven months after Col. Swanston, the Nestor of the local service. Cols. Hearn and Swanston will become entitled to their off- reckonings in 1884, but Col. Drever's time will not be completed until the following year.—Mail.

THE COTTON MART.—The staple article of production in Southern India, which was so largely exported to London and to the continent of Europe by the canal steamers, is now steadily on the decline. From the reports we have received from the interior we learn that there is a slight failure in the cotton crops in the different districts in the mofussil this year, and they will, it is feared, not yield a large outturn next year as anticipated. This failure is attributed to the want of rain in some of the cotton districts. The present stock available in the market is being largely absorbed by the buyers for the several cotton spinning and weaving mills in Madras and the other Presidencies, and some lakhs of rupees have been invested in cotton by mill agents here. The Bourbon crop is said to have failed owing to the want of rain, and oopum, it is said, will in a month hence be scarce, as it is the end of the season. Owing to the adulteration of the market good qualities are not procurable. The spinning mills in Madras are now working well, and with good returns. The yarn spun here is equivalent to that exported from Manchester. Exports of Madras yarn are largely sent to the several gaols in the mofussil as well as to the coast.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

IT is notified in the Bombay Government Gazette that, in selecting candidates for appointment as second-class subordinate judges in the regulation districts of this Presidency, preference will, as a rule, be given to men who have passed the L.L.B examination of the Bombay University over those who only have passed in the same year the examination of subordinate judges according to the test prescribed by her Majesty's High Court of Judicature at Bombay. Government, notwithstanding, reserve in every case their discretionary power of selecting the candidate whom they may consider the fittest.

REMOVALS FROM THE BENCH.—His Excellency the Governor in Council has directed the removal of the following names from the list of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the town and island of Bombay:—Bomanjee Framjee Cama, Cursondas Madhowdas, Cumulsee Premjee, Dhunjeebhoy Framjee Patell, Dosabhooy Framjee Cama, Gunputrow Ragoba, Kesewjee Naique, Limjee Maneckjee Limjee, Nanabhooy Pandurang.—Bombay Gazette.

SALE OF PROPERTY.—The land (20,000 square yards) at the powder works bunder, Mazagon, held by the Mazagon Manufacturing Company from Government at a rental of Rs.100 per month for a term of ninety-nine years, renewable, and mill and press buildings, &c., standing thereon, were recently sold for Rs.1,05,500 to Mr. John Gordon, the highest bidder.—Ibid.

THE MANILLA EARTHQUAKE.—The Mr. F. C. Parker, of the firm of Messrs. Peele, Hubbell, and Co., mentioned in the account of the earthquake at Manilla as having been seriously injured by the debris of a falling house coming down upon him, is the brother of Mr. Parker, the agent of the P. and O. Company in Bombay. The report states that an arm of the injured gentleman, who was the only Englishman in the town that came to grief, had been amputated, and he was in a precarious condition.—Ibid.

NURSEY KESSOWJEE.—Nursey Kessowjee, notorious in connection with the great mill frauds, and who, it will be remembered, was sentenced to undergo four years' rigorous imprisonment for his share therein, is said to be bearing his forced confinement badly. Since his committal we are informed he has lost 50lb. in weight, and he was at no time a corpulent man, in which respect he differed greatly from his father. He is at present an inmate of the gaol hospital.—Ibid.

ILLNESS OF MR. MIDDLETON.—A Puna paper mentions the dangerous illness of Mr. W. H. Middleton, district traffic superintendent G.I.P. Railway. He is suffering from typhoid fever, and his life is despaired of. Mr. Middleton is one of the oldest servants of the company still in India; he is a most kind-hearted and obliging man, and is universally known on the lines of the G.I.P. Railway. All who know him will be grieved to hear of his dangerous illness.—Ibid.

ASSAULT BY OFFICERS.—We hear that Capt. French, R.A., was recently fined Rs.500 by Mr. Sinclair, assistant collector and magistrate of Ahmedabad, for assaulting a number of koonbis at the village of Venjole. It appears that Capt. French and Lieuts. Kupar, R.A., and Forbes, 15th N.I., were out on a hog hunting excursion, and one of their horsekeepers insulted some women of the village, with the result that he and his fellows were thrashed by the male inhabitants. The ghorawallas thereupon ran to their masters' tents crying for assistance, and the officers appear to have taken their part and in turn thrashed the villagers. On appeal Mr. Phillpotts, the sessions judge, reduced the fine to Rs.50.—Ibid.

PROPOSED AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION AT OOMRAWUTTEE.—It is stated that an agricultural exhibition, similar to the one held at Akola in 1868, is to take place at Oomrawuttee early next year. The movement was originated by the principal native inhabitants of the zillab, and, according to the vernacular papers, the British Resident at Hyderabad, Sir Richard Meade, has promised his patronage and support.—Times of India.

PROPOSED STATUE TO SIR R. TEMPLE.—It has been decided to commemorate Sir Richard Temple's services in India by erecting a statue in Bombay. The committee who are entrusted with the funds met on August 28 to select a sculptor.—Ibid.

RAINFALL IN BOMBAY.—The total fall of rain in Bombay up to Aug. 27 was as follows:—Byculla, 43 inches 55 cents; Fort, 46 inches 69 cents; Colaba, 43 inches 75 cents.—Ibid.

THE 61ST REGIMENT.—The 61st (South Gloucestershire) Regiment, Lieut. Col. William Blackett, who are expected to arrive here in the Orontes from Malta on Sept. 4, will be stationed in Bombay, and the companies of the 4th King's, now garrisoning Colaba, will return to Puna. The 2-24th Regiment, who also come out in the Orontes, will go to Puna.—Ibid.

LIEUT. COL. WARDROP.—Lieut. Col. Wardrop, who will probably be confirmed as adjutant general of the Bombay army in place of the late General Brooke, entered the service in 1850 and joined the late 29th Regiment N.I. in 1852, with which regiment he served until 1861, being adjutant from May, 1857, until June, 1861, when he was appointed staff officer at Kaladgie. Since then, with the exception of about two years, from 1871 to 1873, he has been continually on the staff of the army.—Times of India.

BOMBAY PLAGUE IN KANDEISH.—Some form of foot-and-mouth disease or cattle plague has broken out in the Kandeish collectorate.—Times of India.

BOMBAY AND THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—The Madras Athenæum says the western capital has certainly set a noble and praiseworthy example which Madras would do well to follow. The object for which the fund has been started is one that must elicit the warmest sympathy and call forth an exercise of liberality from all those who have a spark of patriotism within them. If the people of Madras are desirous, therefore, of testifying their loyalty and displaying their patriotism, to say nothing of that sympathy which they are bound to show towards those European and native soldiers who have been disabled, or towards the families of those who have died when engaged in the operations of the war in Afghanistan, they cannot do better than unite in getting up such a public meeting as that which has been held in Bombay. Sir James Fergusson made a very happy allusion when he referred to the long and honourable association of British and native soldiers on the battlefields of India, and beyond the sea, in China and Persia, and when, in mentioning the Malta expedition, he remarked that "native soldiers had even crossed the 'black water' to Europe to redress an attempted wrong." We in Madras must remember that the Patriotic Fund has as strong claims upon our sympathy as it has on the sympathy of the inhabitants of the other presidencies, and we should not allow any stigma to attach to the "benighted" from an apathy in supporting so deserving and charitable a cause. The native chiefs of Bombay and Calcutta have come forward with almost unprecedented liberality, and native gentlemen have shown their sympathy by contributing largely towards the fund. If Madras is to maintain its reputation at all it should not be slow in following the noble example that has been set to it by the citizens of Bombay.

ROYAL BOMBAY YACHT CLUB.—At the last meeting of the trustees of the port of Bombay a letter was read from the hon. secretary, Royal Bombay Yacht Club, forwarding a plan showing the site on the Wellington Reclamation required for the erection of a club-house—it measures 100 feet by 150—and stating that the club desires to have a long lease of the premises. It was proposed by Mr. Mathew that a site of the area specified, but at the north end of the road frontage instead of in the middle as shown in the plan, be offered on lease for fifty years at a rent of Rs.200 per annum for first two years, Rs.1 per square yard per annum for next twenty years, and Rs.1½ per square yard for remaining twenty-eight years. On a poll being taken there voted in favour of the motion:—Hon. Mr. Graham, Hon. Mr. Sassoon, Messrs. Grant, Mathew, and Jacob, Capt. Carey and the Chairman. Against it:—Messrs. Jairazbhoy Peerbhoy, Sorabjee Framjee, Kittredge, and Vurjeebundas Madhowdas. The motion was accordingly carried.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1880.

INDIA SINCE 1876.

ALTHOUGH the time has not come for a history of Lord Lytton's administration of India, it is certain that very early in the next session of Parliament a most important contribution will be made to it, if not before. For there is a report, which we believe to be well founded, that Sir John Strachey will not be long in England before he communicates to the public a piece justificative of his financial policy and explanatory of the singular blunder into which he was led by taking it for granted that subordinate officials were doing their duty as they had most satisfactorily done it the year before. But very early in the next session of Parliament Lord Lytton will have an opportunity of fulfilling a duty which he owes to himself, and we will venture to add to many others than himself, of vindicating from aspersions, both numerous and varied, the policy which he has pursued in and out of India during the four eventful years in which he represented his Sovereign. From the very first he offended and alienated one or two powerful sections of Indian society. He was "too friendly," said those who regarded a Viceroy as a being who should wrap himself up in dignity, and affect, if he did not inherit, the repose that marks the cast of Vere de Vere. His manners were too "continental;" they continued; he actually smoked cigarettes in public. Then he resolved that, instead of sustaining two or three journals by crumbs of official news, the English system should be applied of sending such news to all the daily papers, irrespective of standing. Misdemeanours of this sort soon caused the formation of a party in India which found echoes at home and which never swerved from its systematic depreciation of a Viceroy who did not follow the etiquette and the groove of his predecessors.

Whatever be the verdict that will be pronounced on Lord Lytton's administration, it will at least not be prejudiced by such considerations as those which have largely influenced contemporary comments upon it. Nor will the historian of the epoch dwell long upon the famous Fuller

Minute, which aroused such sensations in many breasts, nor upon the abolition of the salt customs line, nor even upon the reduction of the cotton duties, while the extended admission of natives to Government posts will probably be shown to have been a likely step under any Viceroy. On four questions and four only must the verdict hinge. These four are the proclamation of the Empire and the ceremonies accompanying it, the Afghan policy, the famine management, and the financial administration. On two of these questions opinions will differ to the end of time, but before long public documents will be produced which will bring the Afghan policy and the financial administration to the test of facts and figures. We have no intention at present of going at length into the Afghan question, but it stands confessed that there is now much more to be said for the policy adopted by Lord Lytton than was admitted by his critics at the outset. We are able to say that there never would have been any invasion of Afghanistan if the Ameer Shere Ali had sent to India in 1876-77-78 a representative who had power to treat. Even Lord Lawrence's policy would not have been proof against a refusal to send us an envoy, a refusal to receive one, and an acceptance with all honour of a Russian Embassy. Lord Northbrook's predecessor was, as we know from his famous Minute, noted for courtesy towards Russia, but for firmness in maintaining that she should not make or meddle with any State on our Indian border. If he had had to deal with a condition of things like that which faced Lord Lytton when, as we believe, not only was Afghanistan out of hand, but, as can be shown, Beluchistan was in a highly dangerous state, we are by no means sure that he would not have reconsidered some of the opinions to which he gave utterance, having imperfect knowledge of some recent facts. On this question we may expect serious revelations when Parliament reassembles.

The broad ground upon which Sir John Strachey will base his defence may be briefly stated. He will show that under his administration the revenue increased, not by leaps and bounds, but with a steadiness which showed solid progress, and that, had there been no Afghan war and no famine, there would have been a surplus of four millions for the last financial year. He will argue that, notwithstanding the war and the famines, there was no deficit until the extraordinary and unprecedented error of accounts made by some of his subordinates. The Finance Minister assumed, perhaps too readily, that the checks which had been found sufficient in the previous year would prove adequate under the increased strain caused by the war, and he will suggest that it was no part of his duty to assume that the balances from the various treasuries would not be brought into account on the last occasion as they had been heretofore. He and the Viceroy had no suspicion that the balances in the treasuries had been actually reduced so much below the figures at which they nominally stood until the calls on the treasuries failed to produce the amount required for the drawings from England. This it was which first engendered suspicion that the accounts, especially the military accounts, had not been brought up to date. There are here evidently the materials for a very wide-reaching and very sweeping defence. We do not by any means say that it will be complete or sufficient; but it is quite certain that it will be far more telling and effective than most of Sir John Strachey's critics will allow. He and Lord Lytton are, of course, responsible for what has taken place, but if it can be shown that the error could have been avoided by no precautions that could have been imagined under the Indian system of finance the nominal responsibility will sit very lightly on their shoulders. The question which we believe will be put to those writers who denounce the error merely because it took place, and who argue therefore that it ought to have been prevented, will be somewhat to this effect:—In what respect did Lord Lytton and his financial member of council neglect their duty, and does any stigma morally rest upon either of them because some officials whose duty was purely confined to accounts failed to take cognisance of exceptional expenditure under exceptional circumstances? There is a prejudice founded upon generosity that lies, sometimes deeply indeed, in the English nature against public men saving themselves by blaming their subordinates, and no public man would willingly put himself in such a position. But facts are stubborn things, and Sir John Strachey, in his own exculpation, may well show that what he had a right to expect should be done was not done, that what he had a right to take for granted was neglected, owing, it would appear, to a misapprehension; and that the blunder resulted from the fact that one man cannot do everything, and we know that if a man wants a thing properly done he must do it himself. We conceive, in conclusion, that this defence will need no special ingenuity to commend it to the minds of practical men. Of course the error can never happen again, but it would be futile to imagine that every possibility of error can be eliminated from any system of finance, especially one which depends so largely upon the exact accuracy of so many treasuries, separated by such vast distances, and organised under so many separate administrations.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Notifications—Simla, August 14.

No. 2326.—By a resolution, No. 3556, dated Oct. 19, 1877, the Governor General in Council prescribed measures for preventing legal tender copper coin from circulating at a discount in British India, Mysor, and Berar. In paragraph 5 his Excellency in Council directed that, if notwithstanding the orders issued, legal tender copper coin should, at any time or anywhere, circulate at a discount, the fact was to be immediately reported to the local Government, and by the local Government to the Government of India, "with full explanation of the causes of the phenomenon and of the measures taken to remedy the evil."

The Governor General in Council now further directs that the report prescribed in paragraph 5 shall be made whenever legal tender copper coin may be found to circulate at a premium. The causes of its doing so, and the measures adopted to neutralise them, must also be stated.

No. 2327.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 8 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, the Governor General in Council has exempted from stamp duty agreements executed respecting the occupancy of land, whether surveyed or not, and the payment of the land revenue therefor under the "Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879" (Bombay Act No. V. of 1879), or any rules made thereunder.

No. 2329.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 8 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, the Governor General in Council has exempted from stamp duty agreements with railway companies or administrations for the conveyance of goods and receipts given by such companies or administrations for fares for conveyance of passengers or goods, or both, or animals.

No. 2338.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 35 of the Court Fees Act VII. of 1870 the Governor General in Council directs that the fee on a plaint or memorandum of appeal in a suit for a declaration of title instituted in the court of a settlement officer invested with powers under Section 49 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1877, shall be reduced to one rupee.

HOME NEWS.

OBITUARY.—The death is announced as having taken place suddenly, at Ryde, Isle of Wight, on the 9th inst., of Col. Sir John Stewart Wood, at the age of sixty-seven years. The deceased gallant officer, who entered the army in 1831, took an active part in the Coorg campaign, 1834, in Afghan and Kohistan campaigns of 1838-42, and also in the Crimea. He was Knight of the Legion of Honour, assistant adjutant general at Aldershot from 1850-60, deputy inspector general of Royal Irish Constabulary from 1860-65, and inspector general from 1865-76. He was created a C.B. in 1855 and a K.C.B. in 1870.

STATION HOSPITALS IN INDIA.—Information has reached us that the introduction of station hospitals has been sanctioned at certain places occupied by troops in India. Having in view the interest of the troops themselves, and of the military service generally, we regret this exceedingly, believing, as we do, that the measure is a retrograde step, and, in fact, a recurrence to conditions which had to be done away with in that country so long ago as the latter end of last century. This fact, indeed, is patent enough to those who read the history of army hospitals; but it is to be feared that, like many other so-called "reformers," the number of those now so called who refer to the past as a preliminary to enunciating their "discoveries" is comparatively small. This scheme of station hospitals in India has, we believe, been strongly opposed by officers high in rank and of much experience in wars in that country. There are a good many of those who took part in the campaign of the mutiny who recollect the facility with which regimental and general establishments on that occasion worked together and interchangeably. They testify to the adaptability of the regimental system to times of peace, and to the requirements of every class of persons in a regiment, including patients and medical officers. Nor do some of the statements we have seen indicate any single respect in which, during the present war in Afghanistan, "unification" has shown sufficiently over that whose place it took, although several very serious objections against it might readily be constructed out of certain occurrences that have been mentioned in connection with that war. So far as the destruction of the regimental system on home service is concerned, there are those who consider the results the very reverse of encouraging. These naturally look with apprehension to the reintroduction into India of the system already condemned in that country. Among many other disadvantages attending it, one is expense; this item must become considerably larger than under the regimental system, as regards establishment and equipment; the necessity in our larger stations of carrying patients long distances to the general hospitals, while suffering from cholera, ardent fever, heat apoplexy, and so on, must necessarily be extremely objectionable; and in so far as the necessities of families are concerned, whether of officers or soldiers, the objections against having to be attended by a succession of new and strange medical officers can only be fully appreciated by those whose misfortune it is to have been placed in such circumstances.—Medical Press and Circular.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs. 30,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, 22,16,000; to Bombay, 7,50,000; and to Madras, 34,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 18.8 1-16d. will receive about 68 per cent. Compared with last week this price shows a decline of 1-16d. The same amount will be tendered for next Wednesday.

GOLD MINING IN INDIA.—The prospectus has been issued of the Wynaad Perseverance Estate and Gold Mining Company, (Limited), which has been formed to "acquire, cultivate, and develop the Perseverance Estate, in the South East Wynaad, in the Madras Presidency, which closely adjoins the properties belonging to the South East Wynaad Estates and Gold Mining Company (Limited), and is surrounded by well-known estates, such as the Alpha, Hamsluck, Adelphi, Hamslade, &c., which in Mr. Brough Smyth's report are most favourably spoken of as containing gold quartz. The estate is estimated to contain about 600 acres, 466 of which are held on lease from the Raja of Nellumbore for 96 years, from 1858, at an annual rental of Rs.450, with a renewal fee equal to one year's rent in every twenty-fourth year, and with a reservation of the teak and blackwood to the Raja, and the remainder for forty-eight years from 1875, at an annual rental of Rs.125, with a renewal fee equal to one year's rent in every twelfth year, with power to renew at the expiration. A lease is held for thirty-six years from August 15, 1879, giving mining rights over fifteen acres, at an annual rental of Rs.25 per acre, and the Raja binds himself to grant such further rights as may be required, it applied to within five years from the above date. About 150 acres are planted with coffee and a portion with cinchona trees. The purchase money is £50,000, of which £26,666 is to be in fully-paid shares. The capital of the company is £80,000 in shares of £1.

WOOLWICH AND SANDHURST COLLEGES.

THE reports of the board of visitors appointed for the year 1880 to inspect the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, and the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, have been issued. The Woolwich visitors state that the normal establishment of cadets is fixed at 195, but there are only 180 at present at the Academy. Since the last inspection in October, 1879, there has been a marked decrease in the minor offences which are liable to occur where a large body of young men are for the first time subjected to the restraint of military discipline, and are learning the necessity of prompt and unquestioning obedience to orders from superior authority. The general conduct of the cadets has, with few exceptions, been excellent. The late Governor, acting under the powers conferred upon him in paragraph 33 of the regulations, found it necessary to rusticate four cadets for serious breaches of the rules of the establishment. This punishment entails the loss of a term, and, as a consequence, a corresponding delay in appointment to commissions. The health of the students continues good. Under the head of "instruction" the visitors make the following remarks:—"The board made inquiries with reference to the amount of proficiency attained by the cadets in modern languages, and the facilities afforded for their instruction in French and German. They gather, from information supplied to them by the respective professors, that, upon an average, more than half the cadets possess some knowledge of colloquial French at the time of their entering the institution. The Professor of French, however, remarks, with reason, that as only six hours a week are allotted to modern languages, the time devoted to practice in conversation is too limited to allow of much improvement. The cadets, as a rule, have but little acquaintance with the German language when they join the academy; and although most of them on passing out are able to read it with facility, and make themselves understood, no great proficiency can be expected with the present limited time for study. The rules require that each cadet should qualify in either French or German by obtaining half marks. Permission is granted to cadets, with the consent of their parents, to learn Italian and Spanish, with masters independent of the academy, at hours which do not interfere with their military studies."

The board of visitors for the Sandhurst College report that little has occurred since the last inspection calling for special comment. The Government reports that discipline has been satisfactory and easily enforced, and although, upon reference to the defaulters' book, it appears that complaints with regard to a want of punctuality are not infrequent, it is gratifying to learn that no serious offence calling for rustication or expulsion has occurred during the past year. In consequence of the more advanced age of the cadets on entering the college the authorities deemed it expedient to place them on a somewhat different footing to that of the Woolwich cadets. At Sandhurst the cadets dine late, and are allowed a moderate amount of wine for dinner, for which they pay. The punishments are similar to those in use among the undergraduates of the universities; and, in short, it is recognised that the cadets have passed into the stage of life when they can no longer be dealt with as boys, but must be treated as young men who are undergoing a short professional training previously to their being commissioned as officers of her Majesty's service. The progress made by the cadets in the different branches of their military studies during the last two terms is stated to have been on the whole very fair.

BANK OF MADRAS.—At a meeting of the directors of the Bank of Madras held last Friday evening the rate of interest for demand loans was reduced 1 per cent.—Madras Times.

On the present state of Kashmir, a correspondent writes from Srinuggur to a contemporary:—"The famine is over, but has left its marks everywhere. You see this in the tenanted houses by the wayside, in the closing of the silk manufactories, and in various other ways too palpable to be misunderstood. Many an industry has been ruined, many a trade gone, many a family been impoverished. The loss of property to individuals and the misery the famine has inflicted on the inhabitants are incalculable. During its prevalence thousands were compelled by starvation to emigrate to the plains, and fortunate were those who reached them alive, for many perished on the road. The artisan, the weaver, the carpenter, the goldsmith, fled from the country to seek relief elsewhere. The zemindar, who had held his lands for years, abandoned them in despair, for there were neither cultivators, nor cattle, nor grain, nor means of raising his crops. Before the famine there were about 10,000 shawl weavers in Srinuggur alone. I doubt whether 4,000 can be found at the present moment. The silk trade, under the superintendence of Babu Nelumbur, was in a flourishing condition, and large quantities of it were annually exported to Europe. Now it has almost ceased to exist, and it will take a long time before it can be resuscitated. But Kashmir is beginning to recover from the effects of the calamity. Where there were neglected fields are now smiling crops, where villages and hamlets were almost deserted is now to be heard the busy hum of human voices collecting and threshing the harvest. This year has been an auspicious one. The fall of snow in the winter has been unprecedented. The rains have been abundant and timely, and the rubbee crops are generally fair. The rice plants just sprouting out have been benefited by the rainfall and promise to yield a good harvest. Still destitution is great, and the Maharaja keeps a poor house open, where about five or six hundred paupers are clothed and fed. At Sheik Baugh, on every Saturday, large numbers of paupers assemble to receive alms and clothes from the Rev. Mr. Wade, who has been a resident of Kashmir for years. I was present on one occasion, when there were more than two thousand seated on the ground in double files."

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 4; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 2; Calcutta, Sept. 1.

REPORTS on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 24 state that rain was plentiful and general during the week in Burma, Assam, and Bengal. In Madras and Mysor favourable rain has again fallen, and prospects are fair. In Bombay slight rain fell in the Deccan districts and Southern Mahratta Country, where more is still urgently needed. Rain is also greatly wanted throughout the Presidency generally; and in Sind the crops are, in some places, suffering from a fall in the Indus. In Berar, the Central Provinces, the North Western Provinces, and Oudh, Central India States, Rajputana, and the Punjab, the rainfall of the week has been very limited and partial. Good rain fell only in the Sambalpur districts of the Central Provinces and in the eastern districts of the North Western Provinces. The want of rain in the Provinces and States is now causing some anxiety. The week's reports show that in the Eastern Provinces prospects remain satisfactory; that in Madras and Mysor, where the rains in the latter part of July and beginning of this month were deficient, prospects have improved; but that in a large portion of Western, Central, and Northern India the season has as yet been too dry, resulting in some injury to the autumn crops, which, unless more rain falls soon, may suffer seriously. The latest returns from the districts in the Bombay Presidency are rather gloomy, but during the past few days rain in moderate quantities has fallen in some of the most important localities, and the situation may therefore be said to have slightly improved. The August rainfall has been the smallest there has been noted in Bombay for the last twenty-five years. A Sholapur correspondent states that in the districts there the poor-houses have again been opened. Another correspondent writes, "things are looking very bad about Nuggur and Kaladgi, and in Khandesh rain is much wanted."

THE health reports for the same week are:—Bombay: Fever in some talukas of Karachi and Hyderabad, also in Dharwar. Bengal: Fever in many districts; prevalent in 24-Pergunnahs; cholera still in Cuttack and Pooree. N.W.P. and Oudh: General health good; cholera still in Lucknow, Allahabad, Bareilly, and Sitapur, but decreasing. Punjab: Fever prevalent in Hissar; small-pox decreasing in Dera Ismail Khan; health generally good. Central Provinces: Small-pox prevalent in Jubbulpore, Saugor, and Hoshangabad; cholera prevalent in Sambalpur. British Burma, Assam, Mysor, and Coorg: Health good. Central Indian States: Cholera in Morar (Gwalior). Rajputana: Malarious fever prevalent in Sirohi; elsewhere health good.

A TELEGRAM, dated 19th, says that crop prospects in Northern and Western India continue to improve. Good rain has fallen in most districts in the North Western Provinces, but much mischief has already been done in the Central Doab, and some of the crops there have been hopelessly burnt up. Should moderate rain fall before the end of the month there will, however, be no immediate danger of scarcity. There has been heavy rain in the Concan, and a fair fall in the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta country. The kharif crop is probably saved, and prospects for rahi are fairly good. Reports from Sind are that the river is rising and prospects are improving.

THE Times of India, while admitting that the crop prospects of the Deccan were serious at date of mail, points out that an abnormally dry August has often occurred without a consequent scarcity, and that the loss of the kharif crop does not mean famine. The most recent telegrams confirm this view.

"FROM VICEROY, SIMLA, SEPT. 18.—Following news from Kandahar and neighbourhood on 13th:—Ayub was reported two marches beyond Girishk, on road to Herat; rumoured that he had killed Satrip, and that Zaminda war people had offered to assist him in fresh attack on British, but he refused. General Daubeney, marching from Kushk-i-Nakhud, reported from Hangi-madal that seventy bodies had been buried, one of Wali's smooth-bore guns and five rifles recovered, and four of our natives taken prisoner by Ayub brought in. Third brigade Cabul-Kandahar force arrived at Killa-Abdula on 15th; a column sent 16th to Kuck and Kavar to open country for sappers, and remainder of brigade march direct to Quetta. General Baker's brigade left Kandahar on 15th. General Roberts has met Sir R. Sandeman at Gulistan, and arranged for forage and supplies. Sandeman believes no anxiety need now be felt on this head. Through telegraphic communication between Kandahar and India restored. Reports of supplies at Kandahar satisfactory. City trade reviving. Kandahar reports of the 16th say that on reaching Brabank, forty miles beyond the Helmand, Ayub heard that a number of Herat sowars were one march ahead, and sent to stop them, but they refused and continued their journey. An agent sent to Khakrez has sent in 119 of Ayub's camels loaded with flour. Lieut. Muir reports that General Daubeney's column has reached the field of action near Maiwand, but found all our dead buried. Storm in Bolan has washed away road, interfering with cart traffic, but road being repaired. Following wounded men died at Kandahar:—Privates Douglas, 72nd; Delvin and Brimber, 92nd; all wounded officers progressing favourably."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 21.—A landslide occurred at Naini Tal on 18th, carrying away several houses. The Lieutenant Governor telegraphs as follows:—Sept. 19, terrific landslide. The following persons killed and injured:—Killed—L. Taylor, C.S., assistant commissioner; G. H. Noad, personal assistant to inspector general police; Rev. Mr. Robinson, chaplain; Mr. Morgan, road overseer; Major Morphy, 40th Regiment; Mrs. Morphy; Mr. Turnbull; Captain Goodridge, 30th Native Infantry; Sergeant Major (Surgeon Major?), Hannah; Capt. Haines, R.E.; Capt. Balderston, 34th Regt., station staff officer; Lieut. Sullivan, 73rd Regt.; Lieut. Hackett (Halkett?), 73rd; Lieut. Carmichael, 33rd; Sergeant Major Rogers; Sergeant Instructor Meenan; Sergeant Frood, 33rd Regt.; Lance Sergeant Graver, 33rd Regt.; Lance Corporal Trister, 1-25th Regt.; Private Helmouth, 2-6th; Private Hoyes, 33rd; Private Gillan, 33rd; Privates Turner, H. Brown, Chisholm, and Keneray, 73rd; Private Farrance, 13th Hussars; Private Bart, 39th Regt.; Driver Colman, R.H.A.; Mr. Bell, junior merchant; Mr. Moss, assistant to Mr. Bell; Mr. James Drew, do.; Mr. Knight, do.; Mr. Tucker, clerk; Mr. Morgan, clerk; Mr. Shields, Resident of Naini Tal; Mr. Shields, brother of above; Mr. Shields, another brother of above. Injured—Mr. E. M'Leod, clerk, slightly; Mr. J. Walker, clerk, slightly; Mr. A. Drew; Mrs. Gray, assistant to Mr. Bell."

THE Times Calcutta correspondent telegraphs under date Sept. 19:—

"A meeting in aid of the patriotic fund was held at Simla on Tuesday. The Viceroy presided, and announced his intention of giving Rs.3,000. About Rs.10,000 were subscribed by persons present. The Viceroy leaves Simla about the end of October, and, after a few days' tiger shooting, proceeds to Lahore, where he will hold a large durbar on Nov. 15. Among the chiefs likely to attend are the Maharajas of Cashmir, Puttiala, Gheerd, Nabha, Kupoorthalla, Mundi, Faridkot, and Chumba, and the Nawab of Bhawalpur. From Lahore Lord Ripon goes to Karachi, visiting Sibi en route, and then by sea to Bombay. Sir Donald Stewart took his seat as a member of the Supreme Council on Tuesday. Every effort is being made to push on the Northern Punjab Railway. The Sohan Bridge was expected to be ready for trains to pass last week, and orders have been given to complete the line to Rawul Pindi by Oct. 1. Ootacamund has been the scene of a scare similar to and apparently more groundless than that which affected Karachi three weeks ago. A report got abroad that the Mahomedans were about to rise. Volunteers were called out and an armed company of infantry was telegraphed for from Wellington, and the people prepared themselves for defence. Eventually the report turned out to be entirely a false alarm. Col. Kennedy, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, has been appointed to the command of the Punjab Frontier Force. Nothing is yet finally settled regarding the proposed encampment of the Cabul Field Force at Hassan Abdul and its being reviewed there by the Viceroy. The plan is decidedly distasteful to the troops, who are anxious to get back at once to comparative luxury and rest at their respective stations after the privations and fatigues of the last two years. The Government has, on the recommendation of the Commander in Chief, authorised the grant of three months' privilege leave to the officers returning from service without forfeiture of the right of free passage afterwards to their own stations."

THE news from Cabul is generally favourable. General Mahomed Jan had written offering his services unreservedly to the Ameer, but is still very ill at his house in Wardak. His brother, who has been with the Ameer at Cabul, has been sent back with numerous presents. The news from Kandahar to the effect that the Sirdars Mossa Jan, Hashim Khan, and Abdulla Khan had been with Ayub in his camp before Kandahar is considered doubtful. Abdulla may have been with Ayub, but Hashim is believed to be still in the neighbourhood of Ghazni with Moosa Jan; while the mother of the late heir apparent is staying in the house of Mooskh-i-Alam, near Ghazni. All the Ghilzai chiefs have been dismissed to their homes, and have accompanied the new Governor of Lughman, Sirdar Aziz Khan. The only Ghilzai chief who remains in opposition is Gaiz Mahomed Khan, who held Ali Musjid when Cavagnari and Chamberlain's mission first started. The other Ghilzai chiefs have been instructed to reassure him, and, if they cannot make him submit to the Ameer, to drive him out of the country.

A KANDAHAR telegram states that the 2nd Brigade of General Roberts's force, accompanied by the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, marched towards Pishin and India on the 15th. The 1st Brigade, with the 9th Lancers and the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, are now the only Bengal troops still at Kandahar, and they are expected to move immediately. General Phayre's Division, now called officially the 2nd Bombay Division, which, for convenience of supplies, has hitherto been kept in the rear, will take the place of the departing Bengal Brigades in and about Kandahar. When these arrangements are complete there will remain a force of about 13,000 troops at Kandahar, including five British Infantry Regiments and one British Cavalry Regiment, with one heavy and three light batteries.

THE latest Kandahar telegram states that General Macgregor's brigade, consisting of the 60th Rifles and three native Bengal regiments, are ordered to return to India, via the line of the Harnai Railway, and upon their way down to punish the Marris who slaughtered and looted our retiring troops six weeks since. General Baker's Brigade, now at Pishin, is ordered to punish the Khojak tribes in a similar manner, as it is absolutely necessary that these marauders should be taught to respect parties traversing the roads.

It is understood that Sir Frederick Roberts, who is about to come to England, will return to India next year as commander in chief of the troops in the Madras Presidency, in succession to Sir Neville Chamberlain; Sir Donald Stewart, who had been previously designated for that position, having succeeded Sir Edwin Johnson as military member of Council. The Times also hears that the command of the forces in India, when vacated by Sir Frederick Haines, has been offered to Sir Neville Chamberlain; and that Sir Frederick Roberts will receive the Grand Cross of the Bath.

THE good service pension vacant by the succession of Brigadier T. Wright, C.B., to colonel's allowance has been conferred on Lieut. General Sir Frederick Roberts, K.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., R.A. Col. A. F. M. Boisragon, commanding the 4th Sikh Infantry, gets the good service pension vacant by the retirement of Surgeon General J. F. Beatson, M.D., C.I.E.

COL. C. E. GROGAN, 2-8th Regiment, is gazetted to the command of the brigade in the field vacant by the death of Brigadier H. R. L. Newdigate.

COL. J. C. HORNE is gazetted judge advocate general; Col. C. Nedham, deputy judge advocate general; and Capt. R. F. C. A. Tytler, deputy judge advocate general.

AUTHENTIC details of the action at Kushki-Nakhud have reached India in the form of a private letter from one of the officers engaged; but up to Monday last no report of General Burrows's defeat had reached the authorities either from that officer or from General Primrose. The Times of India says that particulars received regarding our original defeat point to the utter absence of generalship. It is reported that General Primrose abandoned the cantonments, leaving valuable stores, before General Burrows or Col. St. John could convey authentic intelligence. It is stated, too, that General Brooke was sent out to Kokaran with his brigade with written orders not to go beyond Sinjuri. If he had proceeded up the Herat road he could have rescued hundreds of our men and followers who were lying exhausted. Five of our smooth-bore guns were abandoned within seven miles of Kandahar, a position not reached by Ayub's advance guard till August 6. Most of our men were killed by the villagers, who murdered them as they fell exhausted on the roadside.

MR. BROCK is to be commissioned to execute the statue of Sir Richard Temple that it has been decided to put up in Bombay.

THE Bombay Game Bill has been read a first time by the Legislative Council and referred to a select committee for consideration. The measure was strongly opposed by two of the native members and supported by a third.

THE Royal Bombay Yacht Club have decided to erect a club house on the Apollo Bunder at a cost of about £3,000.

THE Government of India notify that all corps, detachments, and persons returning from field service with the Northern Afghanistan Field Force, the Khyber Line Field Force, and the Kuram Field Force shall be held to revert to their ordinary status on arrival at Peshawur or Thull; and if returning from the Cabul-Kandahar Field Force, and the Kandahar Field Force from Southern Afghanistan, from the date of arrival at the first station within British territory.

SOLDIERS belonging to regiments serving in India, whose period of enlistment or of total service, or whose period of army service is about to expire, are to be detained and their service prolonged for such further period, not exceeding twelve months, as may be found necessary. This order does not, however, apply to or authorise the further detention in India of men who were detained last trooping season under G.O.C.C. dated Sept. 17, 1879, who will be sent home during the ensuing trooping season with all convenient speed; but short-service soldiers who were detained last season may voluntarily prolong their service if willing and eligible to do so.

OF the sixteen recently created appointments, under the designation of Examiners of Postal Accounts, on a graduated scale of Rs.300, Rs.400, and Rs.500, with a travelling allowance of 8 annas per mile, and Rs.5 per diem for halage, three have been allotted to Bengal, two to Bombay, two to Madras, two to the North West Provinces, two to the Punjab, two to the Central Provinces, and one each to British Burma, Assam, and Behar. The senior examinership in Bengal has been conferred upon Mr. A. C. Boyd, superintendent of the Dead Letter-office

THE Begum of Bhopal has put a stop to the indiscriminate destruction of timber by establishing a Forest Conservancy Department. The Begum of Bhopal and the Kudsiah Begum have encouraged vaccination by employing a large number of vaccinators in the districts; 20,047 children have been vaccinated by them.

WE hear, says the Madras Times, that it has been decided to admit natives to volunteer corps in India. The question emanated from the chairman of the committee for the Malabar volunteer movement, who recommended the formation of native volunteer corps, but the Government of India, whose orders were requested in the matter, sanctioned the admission of natives to volunteer corps in India on certain terms only. The Madras Government have, accordingly, informed the collector of Malabar that separate corps of volunteers, or even companies consisting solely of natives, are not desired; but that if any of her Majesty's native Indian subjects should desire to take their places among the members of a volunteer corps, understanding sufficiently the English language, adopting the uniform of the corps, and being willing and able to share in its duties, there will be no objection to their enrolment. This decision has been communicated to the commandants of volunteer corps in the Madras Presidency, apparently with the view of a similar course being adopted should any native present himself for enlistment under the above conditions.

GREAT satisfaction has been felt at Singapore that H.E. the Governor of the Straits Settlements has received a telegram from the Secretary of State for the Colonies requesting him to postpone, pending further instructions, the Appropriation Bill for the cost of the Perak war. This is taken to mean that Sir M. Hicks Beach's decision of December last will be very considerably modified in accordance with the representations of the Legislative Council.

ACCORDING to the Times of India orders are said to have been received from the Home Government for the reduction of the salaries of several highly placed functionaries. The full extent of the reduction to be made has not transpired, but a contemporary says it is in a position to say that the salary of the Commander in Chief of Madras is to be reduced from Rs.70,000 to Rs.66,000 per annum, or from Rs.5,833-5-4 to Rs.5,500 per mensem, thereby effecting a saving of Rs.333-5-4 per mensem, or Rs.4,000 per annum. This reduction will not, however, it is said, affect Sir Neville Chamberlain, as the order will commence to operate with his successor. The salary of the Commander in Chief of the Bombay Army is likewise to be curtailed.

THE total amount subscribed by the Mahomedans for the Mecca Zobeida Canal Fund is Rs.4,86,883, as follows:—From Bombay, Rs.30,000; from other parts of India, Rs.2,28,883; from Arabia, Rs.95,000; from Turkey, Rs.1,30,000; from Mandalay, Rs.6,000.

THE Bombay papers ridicule the Karachi scare caused by a few Pathans sent to look for purchasable camels. But the Government is charged with having done what they could, by not vouchsafing any explanation of the hurried despatch of troops and suppression of news from the front, to "create a scare throughout India."

THE Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, in his official resolution on Behar, remarks that the working of the Behar estate in the hands of Messrs. Burrows, Mylne, and Thompson has revolutionised the whole cane sugar industry of Bengal. Mr. Edgar, in illustration of the prosperity of the Shahabad ryots, writes—"That the cane cultivators in the district have, with a view to introduce an improved method for the manufacture of molasses, bought 9,000 of the beheea mills, patented by Messrs. Thompson and Mylne, at an outlay of Rs.6,30,000. This is the result of the impetus which the canal irrigation has given to the cultivation of sugarcane. Before the opening of the canals the area under cane cultivation was only 1,804 acres, whereas it has now increased to 22,000 acres, or nearly twelve times the area previously cultivated. This increased cultivation of sugarcane has added considerably to the agricultural wealth of the district, the increase of profit derived from this source being estimated at no less than Rs.4,73,000 per annum."

IN addition to the telegraphic orders received at Cyprus that no further public works shall be undertaken, and that those in hand are to be suspended, it is stated by a contemporary that instructions have been given for her Majesty's ship Hellespont, which was specially detailed for service at the island, to be now permanently withdrawn. She is not to be replaced, it having been notified that it is not deemed necessary to station a man-of-war at Cyprus.

PARTICULARS OF THE SORTIE FROM KANDAHAR. RESPECTING the disastrous sortie, the original arrangement was for the village of Deh-i-Khoja to be rushed at, but General Brooke asked that it might first be bombarded by artillery. After it was discovered that the assault had been unsuccessful orders for the retirement were sent from the ramparts, and two parties got back safely, but the third party were cut off almost to a man, as they could not extricate themselves. General Brooke was almost the last, refusing to leave Cruickshank, who was badly wounded. He ordered several men, who rushed back to his assistance, to go on, and when almost outside the village both officers were cut down. Col. Shewell was shot in the leg while helping a wounded man into a dhoolie just outside the Cabul Gate. The Rev. Mr. Gordon went from the gate to a ziarat, where five wounded men were lying. The enemy made a rush and poured volleys of musketry into the ziarat, killing Mr. Gordon and several men.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD.

THE following are authentic details of the action of July 27:—General Burrows moved out with 2,800 men, all told, to occupy Maiwand. At 11 a.m. he simultaneously sighted Maiwand and a considerable body of cavalry on our left. Two guns and a troop of cavalry went out to reconnoitre and opened fire on the enemy's cavalry. Shortly afterwards the enemy's line developed, and it became evident we were in the presence of Ayub's whole force, who, like ourselves, were making for Maiwand. The rest of our guns now came into action, and, after half-an-hour, were answered by the enemy's, whose formation was as follows:—In our front and their centre line, infantry, with five batteries; at intervals on their right a numerous body of irregular cavalry with strong supports in rear; on their left a miscellaneous body of horses and foot streaming out of the Maiwand villages. At this time they were 2,000 yards distant. The ground is nearly level, but with slight undulations. For some little time the artillery fire on both sides was almost a farce, from the great range. An advance was then made for about 500 yards, and shortly afterwards the enemy also advanced till we were not more than 1,000 yards apart. Our infantry were now up and disposed as follows:—On the right and inclined to the flank, five companies of the 66th Regiment; next to them, to proper front, five companies of Jacob's Rifles; then guns; then 1st Grenadiers; and on the left two companies of Jacob's Rifles. The action now began to get hot, and a very heavy cannonade went on for an hour. Our guns held their own, but could not silence the enemy's. A good many horses were knocked over and a few men; but the loss was not serious. Suddenly, at a point some 300 yards on our right front, the enemy brought up two guns, partially enfilading our line, and at the same time they brought up a lot of infantry behind their guns, completely hidden by a dip in the ground and bringing on their main line. At the same time the enemy opened rifle fire. This was bad for the mounted men and artillery, but the infantry lying down suffered little. Before this two brisk attacks made by the irregular cavalry and infantry on our baggage had been repulsed with a loss by the guard of one company of each regiment. The enemy was now closing in on all sides, and our rifle fire, previously little used, began to open out with apparently admirable effect, till a sudden rush of the Ghazis in front of their regular infantry pushed back the Jacob's Rifles. Two guns left unprotected were carried. The 1st Grenadiers formed square and then were broken, and Jacob's Rifles fell back in confusion, charging into the rear of the 66th. The 66th, carried away by the Rifles, retreated eastward to their own proper front—a mixed mass without any formation. Very heavy fire was brought on them, killing many officers and men, and they gradually became separated from the rest of the force and followed the Ghazis, who had been attacking them, into some walled gardens. The enemy's cavalry had now cut them off from the rest of the force, and, though an attempt was made to bring up help, nothing could be done. Everybody and everything was in hopeless confusion and the enemy still pitching into us hot. A general retreat followed, only the artillery and part of the cavalry keeping any sort of organisation, and, to make matters worse, nothing could turn the fugitives from the direct road to Kandahar, on which there was no water for forty miles."—Correspondent of Times of India.

BURIAL OF THE FALLEN AT KUSHK-I NAKHUD.

TELEGRAPHIC accounts have been received from the force sent to bury the bodies of those who fell in the battle and flight from Kushk-i-Nakhud. The bodies both of the Afghans and of our own dead had been buried on the field of battle, evidently as a mark of respect. The loss of the Afghans must have been very heavy, judging from the huge graves. Of our troops fifty-two European and ninety-four natives were buried on the march up, and in the enclosed gardens where the last stand was made eighty-five Europeans and thirty-seven natives were found. The graves on the battlefield were opened, and as far as possible the bodies were identified, and then reinterred with due religious rites and military honours. About four hundred were counted, but nearly twice that number must have fallen in the retreat. Besides these the late Sirdar of Khelat-i-Ghilzai reports that he buried one hundred on the line of retreat. The following officers were identified and buried in the gardens:—Major Blackwood, Royal Artillery; Col. Galbraith, Major Oliver, Capt. Macmath, and Lieuts. Rayner and Chute, of the 66th Regiment; Capt. Smith, of Jacob's Rifles, and an officer who could not be identified. Seven officers are known to have been killed on the battlefield before the retreat began, and three are not accounted for. The Standard correspondent adds:—"The Bombay Grenadiers must have behaved steadily and well until the final break up, for while the 66th and Jacob's Rifles were partially protected by a depression of the ground, and their corpses show that their loss was comparatively small, the Grenadiers were on an exposed rise, swept in all directions by the enemy's fire, from which they suffered heavily, but they maintained their ground until the flanking artillery fire and the charge of the Ghazis broke Jacob's Rifles. Down in the enclosures the fight was very hot. Here the ground is everywhere strewn with shot and shell, and the débris of waggons and of accoutrements and remnants of clothing. This was especially the case near the last position taken up by the artillery." Major Bushman assured another correspondent that the aspect of the whole field showed unmistakably that the 66th must have fought their way stubbornly for a considerable distance, and slain many of their foes; also that they must have been well supported by the Grenadiers.

THE LANDSLIP AT NAINI TAL.

THE particulars of the terrible calamity which has overtaken the pleasant, "hospitable, somewhat gossipy, and thoroughly sporting" sanatorium of Naini Tal are given in telegrams to our daily contemporaries. The Pioneer correspondent, writing on August 24, speaks of the heavy burst of rain, twenty-two inches in forty-eight hours, with almost continuous rain of a milder type for ten days on end. Since then there had been a pleasant break.

The Standard correspondent telegraphs that rain began falling heavily on the evening of Friday last. It kept pouring steadily in an uninterrupted flow until Saturday afternoon, when the gauge showed a fall of twenty-five inches in forty hours. The effect of such an enormous mass of water pouring down the confined settlement, which is simply a basin formed by the circle of hills, can be imagined. All the roads were cut to pieces. In the forenoon of Saturday it was rumoured that the Victoria Hotel was in a dangerous state. The landslip occurred on the spur behind the hotel, and resulted in the collapse of the whole upper line, together with the outhouses and a portion of the back premises. The alarm was given to the visitors staying in the hotel, who took shelter elsewhere. The main building, however, remains standing unimpaired. Although the landslip had been slight, about thirty natives connected with the hotel, and one European child, were buried in the ruins. Commissioner Taylor, with the police and a band of labourers, were quickly on the spot, and were joined by a working party from the Military Depot, under the command of Capt. Balderston. About half-past one o'clock Naini Tal was startled—by a sudden and sullen roar, louder than a simultaneous crash of heavy guns. A rumbling followed, then an ominous silence. Vast clouds of dust rose, enveloping in a dense shroud large tracts of ground. From the hotel outwards to the assembly rooms and the lake the whole place shook as though an earthquake had occurred. The lake rose in a moment far above its usual height, and swept in a massive wave towards the weir. All was still for a moment; then came down in one fell swoop an enormous mass of land, burying the hotel and the gallant band behind it, covering the roads, gardens, and shops, together with the assembly rooms and all the other buildings in the place.

We add the following particulars respecting some of the civil and military officers who lost their lives in this sad disaster:—

MAJOR MARTIN MORPHY, of the 40th (2nd Somersetshire) Regiment, was born on Oct. 16, 1839, and entered the army as ensign in the 40th Foot on July 23, 1858, and served in the New Zealand war of 1860-61. He received his lieutenant's commission on Jan. 24, 1861, and while serving in New Zealand was engaged in that country in the campaign from 1863 till 1865, being present at the attack on the Gate Pah, and receiving the medal for his services. He was advanced to the rank of captain on June 8, 1867, and was gazetted as major on April 25, 1879.

CAPTAIN FREDERICK TALBOT GOODRIDGE, of the Bengal Staff Corps, wing officer of the 35th Bengal Native Infantry, entered the army as an ensign in the 94th Regiment of Foot on April 4, 1865, exchanging into the 5th (Northumberland Fusiliers) Regiment on Feb. 3, 1869, and being gazetted as lieutenant and transferred to the Bengal Staff Corps on August 16 of the same year. He was appointed wing officer of the 35th Bengal Native Infantry, of which regiment he was for some time officiating adjutant, on March 16, 1877, and promoted to a captaincy on the 4th of the following month.

CAPTAIN ARCHIBALD BALDERSTON, of the 34th (Cumberland) Regiment of Foot, station staff officer, was born on March 16, 1843, and entered the army as an ensign in the Bombay army on July 8, 1861, when he was appointed to the 109th Foot. He received his lieutenant's commission on Jan. 22, 1863, and that of captain on Feb. 12 following, being transferred to the 34th Foot on Oct. 31, 1877.

LIEUT. JOHN ERNEST HOLT SULLIVAN, of the 73rd (Perthshire) Regiment, was born on Sept. 11, 1857, and entered the army as second lieutenant in the 73rd, from the militia, on Feb. 16, 1878, being promoted to first lieutenant Dec. 11 following.

LIEUT. COLIN JAMES LOVE HALKETT, of the same regiment, was born on Sept. 20, 1858, and entered the army, from the militia, on Oct. 11, 1879, when he was gazetted to the 73rd.

LIEUT. JAMES BARRE HOOD CARMICHAEL, of the 33rd Regiment, had only just attained his 20th year, having been born on July 12, 1860, and entered the army, as second lieutenant, in the 33rd (Duke of Wellington's) Regiment, on August 13, 1879.

SURGEON MAJOR JOHN BARLOW HANNAH, M.D., was born on New Year's Day, 1838, and educated at the University of Glasgow, receiving his degree of M.D. from that university in 1861, and that of licentiate of the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh, the same year. He was appointed assistant surgeon in the army on March 31, 1862, and served with the 101st Fusiliers in the Indian North West Frontier War in 1863, being present at the attack and capture of the Crag Piquet, the Conical Hill, and Umbeyla, for which he received the medal with clasp. He was appointed a surgeon in March, 1873, and advanced to the rank of surgeon major on April 28, 1876, and had been for some time stationed in Bengal.

Of the officers of the Civil Service reported killed, Mr. LEONARD TAYLOR, assistant commissioner, entered the East Indian Civil Service in 1875, and for some time acted as assistant magistrate and collector of land revenue and general administration in the North Western Provinces and Oudh, being stationed in Kumaon. Mr. G. H. C. NOAD was the personal assistant to the Inspector General of Police in the North Western Provinces; and Mr. MORGAN, road overseer.

THE MAHARAJA OF TRAVANCORE AND THE MISSIONARIES.—

At Cottayam the Maharaja of Travancore received a deputation from representatives of the Anglican Church and made the following reply:—"Gentlemen of the Church of England Mission Society and native clergymen,—I gratefully appreciate the honour you have done me in waiting upon me with this address. It gives me great pleasure to meet you all again at Cottayam, one of the chief centres of civilisation in Travancore. I regard with sincere pleasure the testimony you have borne of the toleration and protection which this State has always accorded to you, and of the aid rendered in the spread of education. These, I can firmly assure you, will always be most cheerfully continued and extended, for the balance of benefit, I can safely say, has been on the side of the State, inasmuch as your labours have been increasing year after year the number of a loyal, law-abiding, and civilised population—the very foundation of good government. Accept my cordial thanks for all the good wishes you have expressed to me personally, and be assured, gentlemen, I prize them highly."—Times of India.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

INDIAN SURVEYS.*

THE general report of the operations of the department which Capt. Dundas Taylor administers with so much ability bears date January 1 of the current year. The period embraced in it covers eighteen months, from April 1, 1878, to September 30, 1879. The first object of the season's work during the practicable months of the period 1878-79 was to select ports suitable for the establishment of self-registering tide-gauges. In due succession visits were made to False Point, Vizagapatam, Paumben, Bepore, and Carwar. Capt. Taylor states that the Thakoor of Bhaunagar readily agreed to purchase and erect a self-registering gauge near Bhaunagar Lighthouse, and this gauge is now in working order. In an appendix Capt. Taylor gives the departmental order directing the tidal observations, followed by an important memorandum, drawn up by himself, on the peculiarities of the tides of the Indian Ocean. In the close he remarks "that we must have one definite datum value on all our Indian charts. The plane of reference must not be left to the choice of each individual surveyor, but there must be a fixed rule, so that the superintendent of tidal observations, in framing tide tables for ports where his registrations have preceded the hydrographic survey of the place, may know beforehand what datum level the Marine Survey Department intends to adopt; on the other hand, we must carry out the practice of having certain well-defined beach marks at all places where the Marine Survey operations precede the establishment of Capt. Baird's self-registering tide-gauges. Instructions for dealing with the registration of tidal observations and the reduction of soundings on Indian charts will soon be published." A visit was also paid by Capt. Taylor to the ports of Burma and the Andamans, with a view to selecting sites for tide-gauges, and an appendix contains records of valuable observations made in the navigation of the entrance of the Bassein River. The surveying work has been of necessity performed by boat parties, and the pressing duty of a thorough examination of the Gulf of Cambay, as well as that of surveying the port of Akyab, is postponed until the surveying steamer Investigator, now in course of construction in Bombay Dockyard, shall be completed and ready for sea. A programme of operations for the next five years includes the Orissa coast from Dhumra River to Chilka Lake, thence the Ganjam coast to Bimlipatam, which will occupy one or two years, according to the assistance given by the Great Trigonometrical Survey. Two years more will be required for the survey of Akyab, Bassein River, the mouths of the Irawadi, the Baragua Flat, the Krishna Shoal, and coast line into the Gulf of Martaban as far as Amherst. Twelve months would be occupied in the examination of the Gulf of Cambay, which has been urgently asked for by the native shipowners and shipmasters, who stated, in a petition signed by seventy of their number, that many vessels are either wrecked or damaged every year by the sand banks existing in the Gulf. The new steamer will not be ready before the rainy season of 1880-81, but there will be abundant employment for her and for the limited staff of surveyors. In the meantime, the results of the work accomplished, both on the coasts and at the headquarters, as contained in the report, reflect great credit on the administrative and executive staff, and show that, although it be now but the shadow of a name, the Indian Marine is no less proportionately fruitful in contributions to hydrographical science than the Indian Navy was in its palmyest times. The accounts of the work performed by the Bombay survey party, under Lieut. Jarrad, and the Madras survey party, under Mr. Morris Chapman, show the difficulties encountered from the want of efficient vessels, and the risks attendant on the survey of the southern coasts of the Peninsula received a melancholy illustration in the illness of Lieut. Coombs, and the death of Mr. Chapman, from disease caused by severe exposure during an exceptionally bad season.

LORD LAWRENCE.*

AT the Mansion House meeting held last February, on behalf of a national memorial to the late Lord Lawrence, a suggestion was made by Lord George Hamilton that an account of the public services rendered during his long career by the great Anglo Indian statesman and administrator should be published "in as cheap a form as possible, in order to stimulate the flow of subscriptions to the Lawrence Memorial Fund." The task so proposed was entrusted to the competent and experienced hands of Capt. Trotter, the biographer of Warren Hastings, and the author of those volumes on the history of India which our readers know well. That the summary of the public career of John Lawrence has been admirably executed, and the character of the hero of the Punjab has been graphically delineated, will, we trust, be not merely taken for granted, but demonstrated by the perusal of the pages of this memorial. Those who, regarding the object of its circulation, become the possessors of this unpretending work, will not easily relinquish it until perused, even though, like ourselves, they may differ from the outspoken opinions of its author on the vexata questio of our recent Afghan policy. Col. Malleon's admirable sketch of Sir John Lawrence's life, in his "Recreations of an Indian Officer," has supplied Capt. Trotter with ready material for the earlier portion of the biography, but he may claim well-deserved praise for the succinct, yet clear, account of the vicereignty of Sir John Lawrence, with its numerous measures of internal reform. "In the region of public works, of popular instruction, of sanitary reform, of municipal government, of progress in peaceful industry, and even of fiscal and financial progress, the Viceroy himself inspired or helped to mould many of the measures which signalised his rule." The blame of the Orissa famine and its fatal consequences is laid by Capt. Trotter altogether at the door of Sir Cecil Beadon, on whose assurance the Viceroy relied. He claims for him that, had the home authorities permitted him to carry into effect his plans, "a complete line of railway from Karachi to Lahore would have been laid down and opened before 1870." It may be instructive to many, who are as loud in their praise of Lord Lawrence as they are in denunciation of the license tax, to read the following passage :—"What new taxation might be needed should fall, he thought, on the wealthier middle classes, who paid nothing towards the maintenance of a rule under which they prospered] as they never had done before. For this reason he steadily supported Mr. Massey's efforts to reach those classes by means of a license tax on all trades yielding a profit above fifty pounds a year." The original limit of the present license tax met, indeed, with his strong opposition, as being fixed much too low, and this fault has been acknowledged, but to a certain degree remedied, by the change made by Sir John Strachey. Whether the due limit has now been reached remains to be seen, but the principle itself had the full approval of one who in all senses was the friend of the peoples of India, and lived and wrought for their benefit in all things. This was his greatest praise, and this, even in what may be termed his inveterate adherence to the Afghan policy of the past, was undoubtedly the predominant motive. We cannot but regret that in the brief sketch, as it of necessity is, the pages devoted to the controversy of the last few years should contain such phrases as "a Government headed by the author of 'Tancred,'" "the sophistries of Sir H. Rawlinson and Sir B. Frere." All might, irrespective of party feeling and difference of political views, unite in paying homage to the great merits of Lord Lawrence, and co-operate in setting up in our midst an enduring memorial of services done to India; and in a sketch of those services, designed, not as an historical record, but as a temporary means to arouse recognition of those past services, the acrimony of faction, and the nowadays favourite device of epithets, instead of arguments, jar upon the feelings as would an angry debate in a churchyard.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

AFTER waiting a weary while, we Indian taxpayers are at last informed as to the real state of matters with regard to the expenditure on the Afghan war. We may put aside the erroneous estimates and the still more erroneous statements made by the officials in this country, and accept Lord Hartington's statement as a true account of our present financial position. At the time he delivered his speech in the House of Commons, on Tuesday last, he must have had in his possession all the information that could be possibly supplied to him by the Government functionaries in this country. The egregious blunders of last April have been discovered and acknowledged, and we may be certain that extra pains have been taken that the figures now placed at Lord Hartington's disposal, and for his special manipulation, are as nearly accurate as it is possible for figures connected with Indian finance to be. The conclusion which the public will naturally draw from Lord Hartington's statement is that we at last know the real state of affairs up to date. There is now no disguise, no blundering, but a clear declaration of what we have actually spent and of what we are expected to spend, barring the cost of the new complications. With regard to the general expenditure of the country, the remarks of the Secretary of State are very significant. He is not sanguine that any changes in the civil branch of the Government would effect a saving of expenditure. In other words, it is evident that he is of opinion we cannot look to any curtailment of the high salaries of many officials to help us out of our difficulties. The declaration that Lord Ripon considered the time had not arrived to make a new departure in Indian finance was to have been expected. The license-tax, or disguised income-tax, has been imposed, and the home authorities have too much common sense to let go from their grasp this source of income. We are now clearly told that the total war expenses already amount to £18,000,000 sterling. Some months ago we said they would probably reach fifteen millions, but even that estimate, which we thought at the time was liberal, will, it appears, be exceeded, and eighteen millions is the amount of the bill we shall have to pay before the end of this official year. But it must be borne in mind that matters are even worse than this. The complication at Kandahar will upset these calculations, for the events which have happened and will yet happen there were not contemplated when Lord Hartington's figures were drawn up. As regards assistance to India from the imperial treasury, the telegraphic summary of Lord Hartington's speech states that no definite proposal on the subject will be made until it is accurately known what will be the absolute total of the war expenses. This is something for India to ponder over. It is publicly asserted that pecuniary aid will not be given by England to India as a matter of charity. We want no charity; India requires but justice, and if she obtains that she will gladly bear whatever may be her own proper share of the burdens the exigencies of her Government may cause to be placed upon her. It is somewhat cheering to know that our "financial independence," whatever that may mean, is not to be interfered with. We trust, however, that it does not imply that the Home Ministry is to regulate our policy, while we are to bear the entire cost of carrying it into effect.—Madras Times.

AFTER the announcement that the Home Government had determined to contribute a substantial proportion of the cost of the Afghan war, and, again, that it was not intended to increase the Indian debt if it could be avoided, the report of Lord Hartington's speech on the submission of the Indian budget will probably be received in this country with some disappointment. In the cloud of incoherent sentences in which Reuter veils the speaker's meaning it is not, indeed, easy to form any very definite or certain conclusion as to what is intended. It is not at all clear, for instance, whether it is proposed to saddle India ultimately with any portion of the ascertained deficit of seven millions, though we are not inclined to infer from the telegram that, for the present at all events, the Home Government proposes to advance such portion of the deficit as is not covered by increase of revenue and cannot be taken from the cash balances, leaving India to provide, as best she may, any further expenditure that may be necessitated by recent events in Kandahar. One thing, however, appears certain—viz., that the Home Government is not at present prepared to go beyond lending India money to meet the war expenditure, and, though a sort of hope is still held out that she may be definitely relieved of a portion of the burden at some future period, it would be rash to reckon upon such an act of generosity as certain. No definite proposal on the subject will be made till the total cost of the war is accurately known—from which we suppose it may be inferred that when that consummation is attained some definite proposal will be made. Judging, however, from past experience of Indian accounts, a very considerable period is likely to elapse before the cost of the war is accurately known, if it is ever accurately known, and, in the meantime, the present liberal sentiments of the Government may not improbably have very considerably cooled down. Strenuous efforts will probably be made in the interim, by stringent taxation on the one hand, and ruthless clipping and paring on the other, to make it appear that India is in a position to bear without difficulty the entire cost of the war; and that, in giving her temporary assistance to enable her to tide over her difficulties, England has really done all that was required. Of the cost of the operations in Kandahar the Home Government would appear to wash their hands altogether. If necessary, India may raise a loan to meet it, but she must not look to England for any further assistance to enable her to vindicate British military supremacy in those regions. Probably it is considered that this will be the most effectual way of checking any temptation the local authorities may feel to carry matters to extremities by pursuing Ayub too far, or to commit themselves to the permanent annexation of Kandahar. From the announcement that, loan or no loan, it is not intended to add permanently to the debt of India, we presume that, should the Government find itself compelled to borrow, it will do so for a short term of years only.—Englishman.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

A FEW weeks ago we drew the attention of the Government of India to the possibilities of a large increase of our opium revenues by the enhancement of the pass duty at Bombay. Since then circumstances have changed. News then to hand from China led us to believe that the views of those Chinese statesmen who looked to the immediate benefits derived from the duty on the import of foreign opium had triumphed over those of others who, looking to the larger and more solid, though remoter, benefits counselled the encouragement of the growth and manufacture of the indigenous article. But since then, from private sources and the reports of some of our consuls in the opium-producing districts, we have learnt that, with the exception of only a small area immediately in the vicinity of the central authorities, the opium crop has been successfully gathered in the two large provinces of Shensi and Hunan. But this was effected only after a very vigorous and well organised show of resistance on the part of the cultivators to the troops sent by the mandarins to destroy the growing crops. The district officials almost invariably recommend the central authorities to connive at the open or covert defiance of imperial decrees, on the ostensible ground of fear of exciting the rural population to revolt. But, in fact, they really manage by frightening the Government on the one hand and the cultivators on the other, to squeeze from the latter enormous gains which they regard to be the private emoluments of their office. They seem to have completely succeeded this year, too, in their usual game, against the declared wishes of Li-Hung-Chang, now the foremost statesman in China. In considering the advisability of raising the pass duty in Bombay, we must, it is clear, count no longer on the probability of the growth of indigenous opium in China being put an end to by the Government of that country.

With respect to the question of the relative amounts derived from the Bengal monopoly and the Bombay pass duty, we will, to make the matter clearer, give a few figures which leave no doubt that we have given a most profitable monopoly to the native States and populations of Central India. A chest of Malwa opium of the usual consistency, 95 per cent., is equal to about $1\frac{1}{4}$ chests of Behar, which is of 75 per cent. consistency only. Now, a chest of Behar at last auction realised Rs.1,406, the cost of which to Government, with interest on capital, is Rs.380, leaving a clear profit of Rs.1,026; but as one chest of Malwa is equal to $1\frac{1}{4}$ chests of Behar, if the profit on the latter be Rs.1,026, it ought to be Rs.1,282 on the former. But the pass duty being only Rs.700, Government clearly suffer a loss of nearly Rs.600 a chest on Malwa. We have seen that our N.W.P. ryot voluntarily cultivates the opium for Government at less than Rs.380 a chest; the equivalent for a chest of Malwa to the Central India cultivator is Rs.475, or very nearly the figure we put down in our last article, as his fair share in an ordinary or average year. That will still leave our Government out of pocket to the extent of Rs.500 a chest in the collection of revenue on Malwa opium. And taking the average export of that drug at say 40,000 chests a-year, the loss to our finances comes to two crores of rupees. This is not a sum to be lightly thrown away during these times of normal deficits, as we believe and we hope we have made it sufficiently clear that this loss is simply owing to the want of proper skill in arranging the incidence of the opium taxation. Can it be fair and just that, while we exact the uttermost pie from our own heavily-taxed ryot, we should be so lavishly generous to the untaxed foreign ryot and the protected native prince, for whom we have actually created a monopoly by prohibiting the poppy culture in our districts? It is to be trusted that our remarks may be able to rouse the attention of Government in the Financial Department, and some means may be devised to secure to our revenues an equitable share of the enormous amounts which our own policy with respect to China has provided for the Central India States and their population. It is a notorious fact that the cultivators and dealers have waxed so rich of late that the former are able in most instances to hold the valuable product of their fields for months and months without any assistance from the soukar, so necessary to ryots in our territories; and the dealers are now actually holding back a large proportion of last year's crop, and delaying the one for this year, in the vain hope of frightening our Government into lowering the pass duty, and that, too, with heavy stocks and the fact of a more than average crop for the year staring them in the face. We must confess, however, that of late the figures for Malwa opium revenue have been small, and may have raised anxieties as to the future; but the Central India Agency can easily ascertain the amount of stock held over from last year's crop and the quantity of new crop juice already warehoused at Oojein and Indore. We are confident that the figures will largely exceed those of last year. Only a few timely showers, or an intimation from Government that, far from contemplating a reduction, they were resolved to raise the pass duty, say from September, when the new crop is all manufactured, will set free the usual stream of shipments from Bombay.—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

CULTIVATION OF THE SUGARCANE.—We have before us the last general administration report of the Patna division, from which we learn some of the excellent results that have attended an increased cultivation of the sugarcane. Canal irrigation has done much, by reclaiming and fertilising waste and barren lands, to develop the area under sugarcane, especially in the Gya district and in the Jehanabad subdivision. In the latter district the canal water, by means of the great facilities it afforded to the cultivators, has given a great impetus to the sugarcane industry. The results of last year's operations, we are told, paid very well, and there is no reason to doubt that the cultivation of sugarcane will continue to extend in the immediate future. Some remarks of the subdivisional officer of Jehanabad are especially noteworthy, and we shall reproduce them here in the shape of a brief extract. He says:—"A ryot has made a clear profit of Rs.80 per beegah by sugarcane. Comparing this with the sum of Rs.8, which is considered to be a good profit in a beegah of rubbee or khureef, and that of Rs.20 which poppy yields, there can be no doubt that sugarcane is the most valuable crop, and that an extensive cultivation of it is more likely than anything else to raise the condition of the ryots. There are no doubt certain drawbacks, namely, that the crops remain longer on the ground than any other, and that the work of preparing the land and irrigating the crops is extremely arduous. Still, the cultivators say that it does not require the same unvarying and engrossing attention that poppy cultivation does. It has been found that the sugarcane has in some places superseded poppy cultivation." It will be seen that some most important statements are contained in the above paragraph, and we shall be glad to hear of further attention being paid to the subject. Many improvements have been made of late in connection with the sugarcane industry in Bengal. Experiments in agriculture have been carried out by European and native gentlemen of practical knowledge, and new machinery has been invented and introduced in some parts. Conspicuous among these have been the gentlemen in charge of the Beheea estate—Messrs. Burrows, Mylne, and Thompson—whose new sugar-crushing machine, by reason of the great saving it effects in the outturn, is destined apparently soon to be universally adopted. According to the Lieutenant Governor these gentlemen, by their experiments, are "rapidly revolutionising the whole (cane) sugar industry of Bengal."

SIKKIM CINCHONA PLANTATION.—The report of the Government cinchona plantation in British Sikkim for the year 1879-80 shows very satisfactory results. The entire produce of the plantations for the year was 361,590lb. of dry bark against 261,659lb. in 1878-79. The outturn of the febrifuge factory for the year was 9,434lb. 13oz. against 7,007lb. in the previous year, while the sales to the public of the febrifuge have exceeded those of 1878-79 by 358lb.—Bombay Gazette.

EXPERIMENTS WITH PLOUGHS.—In the proceedings of the Calcutta Agri-Horticultural Society an interesting account is given of some experiments, conducted by a sub-committee of the society, to determine the merits of three newly invented ploughs. One of the ploughs was made up at the Benares Gaol, and is distinguished by the absence of a beam; the other two (the inventions of Messrs. Crawley and Martin respectively) have a light plough body, after the American pattern, but attached to a fixed beam, and resembling in this respect the country plough. The results correspond very closely with the opinion expressed in these columns some months ago as to the comparative merits of the implements. The Benares plough, from there being no beam, proved unmanageable during heavy work, owing to the absence of leverage. Its draught was also found to be very heavy, though the work which it performed seems to have been considerably more than that performed by the other two ploughs. The "Crawley" plough was found to be heavy in draught, and "failed to invert the soil." Unless we are much mistaken, however, this plough was never meant to invert the soil, but only to pulverise it. The "Martin" plough was very light in draught, but seems to have done correspondingly little work, since it only ploughed to a depth of three inches. This is not so deep as many of the better class of country ploughs go, though the work is so far superior, in that the soil to that depth was "turned completely over." The committee, in conclusion, express their opinion that "there is in all ploughs with a fixed beam the radical fault that at the moment when the work is heaviest the heel of the plough will be drawn up and the point depressed to such an extent as to tax severely the strength of the ploughman."—Pioneer.

CRIME IN BASSEIN.—Some short time ago a whole police thannah in the Bassein district was cleared out of its arms by dacoits. I have not heard whether any of them were apprehended, but Major Plant, the commissioner, had eight dacoity or murder cases at his last Bassein sessions to try from this one district alone. Why we should have such an unprecedentedly high number of cases of violent crime from this one district is not easy to say, but I hear from good authority that gambling to an enormous extent goes on in Bassein, the profit of one Chinese gambling house alone being put down at Rs.3,000 per mensem. Illicit distillation is another favourite pastime within the Bassein district, and, with an underpaid and corrupt police, it of course pays those handsomely who engage in it.—Correspondent of Englishman.

EMPLOYMENT OF COOLIES.—At a meeting of tea planters of Silchar, held to consider the question of the amendment of Act VII. (B.C.) of 1873, numerous resolutions were passed, and in particular the meeting decided, by the casting vote of the chairman, against the extension of the term of agreement of labourers to five years. It was also recommended that employers convicted of harbouring absconded coolies should be fined Rs.100.—Ibid.

TOURS OF DISTRICT OFFICERS.—The district officers of Bengal have been "called over the coals" by the Lieutenant Governor for neglect of duty in failing to spend a proper proportion of their time on tour. In a recent official resolution his Honour says—"If district officers will only go out in the rains as well as in the cold weather they should find no difficulty in spending at least ninety days in the year in the interior of their jurisdictions." Several officials are specially warned that their shortcomings in this respect have attracted notice at headquarters.—Bombay Gazette.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOLARSHIPS.—The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has created two scholarships of £200 a year each, for graduates at the Calcutta University, at the Royal Agricultural College at Cirencester. A notification to this effect is published in the Calcutta Government Gazette, from which we learn that "the first two scholarships will be tenable for two-and-half years from the commencement of the January term in 1881. Only natives of Bengal, Behar, or Orissa, who have passed the B.A. examination on the physical side will be eligible. An allowance of Rs.1,000 will be made to defray the expenses of each scholarship-holder on proceeding to England, and a similar allowance will be made for the return journey on the completion of the course. Applications will be received by the Director of Public Instruction, and will be submitted to Government with a report from a committee consisting of the following gentlemen:—The Director of Public Instruction, Mr. C. H. Tawney, Babu Bhudev Mukerji, C.I.E., and Mr. A. W. Garrett."—Times of India.

THE GANGES CANAL.—By a recent mail the Government of India sent home an application to Lord Hartington to sanction the sum of Rs.3,41,47,177 being accepted as the limit of capital expenditure on the Ganges Canal, instead of Rs.3,18,33,905 previously approved by the Secretary of State. The additional outlay is principally upon the Dasna channel, which will connect the Ganges and Agra Canals. Col. Brownlow, in a report which he wrote a few months ago, says:—"I have long urged the great importance of the cross line of navigation from the Ganges to the Agra Canal, which would not cost more than six or seven lakhs of rupees, and I am strengthened in my original opinion by yearly recurring consignments of salt in large quantities, finding their way from the Ghaziabad Railway station by country carts to the Moradnagar wharf on the Ganges Canal, whence the salt is sent by canal boats to Cawnpore and other places." Were the cross channel made Col. Brownlow is sure that cotton, salt, and stone, from the Agra canal and the west country, will be sent in yearly increasing quantities by the canal route, in exchange for the sugar and wheat produced in the tracts irrigated by the Ganges Canal. The Government of India, in their letter to the Secretary of State, report that this great work is now nearly completed, and refer with pride to the fact that the anticipations of its success, expressed in a despatch so far back as 1873, have so far been realised. From the figures they quote it appears that the net direct revenue from the canal last year was upward of sixteen lakhs of rupees, or a return of 5.47 per cent. on the capital outlay. The net direct and indirect revenue combined was over twenty-three lakhs, being a return of 7.71 per cent. Upwards of a million acres are already irrigated by the canal, and it is estimated that 4,47,000 acres more will be commanded when the new channels are finished.—Ibid.

THE SHIPPING TRADE OF CALCUTTA.—The total number of vessels that entered the port during the year 1879-80 was 896, as against 967, and the tonnage 1,415,979 tons, as against 1,430,789 tons in 1878-79. Of these vessels 442 were steamers and 454 sailing ships. The number of steamers that came through the Suez Canal was 136, with an average tonnage of 2,688 tons.—Ibid.

THE WARORA IRON.—Mr. Walter Ness, the mining engineer employed by the Government of India in the Central Provinces, has gone to America in the hope of finding a suitable kind of reducing furnace for use at the Warora ironworks. The problem is to work a very rich ore, with a sulphurous coal, almost incapable of conversion into coke.—Ibid.

KASHMIR.—The prospects of the crops this year are most encouraging. Although they experienced stubborn opposition from the landholders, the Maharaja and his Prime Minister, Anant Ram, are carrying out important revenue assessment reforms. Over 3,000 people, rendered homeless by the late famine, are being provided with the means of livelihood for the approaching winter by the establishment of special relief works by the Maharaja. The newly-appointed European engineer carries out the immediate completion of the carriage traffic roads. The Maharaja is engaged in sending 1,200 troops to his Central Asian frontier, with the object of relieving those who have stayed there for the past two years. Reports from authentic sources confirm Gilgit news of the unqualified success of Major Biddulph's influence with the people of Kafiristan. The whole population of the province are said to have placed themselves at the disposal of the British Government if their services are required against Afghanistan. The Maharaja of Kashmir's aid to Major Biddulph has proved invaluable. The Prime Minister Anant Ram's action in pressing the carrying out of reforms and the adoption of the suggestions of the British Political has made him extremely unpopular among many of the Maharaja's advisers, although the Maharaja himself accords him his support.—Pioneer.

GOLD MINING.—The South East Wynaad correspondent of the Ooty paper writes:—"A meeting was held, a few days ago, by the shareholders of the Prince of Wales Company (a copy of proceedings of which has no doubt been sent to you) to discuss their position with respect to the Indian Gold Mining Company, who appear to have been trying 'to take a rise' out of the Prince of Wales gold pioneers, in offering to make some arrangement for the payment of 7½ per cent., and the absurdly small sum of £3,000 for possession of what is supposed to be about the richest reef in Wynaad. Ten times this amount would be cheap for a property which (I happen to know from the highest professional authority) is valued at £50,000. Whilst this is still in abeyance, we hear of the Hamslade, Hamsluck, and Adelphi Estates, belonging to Messrs. Parry and Co., having been sold for £40,000 to Capt. Archer, of Bombay, also the 'Perseverance' to Messrs. Stanes, of Coimbatore, for a lakh and Rs.40,000, with the view, no doubt, of forming yet another company. And that is all the news at present from the ABANDONMENT OF TRICHINOPOLY AS A MILITARY STATION.

—In the opinion of the Commander in Chief the ranges of temporary barracks for British infantry at Trichinopoly will not be again required. There are two lines of railway to Trichinopoly from Madras, and it does not seem, his Excellency thinks, likely that Trichinopoly will ever again be a permanent station for British troops. The Government have withdrawn British troops from it, and the Army Commission has also recommended that no British troops be stationed there. Under these circumstances, his Excellency has recommended that the question of whether it is necessary to expend money on the repair of these buildings, pending final orders as to their disposal, be considered in the Public Works Department. Sir Neville Chamberlain recommended that the block of buildings formerly occupied by a battery of Field Artillery at Trichinopoly be retained as military buildings in case at any time it may be necessary to send British troops temporarily to Trichinopoly. The acting superintendent engineer also states that he does not consider it probable that any of the five blocks of temporary barracks will ever be utilised by any other department. As the buildings are not likely to be required, there can be no object in keeping them, and he recommends their early sale and complete dismantlement. The Government have accordingly directed that the thatched barracks with kutcha walls be in the first instance demolished. It will be considered hereafter what will be done with the others.—Madras Mail.

THE COMMISSIONER OF POLICE.—During the thirteen years he has held the appointment of commissioner Colonel Drever has always been known to evince a high sense of his duty to the public and a praiseworthy solicitude to discharge the onerous functions of his office with as much satisfaction as possible to all parties concerned. He has also used his best endeavours to improve both the morale and physique of the town police. During the recent famine, Colonel Drever, in addition to his already multifarious duties, undertook to act as general superintendent of all the local depots as well as the Red Hills camp, and the attention he paid, in that capacity, to the wants of thousands of famishing paupers, straining as he did every nerve to reduce their distress to a minimum, is a matter of history. The preponderance of work performed by him during the calamitous period we allude to has severely told on his health, and though his services have been recognised his constitution has failed. In wishing him Godspeed we sincerely hope that by the bracing and congenial climate of his native land he will regain fresh strength and return to the scene of his labours with renewed health and vigour. In Mrs. Drever the Philharmonic and Dramatic Societies will temporarily lose an energetic member and an accomplished artist.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY ON PUBLIC CRITICISM.—At the meeting held at Bombay in connection with the Patriotic Fund, Sir James Fergusson, who presided, did not wholly confine his remarks to the subject of the meeting. He regretted that owing to the season of the year in which he commenced his administration he had few opportunities of meeting the inhabitants of the city, and he proceeded to point out that a Government like that of Bombay did not often appear on the platform, or in the forum, but conducted its work for the most part in secret, and had in consequence to depend mainly on the results of its labours, and upon the generous approval and consideration of the governed, rather than upon any momentary expressions of approval. For this reason he hoped that the efforts and actions of Government might always be construed in a fair and generous spirit. It must often be uncertain to people outside the Government for what purpose a particular act had been undertaken, and many critics were apt to assume sometimes that proceedings had been taken without just grounds, and upon principles which the public might not approve. He did not undervalue criticism; he thought it was the soul of good government; but at the same time he thought they might deprecate that criticism which did not wait for facts, and which chose to assume that there was cause for censure. He hoped that in the time when he would be privileged to take a prominent part in the administration he might be so fortunate as to have some credit and allowance given him, and all those with whom he had the honour to act, for those motives which were of the highest, those intentions which were of the best, for the welfare of those whose interests were committed to them.—Madras Times.

MEMORIAL OF THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATION TO THE VICEROY.—The memorial presented by the municipal corporation of Bombay to the Marquis of Ripon at Government House, Malabar Point, on the day after his arrival in India, has now been elaborately illuminated on parchment, and has been transmitted to his Excellency to Calcutta, in a case of green morocco; the latter having the inscription printed on it in gold letters. This was again enclosed in a tin case. The parchment is about $3\frac{1}{2}$ ft. by 2 ft. in dimensions, and contains an illuminated border in silver and burnt sienna. The work has been executed in the Bombay Education Society's Press at Byculla and reflects credit on the artist. On the right side of the memorial are the heraldic arms of the municipal corporation, and on the left those of his lordship. Then follows the inscription on an embellished scroll, which rests against a luxuriant mass of foliage. The memorial is signed by the Rao Sahib Vishvanath Nasayen Mundlik, as chairman of the corporation; by Dr. Thomas Blaney as chairman, and Messrs. THE TRUTH ABOUT BEHAR.

SOME weeks ago the telegrams from Calcutta informed us of the protests made by the indigo planters of the great Province of Behar against the sweeping charges brought against them by Mr. O'Donnell, and the reply of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, which characterised the letter to Lord Hartington as containing inaccurate, hasty, and crude views, put forth by a very junior and very inexperienced subordinate officer. Seeing that the experience of Mr. O'Donnell extends over nearly ten years, it might be thought that zeal, if tempered with discretion, might have enabled him to form a just estimate of the facts of the case. The severely sarcastic condemnation expressed by Sir Ashley Eden had, doubtless, an end and object beyond the mere rebuke of the junior officer himself. For him the statements quoted from the administration reports of the last two or three years contained a sufficiently crushing rejoinder. The planters, on their side, met the allegations of lawlessness and high-handed defiance of authority, or habitually rackrenting their tenantry and appropriating the ryots' land to their own use, with an appeal to the personal knowledge of Sir Ashley Eden as to the reforms he himself had recommended in 1877, and the way in which they had been at all events attempted to be carried out. Sir Ashley Eden, in his reply, referred to his own outspoken condemnation of the existing abuses of the system as he found it in 1877. But he was able to state also that the Association of Indigo Planters had cordially and loyally co-operated in correcting those abuses. For the grounds of this good opinion he was able, though at brief notice, to obtain the opinions of the best authorities, including the magistrates of the three great indigo districts of Darbhanga, Tirhoot, and Sarun, men who, three years ago, were foremost in bringing to his notice the existing evils, who concur in describing the beneficial effects on the feelings of the people towards the planters produced by the change of system.

The extracts from the reports quoted by the Lieutenant Governor are in themselves sufficient to convict the special allegations of the author of the "Ruin of an Indian Province" of having, either through ignorance or malice aforethought, attempted to make the public believe that nothing whatever had been done since 1877 to reform the abuses which were then found to exist. It is not by exaggerating the evils which are in process of amelioration, or by dragging from the records of the past, memories of extinct wrongs, that those who are concerned to ameliorate the condition of the people, wherever they may stand in need of judicious protection and reform, will be stimulated or enabled to proceed in their task. The assailants of British rule in India sometimes discover that too much interference with native habits and customs, too stringent application of Western notions, has produced poverty and misery among the over-governed population. Then again, as in Behar, the Government is charged with the effects of undisturbed relations between native landowners and their cultivators, or between planters and manufacturers, and the natives of the soil. The most injurious form of the fault-finding, which is mistaken for a genuine desire to benefit the objects of the pseudo-interest displayed, is to ignore the perception of, and gradual working of endeavours to remedy, the faults and abuses which have prevailed, and still must prevail, as much in India as in Ireland or Dorsetshire. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, the planters themselves, the officials who administer the government are the first to admit that, notwithstanding improvements already effected, there is no place for resting and being thankful, there is still need for amendment, which, however, must be gradual. The condition, for instance, of the estate of the Maharaja of Hutwa, which has called forth a considerable display of invective, has demanded the close attention of the collector of Sarun. Illegal exactions of ticcadars, enhancement of rent by the Maharaja, collection of road and public work cess, and non-remission of Chowkidari cess, levied despite the enactment of 1870, have all combined to engender a widespread feeling of discontent. Mr. Macdonnell has made a most careful inquiry into the existing state of things, and the Maharaja has been urged to exercise his rights in a moderate and conciliatory spirit. Sir Ashley Eden adds his opinion, "that the propriety of doing away with the system of ticcadars cannot be too strongly impressed upon the Maharaja, as the Lieutenant Governor believes that this system is at the bottom of all the misery and poverty of the riots of Behar. His Honour hopes, therefore, that the Maharaja will not renew any short term ticcadary leases which may fall in, but either will grant the farms for long terms to substantial farmers, or keep them in his own hands and endeavour to improve the condition of his ryots and give them the greatest possible security of tenure." In the words of a Behar journal, it is absurd to attribute the ills of Behar to rackrenting and to Indigo planters' oppression, alone or collectively, as effect to its cause; but, in the words of the same organ, old standing abuses cannot be done away in a day. In the Government resolution on the Commissioner of Behar's report for 1879-80, "the material condition of the people of Behar has attracted much attention of late years. In the resolution on last year's report the Lieutenant Governor observed that any rapid change in their circumstances was not to be expected, and that, as regards the cultivating classes, some change in the law of rent would probably have to be undertaken to give them what they most need, security of tenure, and protection against undue enhancement.

The Rent Commission have now submitted their report, and make various special recommendations with reference to Behar." The reports from the various districts concur very generally in stating that the better class of agriculturists is learning to have more confidence in its strength, and to resist undue or illegal demands on the part of its zemindars. As a general result of the reports, in spite of considerable variations of opinion, Mr. Edgar holds that there is a decided improvement in the condition of the people throughout the division. This, of course, varies; in some places there is noted the marked coexistence of so many wealthy men with the "meanest and poorest" lower classes. In Tirhoot, though a temporary improvement is admitted, yet, "under the existing conditions of agriculture, rent, and population, no permanent improvement of the agricultural classes can be looked for." This is quoted as the most despairing utterance, and with it may be coupled the statements of the sub divisional officer of Sewan, that one-third of the population are very poor, nay, have not sufficient food. Of the landlord class in another district we are told that, excepting the Darbhanga raj, there is not much to be said in their favour; the smaller zemindars are nearly all Brahmins, and imbued with the worst tradition of their caste. Too indolent to take any active interest in their own affairs, and too unscrupulous to heed the means taken by their subordinates for collecting their rents, they can only be kept in order by fear of the law. Notwithstanding, in the words of the resolution, "the loyal conduct of the leading zemindars in contributing towards the relief of the sick and wounded has been already noticed. The province is fortunate now in having so many large landholders who are actuated, it may be hoped, by an enlightened and liberal spirit. If these gentlemen will only set themselves to study the condition of their ryots, contenting themselves with reasonable and punctually paid rents—if they get rid absolutely of the ruinous system of thika leases, and manage their estates directly under a sense of the responsibilities which property entails—they will greatly improve their own condition, they will never fail to secure the approval of Government, and a reward in a prosperous and devoted tenantry." The need for reforms is not denied, the strenuous exertions to secure it which have characterised the administration of Sir Ashley Eden have not been relaxed, and needed no stimulus from junior officials, and, despite the alleged or the admitted defects, reviewing the past year, "the Lieutenant Governor trusts that there are really symptoms of some amelioration in the state of things in Behar, though it may be long ere the condition of the province becomes thoroughly satisfactory. Forces are, however, undoubtedly at work that must in time bring about a decided change. Education, trade, railways, and canals are all producing their natural effect; and they will do this the more readily if the Government finds itself able to remove in some degree the obstacles which now lie in the way of the progress, enlightenment, and material comfort of the peasantry."

DEATH OF A NATIVE OFFICIAL AT JAMKHANDI.—Rao Bahadur Dhondo Krishna Kanetkar, State karbhari of Jamkhandi, in the Southern Maratha country, died at Jamkhandi on August 16. The deceased was a pensioned officer of the British Government, in whose service he had risen to the deputy collectorship. His administration of the Jamkhandi State, extending in all over nearly four years, was marked by justice and moderation, as well as by many reforms. His corpse was carried to the River Krishna (six miles from Jamkhandi) and was accompanied there by many people. —Bombay Gazette.

THE LATE CAPT. CRUICKSHANK, R.E.

As he was a member of the Guild of the Holy Standard we cannot refrain from inserting the accompanying notes in reference to the late Capt. Cruickshank, R.E., who fell in the sortie from Kandahar on Monday, August 16. The above-mentioned officer was a personal and special friend of Major General Wilkins, R.E., lately retired. Of the many public buildings erected by him, the most important were the artillery barracks at Ahmednagar and the barracks at Ahmedabad, which are considered the best and most suitable for European troops in the Bombay Presidency, and for which he received the special thanks of Government on their completion, while he assisted in the building of the Napier Hospital and Deccan College at Puna. But it was as a consistent and unostentatious Churchman that he shone most conspicuously, ever ready to do all that the chaplains wished (and in the best of taste) in the way of church improvements, as shown in late accounts from Kandahar in his persistent but fruitless endeavour to make a reredos for the church there. Among his church improvements may be mentioned the erection of the tasteful arch and ecclesiastical robing-room at the Ahmedabad Cantonment Cemetery, the many improvements in the City Church there, such as the new choir seats and desks, the designing the beautiful new font, and the altar crosses and vases which the first had made in wood to enable the native workmen to mould them in brass; and last, but not least, the plan for the Ahmedabad Cantonment Church, which, when completed, will be one of the prettiest up-country churches, and in some points, with its altar raised six steps above the nave, the grandest in the Presidency; and we hope to hear that it will be further beautified by a painted east window to his memory and that of his wife, who died there of cholera in a few hours.—Bombay Church Chronicle.

THE LATE REV. MR. G. GORDON.

THE Rev. A. H. Arden, secretary, Church Missionary Society, Madras, writes to the Madras Mail respecting Mr. Gordon, the clergyman killed in the sortie of the 16th:—"He was a missionary of the Church Missionary Society, and no doubt was well known to some of your readers, as he resided in Madras for a short time, and was associated with the late Rev. D. Fenn in working the Palaveram Mission. A few particulars regarding him may therefore be of interest. He was well connected, and had considerable private means. After being for some time a curate with Dr. Marsh, of Beckenham, he came out as a missionary to India under the C.M.S., and was located in Madras. Ill health compelled him to return home; but as soon as his health was restored he proceeded to Lahore to assist the Rev. T. French (now Bishop of Lahore) in his divinity school. When our army was ordered to Afghanistan he took the opportunity of visiting that country, and proceeded to Kandahar. This year he paid it a second visit in company with Bishop French. The latter after a time left again for Lahore; but Mr. Gordon remained behind, and appears to have met with his death whilst attending to our sick and wounded soldiers, in whom he always took a deep interest. During all the years that he laboured under the C.M.S. he never accepted any salary. He not only gave all his services gratuitously, but frequently made large donations to the society's General Fund."

PANIC AT KARACHI.

INFORMATION was received on August 26 that about 1,500 Pathans had assembled on the other side of the Lyari, about three miles from the cantonments, and intended attacking us, and that a communication had been received here from Lus Beyla intimating that something serious was to happen at Karachi. There was, therefore, considerable excitement throughout the town and the military authorities were on the alert. The whole of the sick in the Base Hospital were served with arms and ammunition, and about 10,000 rounds of ammunition and 180 rifles were quietly issued to the artillery at about 8 p.m., and mounted patrols were ordered to be out throughout the night. The Sonmeani road as well as the Muger Peer road were guarded, as the report was that a large number of Murrees were likely to make an inroad; and the police, under the direction of their superintendent, Mr. Giertzen, were posted in large numbers throughout the camp and the city. The guards at the Government Treasury and the Bank of Bombay were strengthened, and two guns were put in position at the Arsenal, guarded by forty of the 78th Highlanders. All officers were warned to be ready at a moment's notice. The excitement among the European residents was most intense. The majority were armed to the teeth, and some sent their families on board the vessels in the harbour. The collector, Col. Wallace, and Mr. Giertzen visited the town at midnight, and every precaution was taken to quell any disturbance. Fortunately nothing occurred. On 29th the principal roads appeared deserted; hardly a native was seen out, but similar precautions were adopted at night. The marshal of the Karachi Gaol was ordered to keep an eye on the prisoners, and ammunition was issued for the Karachi Volunteers, who are ready for action in case of emergency. Major M'Hinch met the whole corps on the parade ground and addressed a few encouraging words to the men. A number of Pathans were quietly deprived of such arms as they possessed. Later advices from Khelat state that all is perfectly quiet there. The reports afloat were considerably exaggerated by the Beacon newspaper, and the Karachi Civil and Military Gazette contradicted emphatically, on the best authority, all the rumours current. The statement that the Commissioner of Sind had telegraphed for two boats was wholly untrue. The baseless rumours current seemed to derive their origin from Hyderabad, which the Bombay Government had foolishly deprived temporarily of its usual quota of European troops, and also from the fact that some Pathans were buying camels in the districts. These Pathans had been sent down specially for the purpose by the agents of the transport office at Sibi. It was simply on account of these rumours that the magistracy and police adopted such precautions as seemed best to prevent unnecessary alarm among the population.—Correspondent Times of India.

THE METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT IN WESTERN INDIA.

IN the report on the administration of the Meteorological Department in Western India for the year 1879-80, Mr. F. Chambers, meteorological reporter for Western India, states that numerous small meteorological observatories have been established; all have been provided with good verified instruments; observers have been trained, and a system of periodical inspection has been instituted. The registers are collected in the central office in Bombay, where they are carefully examined, corrected, and reduced, and so prepared for incorporation in the general annual reports of the Indian Meteorological Department. The work has been undertaken under the conviction that much light would thus be thrown upon the causes of the droughts and famines to which India is unfortunately subject, and in the hope that a knowledge of their causes would afford the means of forecasting them; so that preparations might be made to meet them. Unfortunately, at this stage of inquiry—viz., that at which the raw material may be said to have been collected and at which discussion and original investigation should begin, the work of the Bombay office is abruptly brought almost to a close, for financial pressure has hitherto been so great that Government have been unable to provide the necessary assistance for its further effectual prosecution. Nevertheless, working without this assistance, Mr. Chambers has deduced a very important relation between the amount of the rainfall of the whole Presidency and the abnormal variations of the barometric pressure, and has also traced out an intimate connection between the general state of atmospheric pressure in India and the Indian Ocean and the average area of the spots on the sun's surface. These relations afford every valuable suggestion for the direction of further inquiry, and hold out some definite prospect of our being able eventually to predict the variations of the rainfall. Mr. Chambers says:—"It has been found that when the barometer stands at a lower elevation than is usual for the season of the year the rainfall is generally greater than the average; for instance, when at Bombay during the rainy season the barometer falls only as much as a tenth of an inch below the average height for the season, the rainfall becomes more than half an inch per day heavier than usual; and throughout the Presidency generally the experience of the past few years has shown that when the atmospheric pressure is lower than usual the rainfall is greater than the average, an abnormal fall of pressure of but a tenth of an inch being accompanied by a general increase of rainfall amounting to over one hundred per cent. of the average fall. Similarly, when the barometer stands above the average height for the season, the rainfall is proportionately less than usual." The observations recorded at the observatories in Western and Southern India are now only available for the development of the climatology of the country, and Mr. Chambers says that if they were telegraphed daily to Bombay they would also become available for the prognostication of storms. A storm warning system on a small scale has, however, received the sanction of Government.—Bombay Gazette.

HOME NEWS.

MAURITIUS LAND CREDIT AND AGENCY COMPANY.—The directors have decided upon the payment, on and after Sept. 30, of an interim dividend for the half-year ended June 30 last of 3s. per share, being at the usual rate of 15 per cent. per annum.

DEVALA-MOYAR GOLD MINING COMPANY.—We are informed that the first meeting will be held at the Exchange-buildings, George-yard, Lombard-street, on Tuesday next, at two o'clock, and that Mr. Brough Smyth will address the meeting.

CIVIL LIST PENSIONS.—The Pall Mall Gazette understands that her Majesty has been pleased, on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, to approve of the following pensions being charged on the Civil List:—1. To Mrs. Clifford, widow of Professor Clifford, £80 a year; 2. To Mrs. Hawker, widow of the Rev. Mr. Hawker, £80 a year; 3. To Madame Llanos, sister of John Keats, the poet, £80 a year; 4. To Mrs. Armstrong, widow of Lieut. General J. W. Armstrong, C.B., £80 a year.

THE CUSTOM HOUSE AT BRINDISI.—A word of warning to passengers landing at Brindisi is given in the following letter to a contemporary:—"On the afternoon of the 13th inst. I was going on shore at Brindisi for the second time from the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Surat. On the gangway I was accosted by a customs guard, who wished me to show him what cigars I had. I produced ten cigarettes and two cigars, all I possessed. He took these from me and told me to follow him to the Custom-house. There I told them that I was bound for Venice, and that these cigarettes were for the use of myself and friend for the afternoon. I was then informed that the cigarettes were confiscated, and that I was fined 71fr. I eventually went to her Britannic Majesty's acting consul, and paid no fine. The inspector, however, said that the guard had done quite right, and that I was liable to the fine."

SANITARY PRIZE ESSAY.—The Government of India has offered the prize of £100 for the best "Manual of Hygiene," to serve as a text-book for the use of the British soldiers in that country. Works submitted in competition for this prize must be sent in by their authors to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department at Calcutta, so as to reach his hands not later than the last day of next March. Each is to bear a motto, and to have a sealed envelope attached, bearing the same motto on the outside cover and the name of the author within, after the fashion which prevails in our universities at home; and the prize will be adjudicated by a committee of officers, consisting of the surgeon general and the principal medical officer of the forces in India, the sanitary commissioner with the Government of India, and an officer of the Quartermaster General's Department. The work is "to be written in clear and simple English, and thoroughly practical, showing the ordinary causes affecting health and the special dangers to which British soldiers are exposed in India, more particularly during their first year in the country, and the best means by which those dangers may be averted." The work, if accepted, will be printed at the public expense, and become the property of the State; and it is not to exceed in bulk "more than fifty or sixty pages of print, of small pica, octavo-size." It is added that the Government of India will not feel bound to award the prize at all unless one at least of the manuals produced in competition shall be judged "in all respects suitable to the purposes for which it is required."

HONG KONG AND SHANGHAI BANK.—The report states that the net profits for the half-year ending June 30 last, including £25,451 brought forward from last account, after paying all charges, deducting interest paid and due, making provision for bad and doubtful accounts, and for difference in exchange between the rate at which the dividend is declared and the current rate of the day, amount to $361,178, of which, after taking out rebate on bills not yet due and remuneration to directors, there remain for appropriation $345,547. From this sum the directors recommend the payment of a dividend of £1 5s. per share, which will absorb $222,222. They also recommend placing $100,000 to the reserve fund, which will then stand at $1,600,000, and carrying forward the balance, $23,325, to the credit of the new profit and loss account.

COUNCIL DRAFTS.—Tenders were received yesterday at the Bank of England for Rs. 30,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs. 26,85,000; to Bombay, Rs. 3,15,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8d. will receive about 7 per cent. Compared with last week this price shows a decline of 1-16d.

THE WYNAAD PERSEVERANCE ESTATE AND GOLD MINING COMPANY (LIMITED).

THIS company has been formed, with a capital of £80,000 in shares of £1 each, of which 53,334 are now offered for subscription, to acquire, cultivate, and develop the Perseverance Estate, situated in the South East Wynaad district of the Madras Presidency. This property comprises about 600 acres held on long leases from the Rajah of Nellumbore, who further binds himself to renew the term of such leases if required to do so. About 150 acres of the estate are planted with coffee, and a portion with cinchona trees, but it is from the gold deposits that the chief profits of the undertaking are expected. Of the nature of the mineral and other resources of the estate the following telegraphic summary of the preliminary report of Mr. Oliver Pegler, the consulting engineer of the South East Wynaad Estates and Gold Mining Company, has been received:—"This estate indicates great mineral resources. Gold found several points. Three rich reefs. One splendid; perhaps finest in Wynaad. Extensive native workings. Great natural facilities. Water, timber, abundant." The prospectus contains further extracts from the full report of Mr. Pegler, dated June 17 last. The amount paid to the vendor is £30,000, which includes the crops, buildings, cattle, and plant on the properties. Of this sum, however, £26,666—which is all that can be held by the vendor according to the rules of the Stock Exchange—will be taken in fully paid-up shares of the company.

PUNA REGATTA.—The regatta was a very tame affair. The Governor attended, and his party went afloat and rowed round the course in a barge, his Excellency pulling stroke oar. Junior Sculls, Prior; Senior Sculls, Le Mesurier, rowed over. For Ladies' Fours, three boats started, Miss Maude winning by three lengths. Junior Pairs, Pickwood and Mackey. Scratch Fours, E. Gray, stroke: Ridley, Spencer and Peacock. Senior Pairs, Le Mesurier and Giles, rowed over. Rain fell lightly during the latter part of the regatta.—Bombay Gazette.

THE UNIVERSITY CLOCK TOWER.—Chief among the mysteries which trouble Bombayites is, why the university clock tower is allowed to remain in its present unsightly condition, exhibiting a great round gap on either face in the place where a handsome clock ought to be. To all inquiries the same answer is returned, and we see the statement reiterated in the latest official report on the subject—"the clock and joybells have not yet arrived from England." But why they have not arrived is quite beyond comprehension. They have been "expected" any time the last two years.—Ibid.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—We are glad to see that greater energy is being displayed by the Public Works Department in the construction of other buildings that are in progress than has marked the completion of the Rajabi Tower. The structures in Bombay in the hands of the department are chiefly of an educational character. There are—the Elphinstone High School, the Fort Christian School, the John Connon High School, the Cathedral High School, St. Peter's School, and the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution. The two first and the St. Peter's School at Mazagon have been completed; of the Cathedral High School, the ground and first floors have been put up, and the Alexandra Institution is also progressing at a favourable rate. In the case of the John Connon School, we are sorry to see, work has had to be suspended for want of funds. In addition to the local schools, a medical school is being built at Ahmedabad (for which an endowment of Rs.20,000 was made by Mr. Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, C.S.I.), and schoolhouses have been or are being constructed in some twenty villages in the collectorates of Tanna, Colaba, Khaira, Dharwar, Belgaum, Kaladgi, Satara, Khandesh, and in Sind.—Ibid.

A PLANTER MISSING.—Our correspondent, writing from Mercara under date the 23rd August, says:—"Three weeks ago Mr. Garland, a coffee-planter, who lived out upon a lonely estate (partly owned by Capt. Hodges) nearly ten miles from Veerjendapett, and over thirty miles from Mercara, was said by his butler to have left his bungalow towards dusk, and with his breechloader had gone into a dense jungle in the neighbourhood. The man only brought in the news three days after his master had left the house and could give no further tidings. All the neighbouring planters, with as many woodmen as could be mustered, set off to make a diligent search for the missing planter. Nothing has as yet been discovered, and there are no traces of Garland. The weather at the time was most wretched; incessant rain, day and night, over-flooded ravines and watercourses, and countless leeches of a poisonous kind invest the ground."—Madras Standard.

THE SURGEON GENERAL SMITH MEMORIAL FUND.—At a meeting of the Medical College Council, held on June 26, it was resolved "That it is the unanimous opinion of the council of the Madras Medical College that the services rendered to medical education during twenty-four years by Surgeon General G. Smith, M.D., are deserving of recognition and commemoration in connection with the college, over which he presided with such success; and that the assistance of all branches of the Indian Medical Department be sought for the purpose. That Professors Sibthorpe and Harvey be requested to undertake the preparation and circulation of an appeal to the officers and warrant officers of the I.M.D., and to all alumni of the college to contribute to the object in question. That the memorial in the first instance should take the form of a portrait to be hung in the College Hall; and that if the subscriptions reach a sufficient amount, in addition to the portrait, a prize in connection with the college be established."—Times of India.

OOTACAMUND HUNT DINNER.—On August 27 the members of the club had the honour of entertaining, at the club house, his Grace the Duke of Buckingham at dinner. Above forty assembled; the Hon. D. F. Carmichael in the chair. There were also present the Hon. R. Davidson, Cols. Michael and Shaw Stewart, Major Jago, Captains J. G. Gordon, Onslow, Hammick, English, and Bagot, Mr. Schmidt (hon. secretary to the hunt committee), Mr. Hamlin, &c. After the usual loyal toasts the chairman proposed "The health of the Master." Mr. Jago returned thanks in his usual happy style and proposed a "bumper" to the health of his Grace the Duke. Major Jago remarked that previous Governors had always subscribed towards the upkeep of a pack of hounds in Ooty, but never before had a Governor taken so much interest as has been evinced by his Grace, who had frequently inquired of him as to the condition of the hounds and the nature of the sport they afforded. His Grace, in reply, said although he had not followed the hounds he was much interested in them. He came from a good hunting country and had always taken great interest in this good old English sport, and he considered that everyone who could afford it ought to subscribe liberally to support a pack of hounds. Other toasts were given. Subscriptions to the amount of some Rs.1,500 were promised. His Grace heads the list with a subscription of Rs.200.—Ibid.

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

ASH'S "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines, from 50s. each.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

Ash's Freezing Powders, 34s. per cwt., or in Boxes at 11s., 22s., and 40s. each.

THE SELF-FEEDING REFRIGERATOR,

PATENTED BY MR. CLARKE

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, and uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed to acquire, cultivate, and develop the Perseverance Estate, in the South East Wynaad, in the Madras Presidency, India, which closely adjoins the properties belonging to the South East Wynaad Estates and Gold Mining Company (Limited), and is surrounded by well-known estates, such as the Alpha, Hamsluck, Adelphi, Hamslade, &c., which in Mr. Brough Smyth's report are most favourably spoken of as containing gold quartz.

The estate is estimated to contain about 600 acres, 466 of which are held on lease from the Raja of Nellumbore for 96 years from 1858, at an annual rental of Rs.450, with a renewal fee equal to one year's rent in every twenty-fourth year, and with a reservation of the teak and blackwood to the Raja, and the remainder for 48 years from 1875, at an annual rental of Rs.125, with a renewal fee equal to one year's rent in every twelfth year, with power to renew at the expiration. A lease is held for 36 years from August 15, 1879, giving mining rights over 15 acres at an annual rental of Rs.25 per acre; and the Raja binds himself to grant such further rights as may be required, if applied to within five years from the above date. About 150 acres are planted with coffee, and a portion with cinchona trees.

The following is the telegraphic summary of the preliminary report of Mr. Oliver Pegler, the Consulting Engineer to the South-East Wynaad Estates and Gold Mining Company (Limited), under date June 14, 1880:—

"This Estate indicates great mineral resources. Gold found several points. Three rich reefs. One splendid; perhaps finest in Wynaad. Extensive native workings. Great natural facilities Water, timber, abundant."

The following are extracts from his full report, dated June 17, 1880:—

"The mineral indications of the property are of the most promising character. Numerous outcrops of auriferous quartz exist, and native workings (a rare indication of mineral wealth). . . . Both underground mining and alluvial washings are extensively met with throughout the Estates. . . . This portion of the Estate is covered with fine forest, and will yield an inexhaustible supply of timber. . . . Is also traversed by several good streams, with extraordinary facility for the formation of reservoirs, whereby a very large supply of water could be commanded. . . . Much of this old mining works is still intact. . . . The soil through the whole extent of the property contains gold. . . . Portions of this quartz broken off by me at a foot's depth, when crushed and panned, gave very fine results, though much pyrites was present and the stone uncalcined. One assay gave, by eye estimation, up to nearly an ounce per ton, and a second quite seven dwts."

The sample of a pillar of quartz left to support the roof of an old working, referred to by Mr. Pegler in the accompanying report, has been assayed by Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, and Co., with the following very satisfactory results:—

Pyrites—Produce of Gold, 7.750oz. per ton of pyrites	=	155 dwts.
"Silver, 2.600 "	=	52 "
Quartz—Produce of Gold, 0.800oz. per ton of quartz	=	16 "
"Silver, 0.300 "	=	6 "

Mr. Brough Smyth, in his official report to the Madras Government, says:—

"Thirteen chains eastward from the Perseverance Bungalow there is an outcrop of quartz, and within five chains of it some shallow alluvial workings.

"Near the western boundary of the Estate there are two outcrops of quartz close together, the one a thick reef and the other a 'leader.' Near them is an adit, now fallen in, which was probably driven for purpose of working the thin vein.

"On the northern boundary of the Estate there is another adit surrounded by native workings.

"A reef once worked by the natives is intersected by the eastern boundary.

"The quartz reefs in this area have a promising appearance, and it is probable that the native workings are more extensive than is shown by the map."

The full report of Mr. Oliver Pegler accompanies this prospectus, and it very clearly establishes the following important points:—

1. That an abundant supply of water is obtainable sufficient for all mining purposes, as well as adequate to furnish water power for the machinery.

2. The supply of timber on the Estate is far greater than any demand for the mine could possibly require.

3. The old native workings are very numerous.

4. The quantity of gold in the quartz appears to be great.

The purchase money (£50,000) includes the crops as well as the buildings, cattle, and tools, the Company taking over the properties as from the 31st March, 1880. All the expenses incidental to the formation of the Company, excepting the legal charges attaching to the prospectus, articles of association, and the agreement for purchase by the Company, will be borne by the vendor, who accepts £26,666, part of the purchase money, being all that he can take in accordance with the rules of the Stock Exchange, in fully paid-up shares, the residue being payable in cash; leaving the balance of the capital (£30,000) for the working capital.

The only contracts that have been entered into are, one dated 6th September, 1880, made between Stanes, Watson, and Co., of the one part, and J. W. Uloth of the other part; and one dated 11th September, 1880, made between J. W. Uloth of the one part and the Company of the other part. The vendor is the promoter, and has himself fixed the purchase-money.

These agreements, together with the memorandum and articles of association, translations of the leases above referred to, can be seen at the offices of the Company's Solicitors.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares (with a copy of the Memorandum of Association), can be obtained at the offices of the Company, or from the Bankers or Brokers. Should no allotment be made the amount paid on application will be returned in full.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 11; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 9; Calcutta, Sept. 8.

THE following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending August 31, 1880:—Fair rain fell during the week in Burma, Assam, and Bengal; and prospects continue good in those provinces. In Madras there was general, though slight, rain; and prospects remain tolerably fair. The same remarks apply to Mysor and Coorg, where, however, the dry crops are suffering from want of rain in several districts. There has been slight rain in part of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, resulting in some revival of the crops. In Berar and Hyderabad also there was a little rain, which has done some good; but more rain is much needed. In the Central Provinces a moderate amount of rain fell in a few districts only, and there are very general complaints that the long break is occasioning much injury. Except a very slight fall in Lucknow, Partabgarh, and Sitapur, there was no rain in the North Western Provinces and Oudh, and the want of it is now causing serious damage to the crops. In the Central India States, Rajputana, and the Punjab little or no rain has fallen, and crops are also beginning to suffer seriously. On the whole, it may be said that in the Eastern Provinces prospects remain good; in Southern India they are generally fair, but in most parts of Western, Central, and Northern India prospects, owing to a general premature cessation of the monsoon rains, are now either unsatisfactory or gloomy, and, unless ample rain falls soon, there may be a widespread deficiency in the yield of the autumn harvest.

THE general health report for the same week is as follows:—Bombay: some fever and small-pox in Sind. Bengal: fever reported in many places, prevalent in Rajshahye, Rungpore, Purneah, and Dharbanga; some cholera in Chittagong and Cuttack. N.W.P. and Oudh: Benares, fever and ague in places; Allahabad, cholera almost disappeared; Agra, fever and diarrhoea prevalent; Bareilly, some cholera; but health generally fair. Punjab: health generally good. Central Provinces: cholera prevalent in Sambalpur; small-pox and fever in Jubbulpore, Saugor, and Hoshangabad. British Burma: health of Province satisfactory. Assam: healthy. Mysor and Coorg: health improved. Central India States: Morar (Gwalior), cholera decreasing; health generally good. Rajputana: Sirohi, malarious fevers; health elsewhere good.

THIS week's telegram states that all fears regarding the crops are now dispelled in most parts of India. Fairly good rain has fallen in the Deccan, and in some districts the outlook is described as most promising. The condition of the people is said to be good.

WE have received the following telegrams from the India-office for publication:—

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 25.—St. John reports all quiet at Kandahar. The march of the columns returning to India is unopposed. General Baker's brigade reached Killa Abdulla yesterday. General Macgregor marched yesterday for Harnai to settle affairs with Murri tribe, and restore railway communications. The brigade sent from Kandahar to Maiwand has returned, having buried bodies found on field of action, July 27."

"FROM THE VICEROY, DATED SIMLA, SEPT. 26.—Reported from Kandahar that Cabuli troops who fled after action of 1st had reached Ghazni on road towards Cabul. Ghilzai soldiers dispersed to their homes. Ayub gone to Herat. Durani gathering in Gamindwar (? Zamindawar)."

"FROM VICEROY, SEPT. 28.—NAINI TAL.—From list of killed strike out Private Gillan, safe, but add Col. Taylor, R.E., Lieut. Robinson, 33rd Regiment, and Shiels, platelayer, making forty Europeans killed and four injured, besides some thirty or forty natives. These latter were buried by a landslip about 10 a.m., and it was while working to extricate them that many Europeans perished, buried under a second avalanche, which swept away Victoria Hotel, Assembly Rooms, and Bell's London House. The hotel had been evacuated after first landslip. Landslips caused by heavy rain. Altogether thirty-three inches fell in seventy-two hours."

A Times telegram, dated Simla, Sept. 26, contains the following items of news from Cabul to the 12th:—

"The defeat of Ayub has caused the Ameer the greatest satisfaction, and has had a most quieting effect on the country. Some days previous to the receipt of the news the Sirdar Fakir Khan circulated a report that Ayub had captured General Roberts and defeated the English. For this the Ameer caused the sirdar to be flogged so severely that his life is in danger. The Sirdars Moosa Jan and Hashim Khan were much discouraged, and have left for Abistalla. They were evidently never with Ayub at Kandahar. Ghanzi is quiet, and the authority of the Sirdar Aman Khan, appointed governor by the Ameer, is respected. The Sheikh Ali Hazaras, who hold the passes of the Hindu Kush, and who had revolted, have submitted on the Ameer preparing to send troops against them. The Turkestan road is again open for merchants, and a post line has been established to Jellalabad. The Ameer has severely punished some Afghan roughs for ill-treating Hindus. The Ameer expresses his intention to visit India as soon as possible. Everything in Cabul and the neighbourhood is quiet. The Ameer married, on Sept. 7, his cousin, the daughter of Ali Kullah Khan. The Viceroy, on leaving Simla, will visit Mussoorie and Dehra Doon before going to Lahore. The durbar takes place about Nov. 15. The 10th Hussars, the 9th Foot, two batteries of artillery, and two regiments of Native Infantry, will join the Viceroy's camp at Lahore. Mr. Lepel Griffin, lately chief political officer at Cabul, goes home on short leave, and on his return will succeed Sir Henry Daly as Governor General's agent in Central India. Mr. Lyall, Foreign Secretary, left Simla for Kandahar on Monday.

THE Standard correspondent telegraphed on Tuesday from Kandahar as follows:—

"The following force remains in Kandahar or its vicinity:—Infantry—European effectives, 3,400; native effectives, 5,000. Cavalry—European effectives, 350; native effectives, 1,600. There are 284 Europeans in hospital and 480 natives. There are 34 guns. On the line of communication are posted 1,400 native infantry and 230 native cavalry. Generals Primrose and Phayre still refer to General Roberts for instructions. In spite of all the efforts of the Transport Corps, no accumulation of stores has yet taken place. The Hindu residents consider that a fresh attempt is likely now that the Bengalee troops have retired. A writer lately in Ayub's employment states that the latter received a subsidy of eight lacks of rupees from the Persians to assist him to obtain the Ameer's ship, he pledging Herat as security for the loan, and placing Meerazul Khan as its governor. On the march down from Herat Ayub appointed governors in all districts beyond the Helmund. It is supposed that he is making for Meshed, to arrange further terms with Persia. The Hindu merchants here have received news that all the shops of their co-religionists at Herat have been looted."

A TELEGRAM to the same journal, dated yesterday, states that the members of the Yakub faction are assembled at Farrah and avow their intention of attacking us until Yakub be restored. Preparations have begun for the winter occupation of Kandahar. The troops must be divided, in the opinion of Generals Primrose and Phayre and Col. St. John, between Kandahar, Girishk, Argandab, and Argasan. The surplus will return to India.

THE Queen, on hearing of the sad occurrence at Naini Tal, at once telegraphed to the Marquis of Ripon to make known her sympathy with the relatives and friends of those who had lost their lives. Her Majesty at the same time expressed a desire to be kept informed of any particulars which may come to hand.

THE Marchioness of Ripon, accompanied by Earl de Grey and others, has arranged to leave Brindisi by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's steamer Ceylon on the 8th of November, stopping in Egypt for a week, and embarking in the same company's steamer Cathay, leaving Suez on the 18th and due at Bombay on the 30th inst.

OWING to the return of troops from Afghanistan, the Government of India have been able to reopen the grant of furlough, on private affairs, to British officers.

THE Galloway Gazette states that Viscount Dalrymple, son of the Earl of Stair, who unsuccessfully opposed Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P., at the last general election in Wigtownshire, has been appointed aide de camp to Mr. W. P. Adam, the new Governor of Madras.

WE understand that Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., is expected in England in November next. General Roberts has not yet accepted the command of the troops at Madras.

H.E. the MAHARAJA OF JAIPUR, G.C.S.I., C.I.E., died on Sept 18. "A prince of exceptional intelligence," as the Indian Mirror recently described him, he has during his whole reign been a most loyal feudatory, and has been distinguished by his enlightened government, under which the ancient Rajput city and State has become the model native capital and State of India. One of his last public utterances was an expression of thanks and approval conveyed to the editor of a vernacular paper who had advocated representative government for India. His Highness Ram Singh, Maharaja of Jaipur, held a seat in the Legislative Council of the Viceroy from 1869 to 1875, where he distinguished himself by a manly opposition to the income-tax. He introduced gas into his city of Jaipur, and was a bountiful supporter of schools and medical charities. He was a photographer of no mean skill, and further immortalised himself by being the first Hindu raja on record who danced a quadrille.

At a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council, held at Simla, Sept. 3, the Hon. Whitley Stokes introduced the bill to amend the law relating to the Courts of Small Causes in Presidency towns. In reply to an apology for the length of a former speech, H.E. the President remarked that he feared that Mr. Stokes's preparatory remarks on the occasion referred to had given rise in the public mind to a belief that the members went to sleep in the Legislative Council, which was great delusion. Thereupon there was laughter, but Mr. Stokes continued his remarks undisturbed. The Census Bill was introduced by the Hon. Mr. Grant, and leave was obtained to introduce bills for regulating the navigation of the Pegu and Sittang Canal, and for increasing the Madras port dues, the proposed enhancement being estimated to produce Rs.1,60,000 yearly. The object of the measure is to provide rent for payment of 4 per cent. interest on £628,000, the estimated cost of the Madras Harbour.

FROM a return issued by the Government of India it appears that more than 20,000 persons were killed last year by wild beasts and venomous snakes.

LORD RIPON has intimated that the grant of arms licences to natives is not to be unduly restricted when required for protection from attacks of wild animals.

By a recent decision of the Indian Government, it has been ruled that the period of employment of an officer on the extra establishment of the Forest Department of a province may be allowed to count as service for pension, provided always that the service in question qualifies in other respects.

In a notification published in the Gazette of India of the 25th, the Viceroy announces that a separate war medal will be granted for Afghanistan, and states that the Queen has expressed her readiness to receive for consideration the names of British officers who have rendered distinguished service during the campaign. Twenty-five additional appointments to the second class of the Order of British India are authorised for native commissioned officers, and a corresponding number of promotions to the first class. The cordial thanks of the Government are expressed to all ranks.

THE anxiety recently felt concerning the outbreak of cholera on the frontier has, says the Pioneer, in a great measure subsided. It is impossible to say what cholera may do before the season is over; but fortunately, so far, the disease about Peshawur has been confined to a sharp outbreak in the village of Tangi, not far from Abazai—one non-fatal attack in the city of Peshawur on the 26th, and three cases in the Hashtnagar villages on the 30th. There is no doubt considerable cause for anxiety on account of the troops, and that was quite foreseen when it was resolved to bring them back from Cabul; but it is to be regretted that the correspondents of some Indian journals should have caused needless alarm by telegraphing exaggerated reports.

THE circulation of the Turkish paper, the Paik-i Islam, has been stopped in India. The Pioneer thinks the messenger of Islam showed its spirit plainly enough, but that the ordinary literate Indian Mussulman could not read it without an effort.

SURGEON W. A. Daubeney, a junior member of the Indian Medical Service, committed suicide on August 25 at Peshawur. He had only recently arrived in India.

THE following works relating to India are included among those about to be published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.:—"To Cabul with the Cavalry Brigade," by Major R. C. W. Mitford, 14th Bengal Lancers. "With the Kurum Valley Force in the Cabul Campaign of 1878-79," by Major J. A. S. Colquhoun, R.A. "The History of India, as told by its Own Historians; the Local Muhammadan Dynasties." Vol. I. Guzerat, by John Dowson, M.R.A.S., late professor of the Staff College. "Sketches from Nipal, Historical and Descriptive," by the late A. A. Oldfield, M.D., many years resident at Kathmandu. "Hitopadesa: A New Literal Translation," by Frederick Pincott, F.R.A.S.; and "Illustrations of Architectural and Decorative Art in Rajputana and Adjacent Districts," by Dr. F. W. A. De Fabeck, I.M.S., and Major S. S. Jacob, B.S.C., and executive engineer to the Jaipur State.

DURING the week ending August 28 there were 147 deaths in Calcutta, giving a death rate of 17·8 per 1,000 per annum. In Madras during the same week there were 301 deaths, giving a death rate of 39·4 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India supplies the following obituary of the week:—Lieut. Col. A. M. Shewell; Major P. Murray, Bombay unattached; Capt. F. B. Carleton, 5th Fusiliers; Lieut. G. Pycroft, 5th Punjab Cavalry; Lieut. D. M'L. Farrington, 63rd Regiment; Surgeon W. A. Daubeney; Mr. Mahomed Yusuf Saib Bahadur, presidency magistrate, Madras; Mr. T. W. R. Morris, Simla.

SIR F. HAINES has directed that no men be detained whose seventh, thirteenth, or twenty-second year of service will expire before Nov. 16, 1881, but that all men under these conditions of service be sent to England this trooping season.

THE provisions of the order authorising the grant of a bounty to recruits for native infantry, published in G.O.C.C., dated March 16, 1880, ceased to have effect from the 1st instant.

THE FATAL LANDSLIP AT NAINI TAL.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times sends a description of this fearful catastrophe, which gives some additional particulars and more correct list of the names of the victims:—"About the middle of the week before last meteorological observers at Calcutta reported that a small cyclonic vortex had formed in the Bay of Bengal and passed inland in a north-westerly direction. It seems to have caused an abnormal rainfall wherever it passed, notably in the Upper Doab and Rohilkund. Rain began fall heavily at Naini Tal on the evening of Thursday, the 16th, and continued almost without intermission till noon on Sunday, the 19th. It is said that the gauge showed a fall of 25in. in forty hours. On Saturday morning the danger first became apparent even to the most careless. A small landslip occurred near the Victoria Hotel, carrying away an outbuilding and killing an ayah and child. Mr. Taylor, the magistrate in charge of the station, with a body of police and a working party from the depot, under Captain Balderson, 34th Foot, station staff officer, immediately repaired to the spot and commenced to clear away the debris and to try to divert the course of a torrent which threatened the hotel and some other houses. The hotel was full of visitors, including Mr. Justice and Mrs. Straight. The warning in the morning gave them all time to seek safety elsewhere, but some, unfortunately, sought shelter in the library—a portion of the Assembly-rooms building close to the lake. About half-past one the great catastrophe happened. An eyewitness thus describes it:—"A noise, a vision of parting earth and moving trees, a rush of matter towards the lake, a roar of water and falling material, and then a deep brown smoke, rising in slow wreaths through the gloom and furious rain. A great wave of water, caused by the precipitation of part of the assembly-rooms and an immense mass of earth into the lake, swept across its length some 5ft. high. It dashed over the sluice gates at the entrance of the gorge with such power as to sweep away several persons standing by them. Sir Henry Ramsay, commissioner of Kumaon, was all but carried away by the wild rush of the waters." A correspondent of the Pioneer says:—"From the top of the lower spur, under which the Victoria Hotel had stood a minute before, down to the edge of the cricket ground nothing was to be seen but a vast expanse of loose earth, beneath which lay buried hotel and garden, road and orderly room. It was as though some giant had dropped half a mountain on the spot, blotting out, in a moment, every feature of the scene, filling up the hollows, and reducing to one dead slope all that lay below. Deep below lay the working party. Not a vestige of them was to be seen; only the lone hillside, silent and dark. Meanwhile the cricket and polo grounds presented a strange contrast to the gentle sweep above. Towards the pavilion they were intact, save for the streams of water pouring in every direction, but on the other side was simply an enormous mound of vast extent and varying height, a tangled mass of broken walls and roofs, fallen trees, and heaped-up earth in horrid confusion, with spoils of the shop and orderly-room. Saddest of all was the spectacle of the few corpses that were visible among the ruin."

"Never was havoc more sudden, more awful, or more complete. Without a moment's warning, without a premonitory rumble to awaken suspicion, down came the enormous landslide, burying in deadly embrace the hotel and the working party behind, engulfing orderly room and shop, assembly rooms and library, with almost every living soul they contained. Of the number of people in the shop, all save four, of whom three were women, were swept away. Working parties were at once formed, but progress was slow. Engineers and medical officers gave the opinion that there was not the remotest chance of the survival of any who lay entombed beneath the ruins." The following is believed to be an accurate list of the casualties:—Killed with the working party—Messrs. Taylor, Civil Service, Noad, police; and the Rev. Mr. Robinson; Capt. Balderston, 34th Foot; Lieuts. Sullivan and Hackett, 73rd; Carmichael, 33rd; Sergeant Major Rogers, Sergeant Frood, Lance Sergeant Grover, Lance Corporal Trister; Privates Helmonth, Hayes, Turner, Brown, Chisholm, Kinvay, and Burt; Gunner Coleman; Messrs. Tucker and Morgan, clerks; Messrs. Morgan, overseer, and Shields, platelayer. Killed in orderly room—Sergeant M'Ewan. Killed in Bell's shop—Messrs. Bell, shopkeeper, Knight, Moss, Drew, and Gray, assistants, and Capt. Haynes, R.E. Killed in the library—Major Morphy, 40th Foot, Mrs. Morphy, Mrs. Turnbull, Capt. Goodridge, 35th Native Infantry, Surgeon Major Hannah, and Private Farrance, Col. Taylor, R.E., consulting engineer to the Government, and Lieut. Robinson, 23rd Foot, were also killed, but it does not appear where. The station, as may be supposed, is plunged in the deepest gloom, not unmingled with apprehensions of further accidents of the same kind; but at the date of the latest accounts the rain had ceased for some days, and there seemed no reason to anticipate further danger. Owing to the telegraph and roads beyond Bareilly being interrupted by the floods, the news of the catastrophe did not reach the rest of India until Tuesday evening. It has caused a profound sensation throughout the country, and for the moment the Afghan war and all other topics, domestic or foreign, have sunk into insignificance beside this awful calamity. It is announced that the Queen has telegraphed an expression of her sorrow to the Viceroy. Steps are being taken to raise a fund for the widows and orphans of the killed, and Mr. Justice Straight, Allahabad, has expressed his readiness to receive subscriptions. The number of natives who perished is not yet known, but it can hardly have been under fifty. It is doubtful whether it will ever be accurately ascertained, as the enormous mass of earth which fell will render it a most costly, and indeed almost impossible task to thoroughly exhume all the dead."

The bodies of the following victims have been recovered and buried:—Messrs. Bell, Moss, Warren, and Gray, Mrs. Morphy, Capts. Goodridge and Haines, and several natives. Many houses are reported to be unsafe. The people are leaving the station rapidly.

THE CAUSES OF THE LANDSLIP AT NAINI TAL.—The following extracts, from private letters of Mr. Commissioner Taylor, who met with his death in the terrible landslide at the hill station of Naini Tal, on the 19th instant, seem to show that the rainfall during the last few weeks of the rainy season had been more than usually heavy. Writing to his family from Naini Tal on July 25, Mr. Taylor says:—"In June, from the 15th to the end of the month, we had twenty-four inches (i.e., of rain). Lately we have had a break of a few days, but to-day (25th) and last night it has been pouring." A little further on in the same communication he remarks—"Landslips and break-downs of roads are the bane of my existence during the rains, as I have the looking after them as the working and official member of the municipality. Towards the middle of the rains the ground is so saturated with rain that in some of the shingly formations whole bits of the hill come down, destroying roads, diverting the draining, and doing all sorts of damage." On the 27th of the same month the deceased gentleman wrote:—"We have just had twenty inches continuous rain within forty-eight hours. The damage done is enormous." And on August 17 (presumably the last letter received from him) he writes:—"Within the last two months we have had eighty inches of rain!" Mr. Leonard Taylor, who was the fourth son of Mr. David Taylor, M.R.C.S., of Kennington-park-road, was but twenty-seven years of age. He was educated at Epsom College and at King's College, London, from the latter passing the competitive examination for the Indian Civil Service in 1873, where he took thirteenth place. He was first stationed at Mainpuri in 1875, and then at Muttra; was home on leave in 1878, then returned to Almorah, and finally was stationed at Naini Tal.

THE DEFEAT OF AYUB KHAN.

THE Indian papers contain additional particulars as to the officers killed in the victory of Sept. 1. Lieut. Col. Brownlow, 72nd Highlanders, took part with his regiment in the fighting about Cabul in December last, and on one occasion gained great credit for the example he set to his men when the brigade of which they formed a part were retiring under a very heavy fire. He was mentioned in Sir Frederick Roberts's despatches about these operations, and was rewarded with the Companionship of the Bath. Captain St. John Thomas Frome received his first commission nineteen years ago and his company in 1872. Captain Edward Stratton, 22nd (the Cheshire) Foot joined the service the same year as Captain Frome, and received his captaincy about the same time as the latter officer. He was a good all-round soldier, having "passed" in most things. For instance, he possessed certificates in musketry, gymnastics, fencing, &c., and in the Kuram Valley was superintendent of signalling. Col. Brownlow was shot dead while leading his regiment into action. Captain Stratton was killed by a wounded Ghazi after the position had been taken.

General Roberts after the victory issued the following Field Force Order:—"The Lieutenant General desires to offer his hearty congratulations to the troops under his command upon the operations so successfully carried out on September 1, which resulted in the total defeat of the Afghan army under Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan, and the capture of their camp and twenty-seven pieces of ordnance, including two guns of our E-B, Royal Horse Artillery, lost on the 27th of last month. Any soldier might feel proud of such an achievement and the glorious termination to the march from Cabul completed the previous day. He begs all ranks will accept his sincere thanks. No troops could have behaved better, and Sir Frederick Roberts only hopes that whenever he may be employed on service it may be his good fortune to command as fine a body of soldiers as the present Cabul-Kandahar Force. It is with deep regret that the Lieutenant General announces the death, in action, of the following officers:—Col. F. Brownlow, Capt. St. John F. Frome, and Capt. E. Stratton—all three most gallant and distinguished soldiers. To Sir Frederick Roberts, and many other officers of this force, their loss is a personal one; whilst by their early deaths, the regiments to which they belonged and the army generally have been deprived of the services of three most valuable officers."

THE FIGHT AT PATKAO SHANA.

PAPERS relating to the defeat of a body of Zermuttis at Patkao Shana, in the Logar Valley, on July 1 last, by the cavalry brigade of the 3rd Division, Northern Afghanistan Field Force, under Brigadier General Palliser, are published in a recent Gazette of India. It was reported to Major General Hills on June 30 that some thousand to fifteen hundred Zermuttis had collected at Patkao Shana, and were expecting reinforcements under Mahomed Jan, and General Palliser was instructed to proceed with his cavalry brigade to disperse the gathering. His force consisted of 557 officers and men of the 1st and 2nd

Punjab Cavalry and 19th Bengal Lancers. On approaching Patkao Shana, General Palliser learned that the enemy had received timely warning of his approach, and were in full retreat towards Altimar. A pursuit resulted in their being overtaken, and though they made several attempts to stand up against the attack wherever the nature of the ground specially favoured resistance, they were put to utter rout, leaving over 200 killed and wounded on the field. Our casualties were three men and eight horses killed; one British officer (Capt. Barrow, 10th Bengal Lancers, orderly officer), twenty-eight men and twenty-five horses wounded. The despatches mention several acts of gallantry, the most prominent being those by Major J. R. B. Atkinson, 1st Punjab Cavalry, Capt. L. T. Bishop, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and Sowar Sirbuland Khan, 1st Punjab Cavalry. The Commander in Chief and the Governor General in Council concur in "considering that great credit is due to the cavalry brigade of Major General Hills' division, under the immediate command of Brigadier General Palliser, C.B., and to the officers and men whose services have been so prominently brought to notice."

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

THE committee of the Indian Medical Service Defence Fund have put forth a report of the present condition of the fund, the progress made in carrying out its objects, and the prospects and proposed work of action for the future. The committee, the headquarters of which is at 2, Storey's-gate, S.W., are able to show that 33 per cent. of the present members of service have joined the movement, while the receipts up to Sept. 1 amounted to £483 15s. 9d. in addition to Rs.350 not transmitted from India, while £276 17s. 1d. had been expended up to that date. The accidental informalities and inaccuracies attendant on the first inception of the work of the committee are duly explained, although they have ceased to exist. The members of the committee, as far as it embraces a service element, are drawn exclusively from the retired members of the service whose personal interests are unaffected by the objectionable changes, and they are able to quote the support of the medical schools, corporations, and universities, the cordial approval of the British Medical Association having been given at the annual meeting recently held at Cambridge. A tabular statement put forth by the committee shows that, while from the day he lands in India, the British army surgeon never under any circumstances draws less than the full pay of his rank, the system of "unemployed pay" deals unfairly with the members of the Indian Service. By this system the full pay is given only to those who are permanently appointed to definite charges, while those expectant of vacancies only receive the unemployed pay, and if appointed to "officiate" receive only half the difference between the full and the unemployed pay. As was to be expected, the changes introduced into the service have already told prejudicially upon its character and prestige. The following abstracts from a parliamentary return, ordered to be printed by the House of Commons on July 30 last, show that in every simultaneous examination, except one, of candidates for the Indian Medical Service, and for the Army Medical Department respectively, which has been held since 1870, the highest number of marks has been obtained by the former, and even in this exceptional case (Feb. 12, 1877), the successful candidate afterwards entered the Indian service, while the lowest number obtained by those who entered the service were in all cases in excess of the lowest obtained by successful candidates for the sister service. This proud position has, in the last examination, held on August 9, 1880, been forfeited, and the last successful candidate for the Indian service, the twenty-sixth in order of merit, occupies a position inferior to the fifty-second candidate for the British service; moreover, there are at least eight names in the Indian List unmistakably Oriental in character, proving the truth of the committee's assertion that, under the new régime, the service would have to depend largely upon other than British sources for its recruits. The result of the inquiry now going on in India as to the working of the new scheme, which was the result of the Lord Hartington's audience of the deputation, whose action we recorded at the time, must necessarily influence the future action of the committee. If unfavourable to their hopes they will be ready for a possible parliamentary campaign, and to strengthen their hands they earnestly ask for the cordial support of every member of the service in the form of individual petitions to Parliament. Twenty-five such petitions having already been presented, drawn out last session. The preparation of these petitions need not interfere with the submission of memorials to the Viceroy, and if, as is stated, such memorials are not accepted and forwarded, the very fact will only strengthen their appeal to the House for a full and impartial inquiry.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

(FIRST NOTICE.)

THE history of the momentous struggle which jeopardised, preserved, and, as a result, reorganised India, may now be said to be complete. As the task undertaken by Col. Malleeson widened before him, and as the general prospect growing nearer revealed to him the more special features, he ceased to be even in name a continuator, and this last and concluding volume is the third of his history and the fifth of the whole series of volumes which will undoubtedly be regarded as the principal source of information on the events of those two years into which so much was crowded. In writing the history of a country, or of a period, synchronism is usually possible; without much distraction of the reader, the development of the measures, the events and changes which compose a people's history, has a natural reticulation, a linking of one to another, that enables digression, or parallel narration, to be essayed without overstraining the reader's amiability or powers of attention. How difficult it was so to treat the scattered yet concurrent, the synchronous and yet isolated, civil and military actions, the victories and defeats, the blunders and successes which were going on all at once all over India in 1857-59, the readers of the previous volumes will have conceded. That their task as learners or observers has been wonderfully facilitated by the dramatic skill which has grouped the events of struggle and managed to give some correlating significance to the passing events in the widely-separated parts of India, this concluding volume is a final and conclusive testimony. Col. Malleeson, in the preface to the preceding volume, in which he needlessly excused himself for the necessity of producing a third, promised that the following volume would "narrate the occurrences in the sister Presidencies in Haiderabad and in Central India." "I propose, too," he added, "to devote one chapter of that volume to a comprehensive review of Lord Canning's late policy, and another to a consideration of the action of the civil officers in many of the districts which came more or less under the influence of the great wave of revolt." The promise thus expressed is amply fulfilled. One half of the volume contains the history of the Southern Presidencies, or more particularly of Bombay, and narrates how the dangers of an explosion of the Maratha race in rebellion were averted, and how Central India was secured by the unequalled exertions of Sir Hugh Rose's force against the untiring Tantia Topi and the implacable Rani of Jhansi. The second half of the work follows up the pacification of Oudh and the hunt after Tantia Topi, the successful close of which was made so, as ever in history, by the treachery of a trusted follower, that properly heralds the conclusion of the mutiny. The Indian navy, we are glad to note, receives a well-deserved and especial record of praise, dealt with that kindly generosity which is so peculiarly the author's own. A retrospective chapter, in which the cause of the mutiny is searched out or imagined, forms, with its stately eulogy on Lords Canning, Elphinstone, and Harris, a dignified final, a well-carven crown to this monument of the great mutiny.

The Presidency of Bombay is very little associated with the dangers of the mutiny in the minds or memories of most even-educated Englishmen. That this is the case is shown to be due to the foresight and nerve of the leading men, who in that crisis, when blunders or inactivity might have caused a conflagration all through the land from Central India to the Southern Maratha country, by vigilance, daring, and energy, here stamped out the first spark, there cut off the incipient flame. In Bombay itself the secret train for an outbreak among the Mahomedan population was all but completely laid. There was active disaffection at work among the Sepoys, trusted as usual by their officers, who steadily refused to credit the possibility of their men proving unfaithful. The episode of the discovery of the plot is told with conciseness and vigour, and the reader will thoroughly concur with Col. Malleeson in ascribing to Mr. Forjett, the superintendent of police, the credit of saving the city of Bombay. That officer's untiring vigilance enabled him to bring unwilling conviction to the minds of Major Barrow and General Shortt. Nor is there a finer instance of cool pluck, combined with thorough knowledge of the native character, than is afforded in the narrative which tells us how he, strong in his mistrust of the Sepoys and in his confidence in the police, sat on horseback facing the infuriated Sepoys ready to break out from their lines. The unanimous voice of the community proclaimed Mr. Forjett as the saviour of Bombay. But Col. Malleeson rightly finds in his success a ground for eulogy on Lord Elphinstone, who could select, and, having selected, could thoroughly rely on his able subordinate. The bold but farsighted policy which had denuded Bombay of European troops, that he might throw them on the threatened points outside was due to his greater experience, but it is trite to say that a good commander finds able generals to support him. "To the men who were the instruments of his policy he gave the most complete and generous confidence. Mr. Frere, in Sind, Mr. Seton Karr, and afterwards Col. Le Grand Jacob, in the Southern Maratha country, Mr. John Roses, in Satarah, and Col. Malcolm are instances of a similar import. When, in spite of all his measures to keep the mutiny from Bombay by a policy of offensive defence, the poison crept in and infected the regiments of the regular army in the Southern Maratha country, how vigorous, how decided, is his policy." The reader who follows Col. Malleeson through the details which justify this eulogium, and the consecutive story of the events in the Sagar and Narbada territories, and in Haiderabad, will clearly understand the dangers, and the way they were met. He will find blunders, such as in the conduct of General Woodburn. He will discover rankling causes for just discontent, the results of high-handed and ignorant meddling with native traditional rights, and will wonder sometimes, not so much at the rebellious spirit of some chiefs, as at the wise, patient loyalty of the greater princes, such as the Nizam Afzul-ud-Daola, in whose hands, guided as he was by the wise counsels of Sir Salar Jung, lay for three months the balance of the fate of India. To his name we add those of Holkar and Sindia, although Col. Malleeson's especial hero, to whom his volume is inscribed with an elaborate tribute to his memory, Sir Henry Durand mistrusted him. One thing may be especially noted, which is the full justice done to the loyalty of the Madras soldiers, who, like their officers, did good and faithful service, well-acknowledged in that time, but apparently forgotten nowadays by many clamorous reformers. It is impossible in our space to do more than approve the masterly summary in which Col. Malleeson concludes his chapter on Durand's political and military services in Central India. It is a strong word to say that "his personal character had been the mainstay of British authority in Central India. Had Durand not been there the result had not been accomplished. But it is certain that no one could have done more. No more clear prevision or more energetic action could have been exhibited to save the line of the Narbada, the enormous importance of which he alone understood, while other officials urged measures that would have lost it. With a weak column of 500 Europeans of all arms, and 800 natives, he sets out from Mau, and in five weeks takes a strong fort, fights several cavalry combats, gains three actions in the open field, takes more than forty guns, crushes the Mandisur insurrection, saves the line of the Narbada, and, marching back to India, causes the disarming of the disaffected troops of Holkar."

THE NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.*

THE first and in every sense principal article in this month's journal is one reprinted from last April's issue of the Calcutta Review. Its subject is "High Education in Bengal." This is followed by a complaint of the "Decay of Commercial Enterprise among Parsees," who are, in the opinion of their co-religionist critic, so receding from self-reliance and independence that "most of the successful candidates of the Madras Agricultural College willingly accepted situations as teachers," instead of farming themselves. Mr. Sheppard, collector of Kaira, points out for the information of Mr. O. K. Dutt, that the saline efflorescence known as "oos," which abounds in parts of Guzerat, is rich in alkali; so that the salt tax cannot be charged with strangling the manufacture of soap and glass. An extract from the Bombay Gazette may be read as closely connected with the article on "Hindu Widows." Each of the two movements commands the support of all interested in the true social amelioration of our Hindu fellow-subjects. Among the items of Indian intelligence we see that a useful movement has been inaugurated by the Bengal Ladies' Association:—"It is for aiding higher education among Bengali ladies, and consists of lectures and examinations. Ten groups of subjects have been arranged, including the elements of some sciences, geography, history, arithmetic and mathematics, English literature, Bengali, and domestic economy. Four of the groups must be taken by those who present themselves for the examinations, which will be held early in December. An epitome of the lectures given will be published in the Bamabhodini, a Bengali journal for ladies. We shall be interested to learn the success of this educational plan."

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE FURLOUGH RULES.

THE Indian Military Furlough Rules are as antiquated as the Indian Military Pension Rules, and the one code is as prejudicial to the weal of the public service as the other. It can be only be on the principle that what our forefathers did we cannot undo; that rules are retained which were specially designed for the old days of sailing ships and the long sea route; before Waghorn was known or M. de Lesseps. In those good old days, which we speak of, it took quite three months, and often more, to reach Europe from India; and so if we give three months for the home voyage, and three for the outward passage, it will follow that six months' leave of absence were swallowed up by the devouring sea. It was necessary, in view of that fact, to grant long furloughs to Indian officers desirous of re-visiting their native land, and thus leave of absence came to be granted in periods of one year, two years, and even three years, after long intervals of Indian duty. But in these times, we must perceive that a man is whisked away from Bombay to Brindisi in three weeks, and it is now nearer six weeks than six months which are requisite in order to enable the Anglo-Indian to go and come between Bombay and Bayswater. Short and frequent periods of furlough, or leave of absence, all reckoning as service towards pension, are what would really gratify the Indian army, and benefit the public service together; but to go on retaining the old furloughs of two or three years—reckoning every day of them against the officers' service towards pension—is only to increase the army of field officers, and to multiply the recipients of colonels' allowances.

There can be no doubt that those conditions of existence here which induced our military forefathers to serve ten years in India at a stretch—some of them fifteen or twenty—and to drink brandy and water, "weak but often" and to wear pyjamas in place of trousers, and to climb to their beds by short steps of stairs, and to smoke hookhas, and to play blind hooky, have entirely disappeared. Indian society has run into the other extreme, and is now so decorous that people are afraid to know one another. The great object at present is, not to keep open house, and to be renowned from Calcutta to Cochin for large-hearted hospitality, but to save as much money as the exchange will permit, for the purpose of spending it, or of enabling the family to spend it, in Europe. If an officer could run home on six months' leave now and then, with or without his wife, and to see his old club haunts, if a bachelor; his children, if a benedict he would be content to forego long furloughs. And specially so if he was aware that there was no poison in his cup of joy, no insidious attempts of some malignant member of council of other days to ruin his holiday by "taking it out of him" twenty years afterwards in the matter of his pension. No loss to Government could accrue—but, on the contrary, gain. There is only one check needed to prevent any improper abuse of the suggested indulgence, and that is, to reduce an officer's allowances whenever he goes on leave, and to grant a portion of them to his locum tenens. Men are, of necessity all their own, compelled to toil in India for the sake of the superior pay, and the Government of India might be as liberal as it pleased in the matter of furlough, and yet not have to complain of its abuse. Where the Government is wrong is to be stingy, for this mistaken action produces officers who are a long way behind the times, and behind the professional intelligence of the latest joined sub-lieutenant of foot. It would have been far better for the State, for themselves, and for their regiments, if they had spent a good deal of their service on furlough—short furloughs—abroad, in foreign camps, in eastern travel, in field sports at home, or in anything rather than in some petty Indian station. We see that the officers of the Indian Staff Corps are about to get up a Parliamentary representation on "The Indian Military Pension Rules," and we would recommend them to give the House of Commons the Indian military furlough rules as an after-piece. If the House of Commons could only be made to see the actual effects of long furloughs at long intervals all reckoning against pension, there could be little question of the result. But it is unfortunately the case that a native regiment, with its five colonels and its one subaltern, can never parade in London, there to astonish the natives with the curious consequences of the pension and furlough regulations of our forefathers, as exemplified in the persons of their military descendants of the present date.—Indian Daily News.

THE OCTROI BILL.

WE are glad to hear that the Secretary of State has put down his foot upon the very unnecessary and undesirable Octroi Bill, which was introduced last year by Sir John Strachey. The practical effect of this measure, as we showed at the time, would have been to ruin the octroi system outright all over the country. It was a theorising bill, aimed at the development of abstract economical whims, and directly it came to be discussed by practical men all kinds of holes were driven through it. The Government of India has ample power, as the law stands, to restrain any really improper development of octroi at particular places where abuses may creep in, and it has now been decided that, wherever such action may be necessary, Government shall proceed by means of simple resolutions. The only case worth notice that was brought forward to justify the economical indictment against the octroi system was that of Karachi, where the municipality proposed to tax corn for exportation on its entrance into the town. Proceedings of that sort, of course, can easily be stopped; but, for the rest, octroi, whatever fanciful objections may be advanced against it, means local improvements all over India, and the sacrifice of these would be too heavy a price to pay for the gratification of a crotchet.—Pioneer.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

PROPOSED VETERINARY COLLEGE.—The Military Department of the Punjab Government lately proposed to the Lieutenant Governor of those provinces the establishment of a Veterinary College at Lahore, and inquired if the Government was prepared to meet any portion of the charges of such an institution from provincial funds. Sir Robert Egerton has all along been in favour of establishing a school or college in Lahore for instruction in the veterinary art; he considers that in the interests of the province the scheme is one which merits hearty support. Such a study would tend to dispel the ignorance which prevails among the people of the Punjab in regard to disease of horses and cattle, and would also enlarge their minds generally. The Lieutenant Governor has considered the estimates of cost, and is believed to be of opinion that should the Government of India provide a professor and an assistant professor at a cost of Rs.1,130 per mensem, the remainder of the estimate of charges—Rs.100 per mensem for an allowance to native lecturers, and Rs.105 per mensem for office establishment and contingencies—may reasonably be borne by the provincial funds of the Punjab. The accommodation which will be required for lecture-rooms and stabling will also be provided by the Punjab Government. It is proposed to invite district committees to offer scholarships to students entering the veterinary class. These students would be maintained by such scholarships, and might be called upon to pay some proportion of the fees which would be leviable from youths who should enter without such scholarships. The Government of India would, in virtue of the salaries contributed by it, be entitled to nominate students on such terms, as regards subsequent service and payment of, or exemption from, fees as might seem proper.—Times of India.

ORISSA.—In the annual Administration report of the Orissa division for last year it is stated that in many parts the ryots are learning to watch the markets, and hold back their crops for the rise, while it is said that they are beginning also to see that the temptation of high prices has in recent years taken out of their hands more of their stocks than it was prudent to part with. There is noticed generally a desire on the part of the labouring classes to take up land for agriculture; and in the tributary States, where alone is there any available surplus, the increase of cultivation is said by the commissioner to be very considerable owing to this cause. A quiet, if somewhat sleepy, conservatism, says the report, is the chief characteristic of the province. In Poree some anxiety was felt as to the measures that might be taken to deal with cases of misappropriation of religious endowments. The exemption of the poorer classes from the license tax, had here, as elsewhere, given satisfaction. The Arms Act had been quietly accepted. There were only three vernacular papers in the division which were described as loyal in tone, but useless as giving any indication of the real views of the people on any specific subject. In the excise returns the principal feature is the growth in the consumption of opium, notwithstanding the increase of price from Rs.27 to Rs.29 per seer ordered in 1878. The average consumption of five previous years was 273 maunds 33 seers. Last year the consumption was 306 maunds 23 seers. All classes who can afford it are said to use it, some as a luxury, some as a febrifuge, some to preserve their health in advancing age. If the consumption continues to increase the report recommends that another increase should be made in the duty. The use of ganja, which is more deleterious, has happily decreased; but the strictest watch should be kept over the cultivation of the plant both in Orissa and the tributary Mahals.—Times of India.

THE LICENCE TAX.—In a recent official paper, the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal remarks that "the management (of the Licence tax collection in 1879-80) was not satisfactory in Cuttack, and the results might well have been better in all three districts." Considering that the population of Cuttack numbers nearly half the whole population of Orissa, his Honour's observation has a wide significance. He does not go into the subject, however, though a small table of figures is given. These show that 1·37 per cent. of the population were assessed, and that on them the incidence of the tax was Rs.3-1-8; the demand for the whole division was Rs.97,218, out of which only Rs.69,870 was collected—the rest, with the exception of a few rupees, being remitted.—Pioneer.

THE RANGOON MUNICIPAL LOAN.—The chief commissioner of Burma has sanctioned the request of the Rangoon municipality to apply to the Government of India for permission to draw the unutilised portion of the loan sanctioned in 1877, to lakhs and 90,000 rupees, and for a further loan of seven lakhs to carry out a project for the water supply of Rangoon, which place, like Calcutta, is interesting itself in the water supply question. In case the Indian Government should not feel itself in a position to advance the amount prayed for, permission is asked to raise the loan in the Indian market at a rate not higher than 5½ per cent.; the whole amount to be liquidated in nineteen years.—Englishman.

LOSS OF A SHIP.—We are informed that the ship Star of Africa, 431 tons, Capt. W. Barron in command, which left Calcutta on July 2, for Cape Town, has been wrecked on Albatross Rock, off the coast of Madagascar. All on board were lost with the exception of the second officer and one seaman. Capt. Barron was well known in Calcutta, having been a trader to this port for nearly a quarter of a century. Unfortunately he had his wife and family on board with him, who must be included amongst the lost.—Englishman.

THE CALCUTTA PORT TRUST.—The total income of the Port Trust during the past year was Rs.18,64,293 as compared with Rs.18,57,990 in 1878-79. The year having opened with a revenue cash balance of Rs.3,73,041, the full amount available for expenditure from revenue was Rs.22,37,334. The ordinary revenue expenditure, including the half-yearly payment on account of debt, was Rs.13,67,948, Rs.5,85,612 was appropriated for new works and improvements, Rs.32,634 was held on suspense account, and Rs.2,57,140 remained as a cash balance at the end of the year. The total number of vessels that entered the port during the year was 896, as against 967 and the tonnage 1,415,979 tons, as against 1,430,789 tons in 1878-79. Of these vessels 442 were steamers, and 454 sailing ships. The number of steamers that came through the Suez Canal was 136, with an average tonnage of 2,688 tons.—Englishman.

CHINCHONA IN THE ANDAMAN.—The Government of India, we hear, has lately inquired of the Government of Bengal as to when it can conveniently arrange with Dr. King, superintendent of the Botanical Gardens, to send him on special deputation to the Andaman Islands for the purpose of selecting a site for the experimental cultivation of cinchona in those islands. As Dr. King is now on leave, and is expected to return to India by the end of October next, he is likely to proceed on deputation by the commencement of next winter.—Indian Daily News.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the general meeting of the Gouripore Company, held on August 26, the report and accounts were passed, and the amount standing at credit of profit and loss account—viz., Rs.22,906-9-2 was transferred to wear and tear account; and the following resolution was carried unanimously:—"That the shareholders desire to place on record their deep sense of the loss sustained by the company, in consequence of the sudden death, at home, of Dr. Barry, who founded the company, and who from first to last, in England and India, in every way, on all occasions, devoted his great energy and talents to every detail likely to promote its successful working and the comfort and well-being of every person connected with its operations. At the general meeting of the Riverside Press Company (Watson's Patent), held on August 30, the report and accounts were passed. At the general meeting of the Central Cachar Tea Company, held August 31, the report and accounts were passed. At the general meeting of the Equitable Coal Company, held August 31, the report and accounts were passed, and the sum of Rs.42,706-10-10, appearing at credit of profit and loss account to June 30, was carried forward to credit of the current half-year. At the general meeting of the Kurseong and Darjeeling Tea Company, held August 31, the report and accounts were passed. The meeting resolved itself into a special meeting to empower the directors to borrow funds for the working expenses as was originally provided in the articles of association. Resolved—"That the articles of association of the company be amended by substituting for the present clause 36 the following, 'it shall be lawful for the directors from time to time to borrow money from and incur liabilities to bankers and others at interest for the working expenses and other current outgoings of the company, but so that such debts or liabilities shall at no time exceed Rs.25,000 exclusive of interest, and also exclusive of any monies raised or to be raised by the directors under the authority of the special resolution passed on the 4th and confirmed on Dec. 21, 1878.'" At the general meeting of the Calcutta Docking Company, held August 3, a dividend of Rs.5 per share, and Rs.2-8 per half share was declared.—Englishman.

A NAGA RAID.—The bungalow of the European manager of Roopabally Tea Estate, Luckeepore, Cachar, has been looted by a body of armed men, supposed to be Nagas.—Times of India.

MURDER BY A SOLDIER.—A soldier of the 33rd Regiment, named Davey, has been tried for the murder of a native woman at Naini Tal. The jury found the prisoner guilty of culpable homicide only, and Justice Douglas Straight sentenced him to transportation for life.—Ibid.

FIRE AT SRINAGAR.—A destructive fire occurred in Srinagar, Kashmir, on the night of the 2nd ult. About 150 houses were destroyed, but the greatest portion of property was saved. No lives were lost, except a girl of ten years of age, the charred remains of whose body were taken out next morning.—Pioneer.

THE COMMISSARIAT FRAUD.—At Rangoon, Horace Trevor, commissariat clerk, has been sentenced to fifteen months' simple imprisonment for receiving illegal gratification. The sum alleged to have been paid to Trevor was Rs.152-10. The trial of the late Tonghoo commissariat manager, Runga Swamy Naidoo, concluded on the 6th, after lasting five days. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to nine months rigorous imprisonment, and fined Rs.1,500, or in default a further two months.—Times of India.

AN ALLAHABAD DIVORCE CASE.—The case of Lewis v. Lewis and Cripps recently came before Mr. W. Tyrrell, district judge of Allahabad. The petitioner, who is the paymaster sergeant of H.M.'s 2-22nd regiment, stationed at Allahabad, prayed for a divorce from his wife on the ground of her adultery with the co-respondent, who is a sergeant major in charge of the Allahabad rest camp; also that the latter be made to pay the sum of Rs.100 as damages, in addition to the costs of the case. A decree nisi of dissolution of marriage was granted, with the amount of damages prayed for, together with costs against the co-respondent.—Times of India.

KASHMIR WINE.—The first cluster of French grapes from the Maharaja's vineyard was cut on the 3rd ult. At the sumptuous breakfast which followed the ceremony, toasts of the Queen-Empress, the Prince of Wales, the Viceroy, the Maharaja, and the French Republic, were drunk in sparkling wine, manufactured from Kashmir wild grapes by Monsieur Ermans, manager of the Maharaja's vineyard.—Pioneer.

THE Governor-General in Council has been pleased to authorise the affiliation of the Rajkum College in Nowgong to the Calcutta University, up to the first arts standard, with effect from January 1, 1880.

THE TRIBES OF THE PASSES.—The Maliks of the Khyber tribes, and the portion of the Shinwari tribe that holds Loargi and Lundi Kotal, will be summoned to Peshawur, early in the present month (September), to enable us to make arrangements with them for keeping open the pass and for securing to us a right of way through it. The proposal that will be made to them is somewhat as follows:—The Government will continue to recognise their independence, and a settlement will be made for the payment to them of a certain sum for tolls in the pass. Measures will also be taken by us, if necessary, for the protection and tranquility of the road; but the troops now stationed in the Khyber will be withdrawn as soon as these negotiations are concluded, and its occupation by the tribes will be respected so long as the pass is kept open by the tribes themselves without foreign interference. The allowance at present paid to the tribes are felt to be somewhat in excess of the actual requirements.—Times of India.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—The disengaged tonnage at date stood at 42,564 tons. London via Canal: The market closed weak at £2 2s. 6d. for rice or wheat; £2 10s. to £2 12s. 6d. for jute; £3 for hides; £3 5s. for tea, &c. For London via Cape. The market closed quiet but steady at £1 12s. 6d. for rice or wheat; £2 2s. 6d. to £2 5s. for linseed; £2 5s. to £2 7s. 6d. for rape, poppy; and £2 2s. 6d. for jute. For Liverpool via Suez Canal.—Quotation: Rice or wheat, £2 5s.; measurement and oils, £3 5s. For Liverpool via Cape: £1 16s. 3d. to £1 17s. 6d. for rice or wheat respectively; £2 for linseed; £2 2s. 6d. for rape; and £1 17s. 6d. for jute. The market closed quiet but steady at these quotations.—Englishman.

TELEGRAMS FROM BURMA.—Reports, apparently well founded, come from Mandalay to the effect that the Queen-mother and one of her daughters have been accused of liaisons with some of the Court officials. Thirty arrests are said to have been made, and it is rumoured that executions in the palace have recommenced. The new Revenue Act appears to be causing much excitement in British Burma. The incidence of taxes imposed by it is said to be in some cases 70 per cent. above the old rates. An indignation meeting to protest against it has been held at Moulmein, and was largely attended by Burmans.—Times.

THE HEAVY RAIN.—The heavy rain which has done so disastrous an effect at Naini Tal has done much damage in other parts of the country. The Oude and Rohilkund line is interrupted near Moradabad. While thus deluging a great part of Upper India, the cyclonic vortex has almost entirely avoided the districts where ruin is most wanted.—Times Telegram.

REMARKS OF WIDOWS.—A society has been formed "for aiding Hindu widows in contracting marriages." There will be a secretary in each of the principal towns of India, viz., Lahore, Agra, Calcutta, Bombay, &c., and it will be the duty of the secretaries to keep two confidential registers; one for recording the names and particulars of such widows as may communicate their wishes for marriage (either direct or through their guardians) to one of the secretaries, and the other for those of such gentlemen as may be willing to contract marriage with widows. These registers, the prospectus states, will not be shown, nor the name of any person entered therein communicated, to any but those who may be the proved helpers of the cause, or whose names may be recorded therein. International and inter-caste marriages and reforms in marriage customs generally will also be encouraged by this society, hence candidates for registration are told that they should state distinctly whether they wish to be married in their own caste (in which case the caste should be specified), or in any other caste.

THE MADRAS RAINFALL.—According to the astronomer, the total quantity of rain collected from Jan. 1 to August 20 this year is 15in., the average due for the same period being 13'2in.—Bombay Gazette.

THE OOTACAMUND MUNICIPALITY.—An account of a very pretty quarrel comes from Ootacamund, where the municipality insist on demanding licence tax from the Commander in Chief and Staff, and which the Commander in Chief declines to pay. Last year the matter came to the magistrate's court, and the officers were forced to pay up. Now there seems to be a determination to proceed against Sir Neville Chamberlain. This licence tax was introduced in 1871. When the present Commander in Chief came out he objected on principle to paying for leave to exercise his profession; he put it as rather extraordinary that the Madras Government should have allowed the municipalities virtually to say, "We don't care about your getting Queen's orders; you must pay us first for leave to obey them." The Madras Government passed an order last year exempting military officers from licence tax and tax on chargers, &c., but the Ooty municipality say the order is not law; they insist on payment.—Bombay Gazette.

HEALTH OF THE ARMY.—The table published in the last issue of the Fort St. George Gazette showing the prevalence and mortality of the different classes of diseases in each of the military divisions shows the following results:—In the Presidency Division the ratio per 1,000 of mean strength admitted into hospital was 1,736'23; of those who died 12'96. In Mysor, the respective figures were 1,724'77 and 13'21; Hyderabad, 1,434'40 and 13'50; in Burma, 1,237'11 and 23'42; in depots, 1,075'41 and 18'10; on the line of march 653'33 and 40.—Madras Times.

PUBLIC BENEFACTORS.—In the statement of works of public utility constructed by private individuals at their own cost during the year 1879-80 we find the largest sum that was given was Rs.20,000 by Ramasawmy Mudelly for the construction of lying-in-hospital wards at the Monegar Choultry. In the Madura taluq Vellyan Chetty of Thannaum constructed a chuttrum with a building of stone in the centre, surrounded with verrandahs with tiled roofs, in the road leading from Tirupatoot to Avadyar Covil, at a cost of Rs.15,000. The inhabitants of Srivilleputur in the Tinnevely district spent Rs.5,424 on the erection of a market of brick and chunam. In the same district Sankara Subbien and Ramaiyar spent Rs.3,000 on a chuttrum in the Ambasamudram taluq. In the same taluq a lady named Mahalatchimi, built a chuttrum at the cost of Rs.2,000, and in the Tenkari taluk Mahajanam of Karugolam, spent Rs.5,000 on a similar object. In the Tenkasi taluq Rs.2,000 was given for the erection of a chuttrum by Tiru Anavarathum Pillai.—Ibid.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM AND THE LADIES.—Mrs. Barlow, the wife of the commissioner of the Neilgherries, has issued the following note:—"Madame,—It is proposed by a few of the ladies of Madras to give a farewell entertainment to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos and the Ladies Grenville early in November next, consisting of a dinner to one hundred and twenty (that being the largest number possible to entertain), followed by a soiree, to which the whole of Madras society will be invited. The dinner party will comprise the Duke's family and suite, with all ladies subscribing, and their husbands. Gentlemen whose wives are absent from Madras will be privileged to join as subscribers, and, as such, to be included in the dinner party. It is estimated that there will be fifty subscribers, contributing Rs.100 each. In the event of any balance remaining unexpended it will be divisible among the subscribers."—Times of India.

THE LATE MR. MAHOMED YUSUF SAIB BAHADUR.—We regret to record the death, on Wednesday evening, of Mr. Mahomed Yusuf Saib Bahadur, Presidency magistrate. The deceased gentleman was one of the few Mahomedans who have succeeded in attaining to a position of influence and trust in the Government service. He began life in a comparatively humble way. As an interpreter in the Boyapetta Court, under Col. Colbeck, he displayed so much intelligence and energy that it led to his appointment as a munsiff. He subsequently rose to the grade of deputy collector, and was serving in that capacity in Trichinopoly, when the late Lord Hobart, who evinced a great anxiety to see Mahomedans of ability and education advanced in the service, appointed him to fill a vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. T. G. Clarke and the consequent promotion of the other magistrates.—Madras Times.

THE COMMISSARY GENERALSHIP.—We are told that the Duke of Buckingham has nominated Lieut. Col. Thomas Weldon, chief magistrate of police for the town of Madras, as Col. Scott-Elliott's successor as commissary general.—Madras Mail.

COL. GODFREY CLARKE, the new adjutant general of Madras, has arrived from England.

PROMOTION IN THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—A correspondent at Aurungabad writes:—"A detachment of the 4th Cavalry, H.C., under the command of Col. Eustace Hill, has left here for Mominabad to relieve the 3rd. The 4th Cavalry, under the command of that popular officer, Col. A. A. Johnson, is as gallant a regiment as any going. Col. Eustace Hill is the second in command. Cursory glancing over the Army List the other day I came across an account of Col. Hill's war services, which is as long as Homer's list of the ships. This brave and tried old soldier has put in thirty-two years' service; he has been in actions innumerable; he has fought against Arabs, and Rohillas, and Sikhs, and Pathans. He has served in Madras, in Oude, in the Punjab, and in the Deccan. He had the good fortune to command a brigade when only a young lieutenant, and he has now the misfortune of not commanding even a regiment, when he is a lieutenant colonel, and one of the few senior officers in the contingent to boot. Col. Hill's field services were eulogised by Lords Canning, and Elgin, and Clyde, and by Sir Hugh Rose. Chancing to come across some papers the other day, I find that the highest testimony is borne by Colonel Hill's superiors to his zeal, energy, judgment, horsemanship, dash, and gallantry. One general reports very highly on Colonel Hill's qualifications as a cavalry officer, and states that there is hardly any officer in the contingent who can show such claims, qualifications, and services as Colonel Hill. Another general speaks of him as possessing considerable pluck and dash, as being the best rider in the cavalry, and as possessing many qualifications that go to make a good cavalry commandant. And yet in spite of his seniority, his strong claims, his valuable field services, his high qualifications, his excellent recommendations, an adverse fate has decreed that this gallant but unfortunate soldier should not get a command. My advocacy of Colonel Hill's claims is uninterested and impartial."—Bombay Gazette.

A NEW DEITY.—A poor villager of a part of Kattywar, near which the Bhownager Gondal line now passes, had, it is stated, been afflicted for a long time with remittent fever, and no end of idols-worship and penance and other such form of propitiating the devil arrested the malady. At length a friendly neighbour advised him to approach the Bhoot in the newest shape in which the former had seen him recently taking his daily run in that part of the province, chafing and fuming. The fever-stricken villager consequently travelled a distance from home, and at sight of the steam-engine fell on his knees, tendered an offering of corn and sweets, and extolled its might. The devil was appeased, the worshipper found himself rid of the malaria, probably by the change of air, which it would have never entered the head of his vaid to order him to take as a hygienal agency, and the steam-engine is added to the long list of articles in which the Indian sees, adores, and trembles at his god.—Ibid.

THE 2-24TH FOOT.—The 2-24th Foot was, on its arrival, landed at the Sassoon Dock, and despatched by two special trains to Puna. The following is a list of the officers:—Lieut. Col. H. Deyacher, C.B., Major G. Path, C.M.G., Capt. Farquhar, Brigadier Major C. Y. Bromhead, Capt. J. J. Harvey, A. M. Williams, Brigadier Major G. Bromhead, R.E., Capt. G. J. Bumster, F. J. Huldiday, Lieut. G. McLagan, Lieut. and Adjutant C. J. Troover, Lieuts. H. Dolben, A. M. Smyly, A. W. Birch, A. C. Worelege, Second Lieuts. P. J. Armitage, A. L. Kelly, C. Surgrave, A. T. D. Neave, J. J. Burnett, Paymaster C. B. Griffiths, Quartermaster J. Tigar, Lieut. J. Stewart, 1st West India Regiment.—Ibid.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM ENGLAND.—The troopship Euphrates arrived off the port of Karachi Sept. 4 and was anchored outside, as the commander refused to enter the port on the plea of heavy draught, twenty-four feet three inches, though the master attendant assured him she could be safely berthed. The disembarkation was effected on Sunday outside, and the vessel cleared by 5 p.m. The Sind Civil and Military Gazette denounces what it terms the fatuity of the order that the Euphrates should be moored outside the harbour for the purpose of discharging her troops at a cost of so much expense, exposure, and inconvenience. The 98th were landed under superintendence of Captain Elliot, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General and the Master Attendant, Captain Parker. The steam launch, in which Captain Parker proceeded to the troopship, shipped a heavy sea which nearly capsized the boat. Captain Parker was compelled to put back an go in the cutter Nerbudda. The Euphrates arrived in Bombay harbour on Sept. 9, with a detachment of H.M.'S 61st Foot. She left Portsmouth on August 6, Queenstown on the 9th, Malta on the 19th, Port Said on the 23rd, and Suez on the 24th. There was no casualties on the voyage, but several of the men suffered from the intense heat in the Red Sea. The following are the names of the officers:—Lieut. Col. W. Blackett; Capt. F. J. Curtin and E. Law; Lieut. W. M. F. Trotman, instructor of musketry; Lieut. and Adjutant W. C. St. J. Partridge; Second Lieuts. C. J. Vines, H. Capel Cure, and the Hon. H. H. S. Addington; Paymaster W. J. E. G. Sutherland; Quartermaster J. Wilson; Surgeon Major F. W. Wade, and Surgeon H. J. Michael. The troops disembarked in transport barges during the day, at the Sassoon Dock, and proceeded to the barracks at Colaba. With the troops that disembarked was one Private Kennedy of her Majesty's 2-24th Foot, who, when the troopship Orontes was leaving Malta, jumped overboard and made for land; his object being, it is supposed, to get back to England. He was, however, apprehended by a police party that was out boating; and on the arrival of the Euphrates at Malta was handed over to the commanding officer of the 61st Foot. He was brought down under arrest, and will be sent on to his own regiment.

BOMBAY BRANCH ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At a meeting held on August 24, a letter from the Government of Holland was read forwarding plates, plans, and tracings of the ruins of Borobodour in Java. A paper on the "Dharmasindha" was read by the Rev. A. Bourquin.—Times of India.

THE PARSEES AND GENERAL ROBERTS'S VICTORY.—The ninety-eighth anniversary of the Udaysett's Fire Temple, the oldest place of worship belonging to the Parsees of Bombay, was celebrated on Sept. 5. Mr. Heerjee Ardesheer Dadysett, the managing trustee of the Fire Temple, had invited the whole of the Parsee community to be present, and a large number of them took part in the proceedings. Dastoor Sorabjee Moolapheroz, the high priest of the Kudmee section of the community, in the course of the ceremony preached a sermon and offered a special thanksgiving for the success achieved by the British near Kandahar. Another special prayer breathing the most loyal sentiments to the Crown terminated the ceremonies.—Ibid.

THE BOMBAY LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—The following gentlemen have been appointed members of the Bombay Legislative Council:—From August 30, the Hon. Col. C. J. Merriman, C.S.I., R.E.; the Hon. Morarjee Goculdass, C.I.E.; Agha Ali Shah; Rai Bahadur Gopal Hari Deshmukh. From Sept. 5, the Hon. Col. W. C. Anderson.

THE Himalaya, with the 77th Regiment, arrived at Bombay, September 10, and the regiment was to immediately proceed to Deolalee. The following are the expected arrivals and departures of the troopships:—Malabar.—Arrives in Bombay on September 14; and leaves for Portsmouth on November 5. Fumna.—Arrives in Bombay on September 19; and leaves for Portsmouth on November 9. Orontes.—Leaving Natal on October 1, arrives in Bombay on the 21st; and leaves for Portsmouth on the 31st following.—Times of India.

DEATH OF MAJOR MURRAY.—The death is announced at Poona, on the 2nd ult., of Major Patrick Murray, aged fifty-four years. Major P. Murray served with the Bombay column army of the Punjab in 1848-49; at the siege and surrender of Mooltan, including the attack on the suburbs, storm of the city, breach, and capture of the town; battle of Goozerat; surrender of the Sikh army at Rawul Pindi; and the final pursuit of the Afghans to the entrance of the Khyber Pass (medal and two clasps); served in the Land Transport Corps in Persia at the end of the war in 1857; as adjutant of the 3rd Belooch Regiment against the rebels at Nuggur Parkur in 1859, driving from and occupying their position in the hills after the night attack on the Kutcherry on June 20, and subsequent pursuit and destruction of the rebels.—Times of India.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL.—The important appointment of adjutant general of the Bombay Army, vacant by the death of General Brooke, has been conferred upon one of the Horse Guards staff, Col. A. L. Annesley, half pay, assistant adjutant general. He joined the army on July 21, 1854, and served with the 11th Hussars in the Crimea; commanded the regiment from July, 1873, to April, 1878, when he was appointed aide de camp to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. He joined the Horse Guards in November, 1878, his date of rank as colonel is May 18, 1877.—Ibid.

THE KUTCH REGENCY.—The retirement of Mr. Manibhai Jasbhoy from the Kutch territory, and the somewhat abrupt withdrawal from the capital city of Jalam Singh, brother of the queen-mother and a member of the Regency, mark a change of considerable importance, almost approaching to a revolution, in the administration of Kutch. The resolution of the Government of Bombay to displace the Dewan and the members of the Kutch Regency is on the face of it a bold, and, perhaps, significant step, but we are not yet in possession of sufficient facts to justify us in pronouncing an opinion one way or the other.—Times of India.

GAZETTED OFFICER.—With the sanction of the Government of India, his Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased, as a special case, to confer upon Mr. J. C. D'Agniar, head assistant in the office of the Commissary General, Bombay, the privileges of a gazetted officer.

COLONEL BARTON has changed his mind and does not intend to leave India just at present. We understand that Mr. Nugent will still have the reversion of the appointment of political agent in Kattyawar.—Times of India.

A KARACHI paper regrets to announce the death, at Karachi, on August 31, of Lieut. D. M'L. Farrington, of the 63rd (West Suffolk).

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

ROYAL ENGINEERS AND THE CIVIL PENSION CODE.

THE following rules have received the approval of the Secretary of State, and are published in the Gazette of India for general information:—

I.—The following rules of the Civil Pension Code is made applicable to officers of Royal Engineers serving in the Public Works Department:—Section 65, Rule 6.—After the age of fifty-five years, no military or naval officer shall be appointed to a new office in civil employment, or shall be permitted to retain any such office which he has held for five years and upwards, except in special cases, which are to be referred to the decision of the Secretary of State. II.—Officers of the Royal Engineers, who have attained, or hereafter may attain, the rank of general officers, must vacate their appointments in the Public Works Department; but they will be eligible for reappointment as Chief Engineers, Class I, or in posts carrying that rank. This rule will be brought into force two years from the present date. III.—No chief engineer of the Corps of Royal Engineers shall, without reappointment, hold the same post for more than five years. This rule, in the case of officers who, on their appointment to that rank, received notice of the probable issue of this order, will take effect from the date they joined their present posts. In other cases the rule will take effect from the date of these orders. IV.—The foregoing rules are applicable to officers of Royal Engineers who hold the post of secretary or of deputy secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department.

THE MAIWAND DISASTER.

THE official despatches of Generals Primrose, Burrows, and Nuttall, giving an account of the Khushk-i-Nakhud disaster, have been published in India, and their substance is telegraphed to the Standard as follows:—

“General Primrose reports that the political resident urged that an active support should be given to the Wali, who was then with his troops at Girishk. He recommended, therefore, that a brigade of infantry, a regiment of cavalry, and a battery of horse artillery, should be despatched to the Helmund. On July 1 the Government sanctioned this step, but would not allow the force to cross the Helmund, nor would they permit the weakening of the Khelat-i-Ghilzai garrison, or of the line of communications, but decided that troops from the reserve should be pushed forward by forced marches. The force started on July 3, leaving only 2,463 troops remaining in garrison at Kandahar. General Primrose, however, considered his position there to be perfectly safe, as three regiments of infantry, one of cavalry, and a battery of artillery were advancing to reinforce Kandahar, and would arrive on the 23rd. When the 4th N.I. and some of the 28th N.I. had arrived he arranged to send forward 230 rank and file, with a convoy of commissariat stores; but General Burrows' defeat occurred before this plan could be carried out. He, however, had forwarded to General Burrows the full instructions which he had received from Simla, to the effect that he must not, according to his own judgment, and must, above all things, prevent Ayub Khan from slipping past Kandahar towards Ghuzni without being attacked. General Burrows' despatch says that in order to prevent this it was incumbent upon him to intercept Ayub at Maiwand or Khushk-i-Nakhud. Owing to the mutiny of the Wali's army the political influence of the British was at an end, and every man's hand was against us. It was, therefore, impossible to procure trustworthy information, but learning that the enemy was making for Maiwand, he marched at 6.30 a.m. on the 27th of July for that place, encumbered by an enormous quantity of ordnance, commissariat stores, and baggage. This was unavoidable, as the hostile state of the country rendered it impossible for him to leave anything behind in safety, and he could not divide his already too weak force by leaving a detachment as baggage guard at Kushk-i-Nakhud. After a march of eight miles, the enemy was discovered five miles off. The force advanced and the baggage was placed in a village a mile a-head of the point at which the enemy had been first seen. The infantry then deployed on higher ground in front, with the guns in the centre and the cavalry on the left, covering the movement with two horse artillery guns and a troop of cavalry. The enemy numbered about 25,000 men. Lieut. MacLaine's advanced guns began the battle at 11.45 a.m., the artillery lying down for three hours. Our artillery made excellent practice, the cavalry held that of the enemy in check, and the infantry kept up a steady fire on the Ghazis on our right. Between two and three the fire of the enemy's guns slackened, and swarms of Ghazis advanced rapidly towards our centre. Hitherto the casualties among our infantry had not been very heavy, and as the men were firing very steadily, and the guns were sweeping the ground with case shot, the general felt confident as to the result. Our fire, however, failed to check the advance of the Ghazis, who, making good their rush, seized the two most advanced guns. Hitherto the conduct of the troops, with the exception of two companies of Jacob's Rifles, which caused great anxiety by their unsteadiness early in the fight, had been splendid; but at the critical moment, when a firm resistance might have achieved victory, the infantry gave way, and, commencing from the left, rolled up like a wave to the right. After vainly endeavouring to rally them, I myself, having no staff officer left, went to bring up the cavalry, but the terrible artillery fire from which they had suffered had so shaken them that General Nuttall was unable to give effect to my orders. All was now over, and I rode back to the infantry to save them from complete annihilation. Their retreat was effected without much loss for a distance of three miles. No vigorous pursuit was made, but after daylight the force was fired upon from every village through which it passed until it reached Koheran. The guns were lost because Lieut. MacLaine waited to fire another round after he had received orders to limber up and retire. General Nuttall says that Lieut. MacLaine, with two guns and a troop of Scind Horse, began the fight without being authorised. Orderlies were despatched to recall him, but they arrived too late. ‘About 2.30,’ he continues, ‘I perceived that the infantry were yielding, and therefore ordered the cavalry to form line and charge the rush of Ghazis, but I must bitterly record that, although ably seconded by the officers, only portions of the 3rd Light Cavalry and the 3rd Scind Horse formed up, and the charge was not delivered home. All subsequent attempts by myself and officers to induce the men to rally and face the enemy failed. Captain Slaide, however, turned round twice or thrice, firing rounds during the retreat.’”

The Viceroy condemns the despatches as meagre and unsatisfactory, and as leaving the Government in ignorance of the true facts of the case, and the real reasons of the reverse. The Government will wait General Roberts' report before deciding on further course of action. The Viceroy warmly commends the behaviour of the artillery and the 66th. General Haines says that the despatches are eminently unsatisfactory, as giving no facts regarding the precautions taken to ascertain the strength and position of Ayub, and as completely failing to explain the reasons of the disaster. He believes that victory was possible had the infantry stood firm, and that the disaster was intensified by the demoralisation of the cavalry and the precipitate retreat. The cantonments of Kandahar ought never to have been abandoned on the false report of annihilation.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

It might almost seem desirable, to anyone strictly regardless of the fitness of things, that the promotion of the late able Director of Indian Railways to that secretariat which has found in him the right man in the right place should have been delayed a year, until the majority of his annual reports on Indian railways had been attained. As it is, we receive his twentieth annual report, with its accustomed clear summary of the immense results attained by the development of the railway system of India, of which the Secretary of State, in his Budget speech, was able to speak so contentedly, and with such reliance in its future. The Indian railways furnish annually abundance of reports. We continually present our readers with statistics, with reports of controversies as to gauges, or directions of lines. The accounts of fracas in the first-class carriages, the complaints of third-class passengers about the inconveniences and incivilities to which they are exposed, occupy oftentimes as many columns in the Indian journals as they are permitted to do at home in the dull season. But every year that opening up of the country, that development of its resources, and, we may add, that breaking down of prejudice and ignorance which the advent of the iron horse ever brings with it, is placed in a most readable narrative before all who care to know what our rule has done and is doing for the benefit of India. The natives who, in Kathiawar, recently offered worship to the locomotive, seen for the first time, bore an unconscious testimony to the actual and potential benefits that the progress of the railways, recorded by Mr. Juland Danvers, is annually multiplying throughout fresh regions. These railways, at the commencement of the year 1879, included 8,216 miles, of which 6,044 were in the hands of guaranteed companies and 2,172 under direct State management. During the year 395½ miles, including the section of the Kandahar line, to which we lately referred, have been completed. Of this latter achievement we need not speak further save to quote Mr. Danvers' words:—"While fulfilling the primary object of a strategical work, it must not be overlooked that a line which penetrates a country where safe and regular communication has never been known will stimulate trade and agricultural industry, and thus serve important commercial and agricultural purposes." The other extensions include the line from Ahmedabad to Pahlunpore, a continuation of the Rajputana and Malwa line, an addition to the Sindia State line south of the Chambal river, the completion of the Patna and Gya line, and an addition to the Gachwar of Baroda's railway. The completion of the railway communication with the French capital of Pondicherry is justly claimed as an example of expeditious execution. Turning to what is in progress, or contemplation, we learn that on the North West Frontier energetic measures have been taken to continue the Punjab Northern Railway to Peshawur across the Indus at Attock. The bridge which is in course of construction at this place will have a total length, without approaches, of 1,420ft., divided into five spans, two of 314ft. and three of 264ft. each. The report says that it is expected that the line will be so far advanced as to be ready for use up to the left bank of the Indus in November, and from the right bank to Peshawur in January next. These are expectations which may probably be somewhat postponed, but there is no date assigned for the completion of that bridge, which is the necessary completion for every purpose of the Punjab and Indus Valley Railway communication. This is almost the most essential work of the sort, although the bridge over the Ganges at Benares will be the largest in India, consisting of seven spans of 416ft., and the new Nerbudda Bridge is greatly wanted, and the unavoidable delays have been productive of much inconvenience. Next year will probably see connection made between Ajmere and Indore and the G.I.P. Railway, as well as the completion of the Rajputana State line, but the extension from Moradabad to Saharunpur is in abeyance. The enlightened Begum of Bhopal has offered to pay fifty lakhs as an investment in a railway to her capital, and this line and the extension of the South Indian into Travancore will undoubtedly be matters of early accomplishment. The importance of the latter is shown by General Green's remark, that had the South Indian, with the proposed extension, been in existence complete in 1876-78 the mortality of the two last famine years might not have been so great, as the Carnatic would have been in communication with a province where the rains never fail, and where the wet cultivation is carried on without artificial aid. The delays in the full development of the much-needed railways in Assam are to be regretted, both in the interests of that province and of Bengal. The easier importation of coolies, and of what may be more properly termed settlers, the exportation of coal to Northern Bengal, are immediate and prominent results which will follow on the completion of the projected lines, and if private enterprise is insufficient Government aid should not be withheld. The table which shows the existing and sanctioned lines does not include those which are desired or contemplated, but even without these, the mileage, both of what is complete and what is not, is remarkable. The total length of line sanctioned is 9,626 miles, which being compared with 8,611 opened on December 31, leaves 1,015 to be finished. During the year the working lines yielded a net revenue of £5,372,596; the guaranteed lines returning £5,062,188, a very slight increase over the previous year. The gross receipts of the State railways, which, as the director points out, are "for the most part political lines recently opened, or small branches with little traffic on them, and expensive to work, but serviceable as feeders," were £1,465,284, and the expenses £1,155,416. The total net earnings divided over the capital outlay, which, up to the end of the official year, was £123,124,514, yielded a return at the rate of 4·7 per cent. per annum. The guaranteed lines earned at the rate of 5·4 per cent. per annum on their capital, which is made up of £58,353,477 of guaranteed stock, £4,751,450 of debentures, £3,922,458 of debenture stock, and above £50,000 not bearing interest. The stock and debentures were held on December 31 by 63,290 persons, of whom only 301 were registered in India. These are, perhaps, well-known facts, at least in a general way, but the magnitude of English investments in India, and the requisite remittances, can never be kept out of sight. The traffic of the year reviewed compares favourably with that of the previous year, despite the languid condition of trade, but the increase of passengers, especially of the third-class, is remarkable. It will doubtless be an object kept before the minds of those who assemble in the railway conference to do away with any just cause of complaint, as they are resolute to do with regard to high and deterrent fares as affecting the third-class passengers. We saw with pain also that in the transport of the troops, which in its complete success reflects so much credit on the officials of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi line, some of the soldiers on their long journey suffered much from great neglect to supply water. The military service rendered by the railways in the prosecution of the Afghan campaign occupies a place of pride in the records of the year, and Mr. Ross has earned something more than thanks in words. The railways of India serve as a means of strength as well as improvement of defence of her borders, and as police to repress the promotion of discord and sedition, which will take long years to eradicate, and they are, moreover, among the most potent factors of that insurance against famine, which is not to be accomplished by hoarding money in the Treasury, but by investing it in public works, of which Mr. Danvers can, in the close of his twentieth report, say with truth:—"The result of the year's operations may, upon the whole, be regarded as satisfactory. Fair progress has been made in the execution of new and valuable lines of communication, and, notwithstanding the state of trade, the traffic, taken in the aggregate, shows an improvement. The return upon the large capital outlay which has been incurred is increasing year by year as the lines are completed and the traffic is developed. If sound and economical principles are applied to their management, not only will the moral and material well-being of the country be advanced, but a fertile source of revenue will be secured to the State."

HOME NEWS.

RELIEF OF SOLDIERS' FAMILIES.—The Portsmouth Soldiers' Families Compassionate Fund, of which Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar is president, and the general committee is composed of the staff and departmental officers of the garrison, has just issued its second annual statement of accounts. The object of the fund is to assist destitute widows and orphans of soldiers arriving in troopships, and the wives and children of soldiers passing through the garrison for embarkation or on disembarkation who may require help; and it is a very credible circumstance that, notwithstanding the many demands upon the fund by the widows and orphans of soldiers who find themselves deposited upon the trooping jetty without a friend in the world, they have during the past year been almost exclusively met by donations from the canteens of the five Indian troopships. Major Tulloch, D.A.Q.M.G., who acts as secretary, announces a balance in favour of the fund of £61 3s. 5d., and, as the greater portion of the subscriptions emanate from the navy, the committee have deemed it right to contribute £10 towards the Atlanta Relief Fund.

THE NAWAB OF BAHAWALPUR.—His Highness the Nawab of Bahawalpur, who has received the education of an English gentleman and has imbibed all his love of sport, has commissioned the Indian Co-operative Agency of London to provide him with a steam yacht for the use on the many excellent canals which his Highness has had constructed by his staff of English and native engineers. The building of the yacht has been entrusted to Henry Tipping and Co., of Portsmouth. It measures 30ft. in length, 6ft. 9in. in breadth, 3ft. in depth, and is expected, with its complement of passengers and stores on board, not to exceed 1ft. 8in. in mean draught. The hull is formed of steel, with teak lining and deck. The cabin, which will be fitted with ice wells and luxurious appointments, is 9ft. long, and is also built of teak; while the funnel, rails, and stanchions will be nickel plated. The little craft will be propelled by means of twin screws, worked by a pair of inverted direct-acting engines, which are built on each side of the boiler, a little abaft the smoke-box. The cylinders are 5½ in. in diameter, with a stroke of the same length, and working up to 300 revolutions. The boiler, which is to be heated by wood, will have a pressure of 120lb., and the engines will be worked at a high rate of expansion, the cut-off in the slide being at half-stroke. The indicated power will be 20 horses, and the speed about 10 knots.

Compared with last week, this price shows an advance of 1-16d. The same amount will be tendered for next Wednesday.

ADDRESS TO EARL LYTTON.—The corporation of Hertford, at their last quarterly meeting, decided to send a congratulatory address to Earl Lytton on his return from India, and the following, beautifully engrossed and illuminated, was presented to his lordship:—"To the Right Hon. the Earl of Lytton, G.C.B., G.K., S.I., C.I.E.,—We, the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Hertford in council assembled, beg to welcome your lordship on your return to your native country. We have observed with much interest your lordship's career in India, and have much appreciated your efforts towards the establishment of more satisfactory relations with Afghanistan. We consider that you have evinced great ability, tact, and capacity in the government of India in times of considerable difficulty. We venture to hope that you will long continue a resident in the county with which your name has been so long and so honourably associated." (Signed by the mayor and town clerk.) To this Lord Lytton has sent the following reply:—"Knebworth, Sept. 21.—Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your obliging letter of the 20th inst., forwarding to me from the mayor and corporation of Hertford an address expressive of their interest in the labours of the Government of India under my administration, and their approval of my efforts to establish our relations with Afghanistan upon a solid and satisfactory footing. This address is an honour which I receive with the liveliest satisfaction, and I beg you to be so good as to convey to the mayor and corporation of Hertford the grateful expression of my very sincere and cordial thanks for the assurances contained in it. I highly value their generous recognition of the past, and I warmly reciprocate their friendly reference to the future. The work done by the Government of India during the last four years will, I trust, be more generally regarded, in proportion as it becomes more generally known, with the kindly appreciation which renders this address so gratifying, not to myself only, but also to those able servants of the Queen who have been associated with me in that work. Meanwhile, you will greatly oblige me by communicating to the municipality of Hertford the assurance that the prospect of settled residence in a county to which I am attached by many ties of friendship as well as of kindred is to me a pleasure sensibly enhanced by the welcome evidence contained in the address I have had the honour to receive from them that, during my absence from this country in the service of our sovereign, I have not forfeited the sympathy and goodwill so flatteringly expressed in that address. With this request, I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient humble servant,—Lytton. To Charles Elton Longmore, Esq., &c., town clerk of Hertford."

UPPER ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—A circular has been issued in which the directors state that, having regard to the very heavy drain which the annual redemption of the Ten per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures entails upon the company's funds, they have made arrangements for the issue of £60,000 of 6 per cent. A part only of the above is now offered, viz., £18,000, being the exact sum that has been paid off the existing 10 per cent. mortgage, which consequently stands at £37,000. The new bonds will be issued for £100 each, and will be secured by a first mortgage on the company's estate, subject only to the above £37,000, the current redemptions of which, by annual drawings, will totally extinguish the debt in the year 1887, when the bonds now created will be the sole first charge upon the property of the company. The bonds are offered to the shareholders at £90 per £100.

DEVALA MOYAR GOLD MINING COMPANY.—The first general meeting of this company was held on Tuesday at the New Exchange-buildings, George-yard, Lombard-street. There was a crowded attendance. Sir David Salomons presided and stated that the conveyance from the Moyar Salomons to the company had been completed and was now on its way to India for registration. Mr. Brough Smyth and the board were making every inquiry respecting the best machinery. Mr. Smyth was going to Australia to secure a practical mining staff, and would also sound the markets there with a view of selling there some of the company's sub-sections. To work the Rhodes reef they considered that it would be better to have an auxiliary company, and they were making arrangements under most favourable conditions with that object. The board would be the same as in this company, and Mr. Smyth would be the engineer. He then introduced Mr. Brough Smyth (formerly resident mining engineer to the Indian Government), who, after a brief reference to the physical character of the country known as the South East Wynaad, a portion of which is comprised in the auriferous areas owned by the company, stated that he had every confidence that quartz mining operations could be safely conducted throughout the year. They might safely assume that, as regarded the company's properties, and, indeed, in the Wynaad generally, the question of water supply would never seriously occupy the attention of any practical man. He first visited Devála in August, 1878. His object at the time was to make a general, and not a particular, examination of the country, but he did give some examination of those reefs where works had been carried on by Europeans, and the results gave him confidence respecting the reefs more immediately in the vicinity of Devála. Of the outcrops on the Stathearn and Maryland estates he could speak very highly. Mr. Smyth described the results of the trials made by him, and spoke highly of the Rhodes reef, which ought to yield a profit of £68,000 per annum. He then referred to the existence, as he had seen, of gold on other parts of the company's estates, and afterwards observed that the confidence which he first felt had been more than justified by recent explorations. He congratulated all who had the welfare of this great empire at heart on the certain and speedy development of a new industry in that part of which it lately presented such awful misery and desolation as only the failure in the food resources of a country could produce. The utmost encouragement would be given to miners by the Government of India. Sir William Robinson said he had been connected for nearly a third of a century with the district in which the company's operations would be carried on, and he could endorse all that Mr. Smyth had stated. The Chairman, in reply to a question, said the company had sold no part of its property to the Provident Company, and there was no connection between them. In reply to other questions, Mr. Smyth said he agreed with Sir W. Robinson that no one-twentieth part of the area over which the auriferous reefs extended had yet been prospected. Anything over 2 dwts. would, under favourable conditions—and, of course, good economical management—give a profit. He trusted that within nine or ten months from now they would have the machinery at work. Votes of thanks were passed to the chairman and directors, Mr. Smyth, and Mr. Rhodes, and the proceedings then terminated.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA, AND CHINA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors report a gross revenue for the half-year ended with June 30 of £173,020, an increase of £22,912. The net profit for that period was £95,535, and, after making allowance for the interim dividend of 1½ per cent. already paid, the directors recommend a further similar distribution, as well as a bonus of 1s. per share. The sum of £35,610 is to be carried forward.

NATIONAL BANK OF INDIA.—The report for the half-year ended June 30 last states that the net profits, after making provision for bad and doubtful debts, amount to £19,037, which, with the balance brought forward, makes a total of £21,050. From this sum the directors have paid an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum and carried forward £9,419. The directors having come to the conclusion that the funds appropriated to the Hong Kong branch can be more profitably utilised elsewhere, have taken steps to close that branch. The business of the bank in China will, therefore, for the present be confined to Shanghai.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—In view of the meeting to be held on October 13, the report has been issued. It shows that the net profits realised during the past six months amount to £10,514, which sum, added to the balance of £551, brought forward from the previous half-year, gives a total at credit of the profit and loss account of £11,065, which sum the directors propose to deal with as follows:—£8,440, for payment of a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum (free of income-tax), payable on and after October 22 next, £2,000, to be credited to the doubtful debt account, leaving a balance of £625, to be carried forward to next account.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—At an extraordinary general meeting, to be held on Oct. 20, the directors will recommend an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended June 30 last.

DATE COFFEE COMPANY.—The directors announce that owing to the disturbed state of the country at Bussorah, and for other reasons, Mr. Mare, the company's engineer and manager, has, with the approval of the board, made arrangements to manufacture at Karachi. Mr. Mare has secured the requisite premises at a cheaper rate than Mr. Henley calculated, and he states that he is satisfied he can manufacture at a less cost than that estimated by Mr. Henley. The whole of the works are progressing rapidly, and the first consignment will probably arrive in November, the whole of which is sold. The directors are further in a position to state that every day the demand for the coffee increases. The change of the place of manufacture from Bussorah to Karachi will, no doubt, be equally satisfactory to the shareholders as it is to the directors, as the latter place is in British territory, and considerably nearer England.

THE ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.—The

half-yearly general meeting was held on Monday at the Grosvenor Hall, Buckingham Palace-road. The Hon. Robert Wellesley Grosvenor, chairman of the committee of direction, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report said he was glad to state that it contained no reference to the subject of discounts, and although they had made a somewhat larger rate of profit in the past half-year than in the preceding six months, it contained the same general features as those which met with the practically unanimous approval of the shareholders six months ago. The sum of £26,014, which was recorded as the value of the premises in Ranelagh-road, works, &c., showed a large increase. The sum of £11,425 had recently been taken into account in the following circumstances:—Two years ago they purchased through the Bee Building Society the lease, having a trifle more than forty years to run, of certain premises adjoining, and now by direct communication forming part of their premises in Ranelagh-road. It would perhaps be more correct to say that the building society purchased the premises, because that society paid the money and would retain the security until the Army and Navy Co-operative Society redeemed the mortgage or repaid the building society the money, or repaid them £12,000 with accruing interest. This payment they undertook to make by annual payments of £1,060 spread over twenty years. In other words, they paid that amount for rent, but, as it included payments on account of principal as well as interest, it was obvious that the time must arrive when the value to the society of the premises must exceed the value of redeeming the mortgage, which was the liability. That time had arrived, and they had to include the whole value of the asset on the credit side of the account, the liability being included on the other side as part of the amount set down as due to creditors. That asset would decrease at the rate of £300 a year, but at the end of twenty years there would be £6,000 of it left, and the payment to the building society having then ceased, there would be nothing to set down on the other side of the account as due to creditors on that score. The second point he wished to draw their attention to was on the debit side—the item for deposit interest account, which had been increased since the last meeting from £30,000 to £40,000, and in connection with this item he referred to the more reasonable profits now asked by the retail trader and to the numerous co-operative institutions which had been recently started. The society had taken no trouble to push their trade, but, on the contrary, had taken one very serious step for its restriction, so that the competition he had referred to had not as yet affected them, and if they did not quarrel among themselves it probably never would, for they were working a better and richer vein of co-operation than was open to any of their rivals, being an Army and Navy Society in fact as well as in name. It was, however, necessary that they should keep liberal pace with the requirements of their supporters. To do so they had required, and would, he hoped, continue to require, additions to their working capital, and he impressed on them the immense advantage which accrued to those traders whose foresight was assisted by money in hand, by which enormous sums were saved. Referring to their contemplated action in regard to the accumulated profits, he said the pledge they gave at the last meeting was redeemed in the proposal before them in the report; it identified the accumulated profits with existing shareholders, and even divided those profits among them so far as was consistent with the exigencies of their business; and the committee were certainly of opinion that the shares of the society would be favourably affected in value so soon as they could be sold with the contingency which would henceforth attach to them. The contingency would be sold with the share; the bonus being payable to the representative of whoever was a shareholder at the time of his death. That was looking at the question from the point of view of those who desired to realise the value of their shares during their lifetime. Looking at the matter from the point of view of those who wished to keep their shares, he observed that, while a paramount object with them would be to reduce prices to the lowest possible limit, still profits would doubtless continue to be made; and there would be further bonuses to that which they were now offering. He who kept his shares would, therefore, receive during his lifetime 5 per cent. on his original investment, with any future bonuses which might be made. He then referred to the provident fund, which had been organised since their last meeting, to which all their regular employés contributed, and to the general approval which it had met with from their employés. Commissary General Gardiner seconded the motion, and expressed his satisfaction at the continued progress of the society, and his opinion that the remuneration of the directors and the managing directors should be increased from time to time. The report was carried after several successive amendments had been rejected.

THE LUCKNOW ANNIVERSARY DINNER.

The second annual dinner in commemoration of the entry into Lucknow of the force under Generals Havelock and Outram, on Sept. 25, 1857, was held on Saturday at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate-street. The chair was taken by Lieut. General Crommelin, C.B., Royal Engineers, and the other officers present were Major General Willis, C.B., late 84th Foot; Major General Sir Henry Havelock-Allen, V.C., C.B., M.P.; Major General Dodgson, C.B., late Bengal Infantry; Major General Gordon, C.B., late aide de camp to Brigadier General Neill; Col. G. D. Barker, 64th Foot; Col. W. W. Lynch, commanding 1st Battalion 10th Foot; Lieut. Col. Hastings, 62nd Foot; Col. Delafosse, C.B., commanding 101st Bengal Fusiliers; Lieut. Col. G. P. Blake, commanding Suffolk Yeomanry Cavalry, late military train; Major Graham Birch, late 1st Bengal European Light Cavalry; Major H. B. Savory, late 78th Highlanders; Captain P. L. Phipps, late 90th Light Infantry; Captain Robertson, late 78th Highlanders; Deputy Inspector General I. Gee, V.C., C.B., late 78th Highlanders; Deputy Inspector General Dominichetti, M.D., A.M.D.; Col. F. E. A. Chamier, Bombay Staff Corps, late aide de camp to General Sir James Outram, and Major Sir Harry Goodrick, late 90th Light Infantry.

The Chairman, in a few appropriate words, gave "Her Majesty the Queen Empress of India," which was enthusiastically received. This was followed by that of "the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family." The Chairman then rose, and amidst the most profound stillness, said: Gentlemen, my next toast, though it will, doubtless, give rise to strong emotions in the hearts of each of you, needs from me neither words of commendation or recommendation. It is "the tribute of a solemn thought on the Memory of our Departed Comrades, coupled with the names of our beloved commanders, Havelock, Outram, and Neill."

The toast was drunk in solemn silence.

Sir Henry Havelock-Allen next proposed "The Health of our Living though Absent Comrades who we wish with us." The gallant general said this was an occasion on which it was difficult for them, assembled there after a lapse of nearly a quarter of a century, not to feel emotions too deep for expression. The toast he had the honour of proposing was the health of their living comrades now serving the Queen in different parts of the world, and to rejoice with them as representatives of the day they celebrated that they were still in a position to do so. He had before him a list of a few names to revert to, any one of which would touch a cord of sympathy and feeling in all their hearts. He would commence with the honoured and distinguished name of General Lord Napier of Magdala, the chief representative of the honourable corps of Royal Engineers. It would, he felt, be almost an impertinence to recall to their minds services that were engraved deeply in the history of the world. At the time of the event they were celebrating Lord Napier of Magdala occupied the anomalous position of being lieutenant colonel in chief of the staff to Sir James Outram. They would all recollect that General Outram, with a generosity and nobleness of heart that had been always a theme of admiration in military circles, had put himself in the peculiar position of resigning the command to his (Sir Henry's) father, and Colonel Napier, with that simplicity and kindness that always distinguished him, bent himself at once to the necessities of the moment, and condescended to share the duties with him that he was fulfilling upon his father's staff. Lord Napier was now, and deservedly so, in the forefront of British commanders, and would in all probability have had the command had European affairs here called upon English troops to take the field two years since. Had he been so called on he was sure they would have found him in 1878 as full of life, vigour, and energy as in the past. Sir Henry then at considerable length detailed the services of Sir Vincent Eyre, Col. Hudson, Col. Palliser, Major General Macpherson, Major General Sir A. Home, Lieut. General Olpherts, and others, all of whom they would like to see with them were they not kept elsewhere by the exigencies of service. After referring to the fact that they had more present than last year he expressed a hope that as their anniversary dinner was better known they might hear from some of their old comrades, of whom in the course of years they had lost sight. Although twenty-three years had elapsed since they marched into Lucknow, the event still remained unsurpassed in military history, for the simple reason that it was unsurpassable. In conclusion, he proposed the toast, which was drunk with three times three.

The Chairman then proposed "Success to Future Anniversaries." Unfortunately, he found himself, simply in virtue of his seniority in rank, called upon a second time to preside at what, he trusted, might be a perpetual celebration of the anniversary of Sept. 25, 1857, or, in other words, according to their motto, "Donec mors nos separaverit." It was for history to carry down to all time the events—the ever-memorable and never-to-be-forgotten events of that day—for, setting aside his inability to do justice to the theme, he thought it would hardly be within the bounds of modesty for any of the actors in that day to speak of them in the only terms that had ever been applied to them. (Cheers.) Therefore let history record the event, of which perhaps more yet remained to be written. They had had in books a great number of personal narratives, but history discarded details, and dealt only with great facts. In alluding to what were really the glorious results of the day, it had always been a matter of satisfaction to him that it was no aggressive war they were engaged in; it was no carrying out the dictates of the law; it was no punishment of contumacious subjects; but the deliverance of their beloved countrymen, and more particularly their beloved countrywomen and children, from the merciless hands of murderers and ravagers. He maintained that object was fully attained—they were delivered from their merciless foes. There had been some question as to whether theirs was a relief, or a defence, or a reinforcement. His own conscience had always told him they were engaged in the noblest duty soldiers could be occupied in, and he had always thanked Providence that his education as a soldier had had so glorious an object. Let them all comfort their hearts as he had long since comforted his. Whether they relieved, whether they defended, or whether they reinforced, they clearly saved Lucknow. That, he thought, was quite sufficient for them, and they might pass by all the little bits of argument on this much-quoted subject. There could be no denying that on that day the God of battles was with them, and what force could ever despair of success when it was led by such a God-fearing, God-trusting, and God-invoking man as the late Sir Henry Havelock? In conclusion, the gallant general referred in a few glowing and eulogistic words to the late relief of Kandahar, and finished by proposing the toast, which was enthusiastically drunk.

THE BLACK HOLE OF CALCUTTA.—The archives of the Heralds' College contain a curious historical document in the shape of a petition from Mr. Holwell to the Earl Marshal of England, praying for a grant of arms commemorative of his wonderful deliverance in the night of June 20. Sir Albert Woods, Garter King at Arms, has kindly drawn our attention to this record, which contains the following "recital tending to elucidate the cause and steps leading to that fearful night. Surajud Dowla Subah, or Viceroy of Bengal, having determined to divest the Europeans settled in the provinces of their fortifications and garrisons, resolved to begin with the English first, as he apprehended from them the greatest resistance. Accordingly, he invested Calcutta and Fort William, in the East India Company's Presidency of Bengal on June 15, 1759, with a numerous army and large train of artillery. On the 18th, report being made that there was not two days' ammunition, it was resolved in a general council of war to retreat with the Company's effects, &c., the night of the succeeding day, by means of ships in the port. But on the 19th, in the morning, the Governor and Commandant, with several officers and members of the Council, militia, and inhabitants, not thinking the place tenable for that day, privately withdrew out of the back or Western gate, and gaining the ships fell down the river, and with them every boat and vessel. The remaining part of the council, the garrison, militia, and inhabitants, amounting to 200, being thus abandoned, immediately and unanimously elected your petitioner to the command. We sustained two assaults that day, and repulsed the enemy with great slaughter. The next day, at noon, finding that since the defection of the governor, &c., our force was reduced by twenty-five killed and seventy wounded, and our last round in the guns, he threw out a flag of truce to amuse and gain time till the evening, a disposition being settled to force a retreat through the enemy, as soon as it became dark, by the river side to where the ships lay, about five or six miles below us. But the western gate during the parley being forced by our Dutch guard and betrayed to the enemy, we were obliged to surrender prisoners of war. Resentment for our obstinate defence, and revenge for the number of the enemy slaughtered, drew on us the above-mentioned deplorable catastrophe, 146 of us being crammed into a dungeon at eight in the evening, from whence myself and twenty-two more only survived, at six the next morning. A narrative of the night with other relative matters were published by your petitioner in Feb., 1857. (Signed) T. Z. HOLWELL, Nov. 22, 1762."

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

ASH'S "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines, from 50s. each.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

C. H. SHARP AND COMPANY,
PATENT INLET

PURE AIR VENTILATING WALL FILTER.
C. H. SHARP and COMPANY call special attention to their new Wall Inlet, which is admirably adapted for the Ventilation of Private Dwellings, Churches, Schools, Public Buildings, Hospitals, Stables, &c.

It is constructed upon sound scientific principles, and is superior to any other ventilator yet introduced.

ADVANTAGES.

1. It is simple in its construction.
 2. It is sensitive in its operation.
 3. It is not liable to get out of repair.
 4. The air being pure the atmosphere is more healthy and agreeable, as a fog, smoke, dust, and other foreign particles in which the atmosphere of towns abound, are kept back by the Filter, which allows only a supply of pure air to pass through the regulating spaces in an upward direction into the room without causing a draught.
- The supply of air can be regulated by partially opening or closing the valve. When closed it is flush with the inside wall, and can be papered or coloured to match the same, which renders it scarcely noticeable. Fixed at 6ft. 6in. from the floor, with an ordinary air brick on the outside size of Filter.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY
Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 18; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 16; Calcutta, Sept. 15.

REPORTS on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 7, 1880, state that rain has been more or less general during the week. In Bengal, British Burma, and Assam there was again a fair fall, and prospects remain very satisfactory. In Madras, Mysor, and Coorg there was favourable rain, and prospects continue to improve; the harvest of the autumn crops has commenced in some districts of Madras. In Bombay rain was pretty general in the Deccan and Guzerat, but slight in Konkan and the Southern Mahratta Country, where more is required. The need is particularly felt in Puna, Ahmednuggur, and Sattara; in Sind the Indus is very low and crops are suffering. The rain that has fallen in Hyderabad has been very beneficial, but more is wanted in Berar. There has been general and plentiful rain in the Central Provinces, which has greatly improved prospects. In Central India also, except in Morar and Nowgong, there was good rain, with the same result. Rajputana still wants rain, but the wind was easterly, and there was hopes of a fall. In the North Western Provinces also the wind had changed to the east, and some little rain fell in most districts; prospects are slightly better, but there is still a general and pressing need of a further fall. The rain in the Punjab was slight and partial; but the little that has fallen has been of benefit. The week's reports show a very considerable advance in agricultural prospects; in Southern India they continue to improve; in Western India they are much less unfavourable; while in Central India they are now quite satisfactory; in Rajputana and Northern India the weather has as yet been unseasonably dry, but there has been a favourable change in the direction of the wind, and the latest reports show that rain has fallen in some places where it was very much wanted.

THE health report for the same week is as follows:—Bombay: Karachi, some fever; Nasik, slight cholera; general health good; Bengal: some fever in many places, and small-pox still in Pooree; otherwise public health good. North West Provinces and Oudh: general health fair, except in Agra and Lucknow, where fever is still prevalent. Punjab: health generally good. Central Provinces: Nagpur, fever prevalent. Jubbulpore: small-pox continuing, also in Saugor; but general health good. British Burma: public health everywhere good. Assam: healthy. Mysor and Coorg: health good. Central India States: generally good. Rajputana: fevers generally prevalent; but Harowtee, Jhallawar, Jeypore, and Bhurtore, health good.

THE heavy rains of a fortnight ago caused disastrous floods in Rohilkund. A large number of lives were lost, and the crops were much injured.

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 2.—Reported from Kandahar that Ayub passed through Farah about 14th, leaving there late Ameer's widow, and Sirdar Hashi Khan as Governor. Ayub had only 200 horse with him, but declared his intention of going to Herat and settling his affairs, after which he would return to attack Kandahar. Sahib Khan, principal chief of the Zamindawar, who refrained from active part in the late rising, has offered his services, and has been told to come to Kandahar. Messengers from Ameer to his mother report all quiet at Cabul. Reported from Quetta that Sir Robert Sandeman proceeds to Sibi, to superintend arrangements for General Macgregor's advance into Marri country. Sick and wounded everywhere doing well. Following deaths from wounds at Kandahar:—Col. Arthur Shewell, Bombay Staff Corps; Private John Atterwell, 59th Regiment; Private William Dixon, 92nd Highlanders; Private Allan M'Donald, 92nd Highlanders."

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 4.—Private Patrick Smith, 85th Regt., killed near Ghalozan, Sept. 13."

MR. LYALL, the Foreign Secretary, has been obliged to abandon his projected visit to Kandahar owing to illness. No statements have been as yet made concerning the political condition of Southern Afghanistan, but the military dispositions at and about Kandahar are described in the following telegrams to the Times and Standard:—

"The Government have apparently decided to retain a strong division of troops here for the winter, leaving the remoter future still uncertain. The force will consist of one battery of Horse Artillery and two batteries of Field Artillery, one Mountain, and one Heavy Battery, the 9th Lancers, and two regiments of Native Cavalry, and four regiments of British and six of Native Infantry. Besides the above, one regiment of Cavalry and one regiment and a-half of Native Infantry will guard the road between Kandahar and Chaman. All the troops in excess of the above now in the Kandahar Valley will be withdrawn forthwith. It is supposed that General Phayre will remain in command, and that General Primrose will return to India. In furtherance of the above arrangement, the 66th Foot has marched towards Quetta, and will be followed shortly by the two native regiments of General Burrows's Brigade, which will then cease to exist. Probably the excess regiments of Native Cavalry will be the 3rd Bombay and the 3rd Sind Horse; so that, except the E Battery, B Brigade, of Horse Artillery, the whole of the troops engaged at Maiwand will shortly return to India."

"It has been definitely decided to send a force to the Helmund. It will consist of the 63rd Foot, two Native Infantry regiments, D B Battery Horse Artillery, 6-8 Battery Royal Artillery, a squadron of Lancers, and a Native Cavalry Regiment, under the command of General Wilkinson. The force will remain for a month on the Helmund to collect provisions. During the months of December, January, and February all the troops will remain concentrated here. Generals Primrose, Burrows, and Nuttall will accompany their troops on the return march to India. General Phayre remains here in command."

ACCORDING to a Kandahar telegram General Primrose leaves for India to-day. Generals Burrows and Nuttall will soon follow him. A strong force will march to the Helmund for the convenience of supplies.

THE Daily News correspondent telegraphed from Chaman on Monday the arrival of Macpherson's brigade. The country is quiet generally. General Roberts's division will be broken up on arrival. General Ross, with his staff, is at Quetta. General Roberts starts for England on Nov. 6. MacGregor's march through Marri and Atchakzai had a great effect in restoring tranquility.

THE more recent reports from Kandahar are contained in a Standard telegram dated yesterday:

"General Phayre assumed the command here to-day. General Roberts leaves Sibi on the 15th, handing over the command of the troops in Southern Afghanistan to General Phayre. The supplies for the winter continue to be the pressing question of the day. Only one third of the requisite transport is available, for the large trains which went down to India with the Bengal troops have not yet returned, consequently the difficulty of collecting provisions for the regiments detailed for the garrison of Kandahar is very great. The troops here are 40 per cent under their nominal strength. Serious rumours are circulating among the Pathans in the Bazaars to the effect that Mahomed Jan and Ayub have entered into an alliance, and that the latter intends returning with more guns when he will be supported by a contingent from Ghuznee. It is also reported that Ayub has arrived at Herat, and that he ascribes his defeat to the fact that the Cabulee troops were tampered with by Abdul Rahman and the British. The Heratees are said to be willing to return to the attack, and that mountain guns are being got ready for advance. News from another source confirms the fact of Ayub's arrival at Herat, having left Hashin Khan at Farrah, and Mahomed Hussein Khan at Subzwar. It is said that things are generally quiet in Zemindawar, except that Abubeker Sirdar is preparing to leave for Herat to confer with Ayub. The attitude of the population in the town and district is expectant, and certainly not friendly. Under the present general nothing will be left to chance, and every contingency will be prepared for. Colonel St. John denies the truth of the bazaar reports, but they are believed by the natives, and their effect upon the population is undoubted."

A KANDAHAR telegram states that, after considering the report of Gen. Roberts on the battle of Maiwand, the Government of India recalled Gen. Primrose, who is ordered to report himself at Bombay, and it is believed that he will on his arrival there be called upon for a defence of his conduct. A searching inquiry is absolutely necessary, and in view of the opinions expressed on the instructions conveyed to Gen. Primrose, it may be asserted that his conduct will not be the only subject of scrutiny.

THE Bombay Gazette states that a court of inquiry, of which General Phayre is president, had been ordered to assemble to consider certain matters to be submitted to it by General Primrose. The specific matter to be inquired into had not transpired.

THE Madras Times says that the appointment of General Roberts as commander in chief of Madras, in succession to Sir Neville Chamberlain, when the latter vacates in February, has been another topic of much local interest. General Roberts will be welcomed here with all the honour due to so distinguished an officer, and, as he was on the Simla Army Commission, it is believed that he will come charged with instructions to carry out the recommendations of that commission so far as they affect the Madras Army, so that we may look out for very important changes when Sir Neville Chamberlain leaves us.

WE are glad to hear that the gallant services of Col. T. G. Kennedy, C.B., 2nd Punjab Cavalry, have met with fitting reward. The Government of India have appointed him to the command of the Punjab Frontier Force.

It is quite decided, says the Pioneer, that the Viceroy holds a large durbars at Lahore on or about Nov. 10, and the arrangements in connection therewith have been taken in hand already. The site of the Viceroy's camp, which will be very large, will soon be selected, as also the camps of the native chiefs whose presence is expected at the ceremonial. The chiefs who are likely to attend are Kashmir, Patiala, Bhawalpur, Jhind, Nabha, Kapurthala, Faridkot, Mandi, and Chamba. The durbars at a Governor General's durbars ordinarily number about 600; but it is said that at this—the first durbars to be held by the Marquis of Ripon—the number will be kept down as low as possible, although the frontier durbars will all be invited.

At a meeting in aid of the Patriotic Fund, held at Simla, on Sept. 14, about Rs.10,000 were subscribed, his Excellency the Viceroy heading the list with Rs.3,000. The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab subscribed Rs.1,000, and the Hon. James Gibbs Rs.1,000. In addition, Dr. Leitner, for the Anjuman-i-Punjab, offered Rs.6,000 to provide for the education and maintenance of ten sons of native soldiers killed in action, till they are able to earn their own livelihood.

THE successor nominated by the late Maharaja of Jaipur has been officially recognised by the Government and installed by Major Bradford, the Governor General's agent in Rajputana. All the nobles did homage, and Major Bradford made a speech praising the deceased sovereign, and advising the new Maharaja to imitate his predecessor.

THE Pioneer informs us that Capt. McCalmont, of the 7th Hussars, Lord St. Vincent, of the same corps, and Capt. W. Gill, R.E., have just arrived in India from England and have gone on to Kandahar.

CONGRATULATORY telegrams to Sir F. Roberts from Quetta from the Viceroy, Lord Hartington, the Duke of Cambridge, and General Sir F. Haines, the Commander in Chief, have been published in field force orders. The Viceroy telegraphed:—"Accept for yourself and your troops my hearty congratulations on your victory, which forms a fitting sequel to your great march. Lord Hartington said he had announced all the details of the great success to the House of Commons, who had received the news with great satisfaction. The Duke of Cambridge's message was sent on by General Warre, commanding the Punjab Army, who also added his own congratulations." These messages have been received with special satisfaction.

A MARRIAGE has been arranged between the second son of the Maharaja of Cashmere, Mian Ram Sing, and the sister of the minor Raja Jai Chand, of Kangra.

DR. BUHLER, the well-known Sanscrit scholar, who has retired from Government service, left India by the mail of 13th ult.

MAJOR ATKINSON, of the 1st Punjab Cavalry, and Captain Barlow, of the 10th Bengal Cavalry, have been recommended for the Victoria Cross for distinguished gallantry in Afghanistan.

THE Government of India is about to confer a distinguished service reward upon Major General J. Hills, V.C., C.B., late commandant of Cabul, in recognition of the services rendered by him in Afghanistan.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD has met with an accident at Dehra, having fallen from his pony and dislocated his shoulder.

MR. VIVIAN ASHLEY EDEN, son of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, while out shooting in Assam on the 12th ult. was killed by the accidental discharge of his gun.

THE latest news from Mandalay, according to a letter, is that the Soo Hpayah Lat has presented King Theebau with a son, described as an heir, which is a bold assertion. From Chunar, in Upper India, comes news of death of the Mingoon dooing Mentha Prince.

THE number of natives killed at Naini Tal is variously computed at from 150 to 200. It was considered unlikely that more bodies could be recovered, and a funeral service was arranged to be held last Wednesday on the margin of the lake. A committee, presided over by the Lieut. Governor, has been formed to collect subscriptions for the widows and orphans of the killed.

WE have much pleasure in correcting a mistaken supposition, shared with many others, that Mr. Juland Danvers would no longer issue the annual report on Indian railways. The office of Government Director is still held by him, as well as that of Public Works Secretary. An additional deputy Government Director, Col. Williams, has been appointed to assist in the duties which Mr. Danvers has so long and so ably discharged.

THE Goa and Marmagao Railway, it is stated, is to be commenced on the termination of the monsoon.

THE review of the maritime trade of British India for the past official year shows that the imports of merchandise during the year amounted to Rs.39,74,21,662; of exports of the same to Rs.67,17,31,581. In 1878-79 these figures were respectively Rs.36,56,61,947 and Rs.60,89,36,180.

RETURNS of the navigation and trade of British India for the four months from April 1 to July 31 show that the value of imports in that period amounted to Rs.15,82,07,563; of exports to Rs.25,66,57,826. In the corresponding period last year these figures were respectively Rs.11,12,51,928 and Rs.21,58,42,220.

THE quantity of tea exported from Calcutta in August last is returned at 6,052,495lb., as against 3,982,563lb. in August of last year.

A CORRESPONDENT of an evening contemporary narrates a case of the stoppage of promotion in the Bombay Cavalry. Major General Trevelyan, of the Bombay Cavalry, died on July 3, 1871. The step was not granted to the officers below him until July 30, 1874. General Sir M. Stack, C.B., died in July last, 1880. No promotion has as yet followed, and, if the same ruling is enforced as in General Trevelyan's vacancy, the step will not be given until July 30, 1886! One officer will have, owing to these stoppages, to serve nine years longer than he would have done in the days of the H.E.I. Company, notwithstanding the parliamentary guarantee that "all rights and privileges" should be accorded to the local Indian officers.

THE grant of ninety days' privilege leave to officers returning from the front is gazetted, the period within which the leave is available to continue until each officer avails himself of it.

A HOPE was recently expressed by the Daily News that the decision of the Government to evacuate Kandahar would be at once reasserted. The Times of India is worth quoting on this subject:—

"If Mr. Gladstone's Government are wise enough to ignore party prejudices at home, and strong enough to carry out a policy that will give meaning and reality to the victories of our troops, the completion of the railway to Kandahar will render the city almost as accessible and as secure as Hongkong, and only less valuable than the greater ports in the Far East, as a centre for Asiatic trade. The commercial interests of the Empire have suffered severely from a war for which, from the first commencement, commercial men felt little sympathy, and they have a right to some consideration at its close. If we abandon Kandahar we lose a fine opportunity of monopolising the extensive commerce of Central Asia, and of despatching English and Indian goods wherever the trading caravans can penetrate. When the material stored at Karachi has been utilised, four-sevenths of the whole railway to Kandahar will be completed, and the cost of finishing the line will add little to the total cost of the war, and will be grudged by no one who has the interests of India at stake. At present the chances of a Russian invasion are indefinitely remote, but Russian commerce is far in advance of Russian arms."

THE following officers have been appointed, in the various provinces of British India, to superintend the operations connected with the approaching census. For all India, Mr. C. A. Elliot is the general commissioner. The provincial officers are:—For Madras, Mr. G. Stokes; Bombay, Mr. Banes; Bengal, Mr. Bourdillon; N. W. Provinces and Oudh, Mr. E. White; Punjab, Mr. Ibbetson; Central Provinces, Mr. Drysdale; Berar, Mr. E. J. Kitts; Assam, Mr. Driberg.

THE Bombay Military Relief Fund on Sept. 13 had reached a total of Rs.47,282.

LORD RIPON's recent order about the Arms Act, ordering district officers never to withhold licenses whenever the possession of arms may be needed for self-protection, has given satisfaction to the native papers, but they one and all express a hope that his Excellency will soon be able to see his way to abolish the Act altogether. A recent Gazette of India announces that the Governor General in Council is pleased, under Section 27, to exempt from the operation of all prohibitions and directions contained in Sections 13, 14, 15, and 16 of "The Indian Arms Act, 1878," other than those referring to cannons, articles designed for torpedo service, war rockets, and machinery for the manufacture of arms and ammunition, such subordinate officials of the Geological Survey of India as may from time to time be authorised by the superintendent of the Geological Survey to possess or carry arms. Sir James Fergusson, the Governor of Bombay, has thought it necessary to notify that articles which are not arms at all, but mere curiosities, are not liable to confiscation under the Indian Arms Act, 1878.

A CURIOUS and, so far, unexplained alarm seized upon the inhabitants of Ootacamund on Sept. 6. Somehow or another a rumour spread that the Mahomedans in the bazaar were bent on giving trouble, in fact, Ramran feast was announced as the day fixed for a rising. So there was general excitement, and the Nilgiri Volunteer Rifles mounted guard at night, and earned warm commendations of Colonel Cleland Henderson, acting commandant, in the morning. The account of the "scare" in the Madras Mail is amusing.

THE return of wrecks and casualties in Indian waters for the year 1879, prepared by Mr. Robert C. Carrington, register of wrecks to the Marine Survey Department, is an unusually heavy one. No less than 289 ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 32,541 tons, were totally wrecked, as compared with fifty-nine ships in the previous year, while casualties, more or less serious, occurred to 192 ships, as compared with 169 in the previous year, and the number of lives lost in connection with this long tale of disasters was 357, against 131. This increase was almost entirely, if not entirely, due to unavoidable causes, the cyclone and subsequent heavy weather of May, 1879, alone accounting for 200 of the wrecks. Of the 289 wrecks, eighteen were of British vessels, three French, one Dutch, one Persian, one Arabian, 193 British Indian, sixty-two native craft, five Portuguese (native), and five British Burmese, while of the 192 casualties, 100 occurred to British vessels, two to French, one to Dutch, one to Norwegian, two to American, one to Austrian, one to Spanish, one to Italian, one to Turkish, seventy to British Indian, eleven to native, and one to Singalese vessels.

A PUBLIC protest against the armed coercion of Turkey is being prepared by the Patriotic Association for general signature based on the following grounds:—The injustice of forcing the Porte to make further concessions while those articles of the Treaty of Berlin, which favoured Turkey have not been carried out; the likelihood of provoking a general European war, in which Russia might occupy Constantinople; and the disastrous effect which Mr. Gladstone's anti-Turkish policy is having upon the Mussulman subjects of the Queen in India. It is also proposed to hold a public meeting in London at an early date. Letters are to be addressed to the hon. secretary, 46A, Pall-mall, London, S.W.

THE annual report of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge records among the grants of money during the year £800 to the Training College, in the diocese of Calcutta, £1,000 for the Cathedral at Lahore, and £540 towards supporting the students at Puna Mission-house.

A RECENT number of the Punjab Record gives the following hard case. A, a Mahomedan girl, aged ten years, was married by the Mahomedan form of marriage to a boy B, aged seven years. She never lived with B, and does not appear to have seen him again. When she came to mature age she married one C, with whom she lived, and by whom she had children. B has claimed her as his wife, and by order of the Chief Court she has been made over to B, under penalty of imprisonment if she refuse to comply.

THE Indian Mirror recognises the necessity of strengthening the North Western Frontier; but it does not follow that the North East Frontier should be left to take care of itself. It is quite as much from this, as from the other frontier, that a Russian invasion is possible. With the co-operation of China, Russia could, with the help of the races between Assam and China, and Burma and China, make her way into India with the same secrecy and suddenness, as she penetrated not long ago into Cabul. It behoves the Government to take prompt measures for securing the North East Frontier of Assam, where the wild races are at almost constant feud with the people of the British territory.

DURING July the imports of gold into India were Rs.28,19,190, whilst the exports were only Rs.19,950. The silver imported was valued at Rs.50,46,101, and the export at Rs.8,61,640. The total import of the precious metals was thus Rs.78,65,291, and the exports Rs.8,77,590, leaving the net imports at Rs.69,87,701. Taking the first four months of the current financial year, the import of gold was Rs.1,22,63,643, and of silver Rs.2,48,24,920. The total imports of the precious metals was thus Rs.3,70,88,563. During the same period, the export of gold was only Rs.29,900, and of silver Rs.43,79,282, making a total export of Rs.44,09,182. The net imports of the precious metals for the four months was thus Rs.3,26,79,381.

DURING July the coin and bullion received at the Indian mints was as follows:—Calcutta, Rs.25,24,979; Bombay, Rs.37,99,743, making a total received of Rs.63,24,722

During the month the sums coined and examined were—Calcutta, Rs.26,19,945; Bombay, Rs.40,99,300—or in all, Rs.67,19,245. During the first four months of the official year, the coin and bullion received is stated as follows:—Calcutta, Rs.26,90,473; Bombay, Rs.1,47,00,459, total, Rs.1,75,90,932. The amounts coined and examined during this period were Rs.26,19,945, and at Bombay, Rs.1,61,97,310. The total coined in the four months was thus Rs.1,88,17,255.

TWENTY couples of foxhounds are now en voyage to Bombay on board the B.I.S.N.Co's. steamer Canain, which left London on Sept. 2.

THE Bombay Game Birds and Wild Animals Bill has been recast so as to provide for the preservation of fish.

A NEW factory bill for India has been drafted, and the Bombay Millowners' Association have communicated their views on the measure to the Government of India.

A RETURN by Col. R. Murray, the director general of telegraphs in India, of the number and value of inland and foreign messages, with abstracts of foreign traffic for the year 1879-80 has been issued. From this it appears that the number of Inland State messages sent increased by 81,078, costing Rs.4,42,458, and of private inland messages by 73,023, costing Rs.98,556. Of foreign messages the State is not returned as sending any, but is debited with Rs.5,664, whilst there was an increase of 36,724 private foreign messages, costing Rs.1,42,464. This gives a net increase over the previous year of 13-90 in the number of messages, and 22-52 in the amount received.

IN the four months, April to July, the salt revenue amounted to Rs.2,38,13,000, being considerably higher than for the corresponding periods of last year and the six previous years. The amount of duty collected in Bombay was Rs.50,15,000, and in Sind Rs.93,000, exactly the same as was received during April, May, June, and July, 1879.

SIX months' sales of Bengal opium and four months' pass duty on export from Bombay show a total return of Rs.4,53,02,120, as compared with the estimated total of Rs.4,38,37,000. The Bombay duty is Rs.56,42,050 worse than estimate.

THE balances held in cash in the Civil Treasuries of the Government of India, and at the credit of Government in the Presidency banks and their branches on the last day of August, 1878, were Rs.12,58,98,000; August, 1879, Rs.15,59,31,000; August, 1880, Rs.12,64,69,000.

DURING the week ending Sept. 11 deaths in Calcutta numbered 183, being a death-rate of 22-4 per 1,000 per annum. In the same week in Madras there were 270 deaths, the death-rate being 35-8 per 1,000 per annum. In Bombay, during the week ending the 7th, there were 403 deaths, the death-rate being 29-85 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India furnishes the following:—Obituary of the week.—The Raja of Barwani (Central India); the Nawab of Bungash; Capt. F. L. Archer, R.A.; Mr. Vivian Ashley Eden; Mr. Dowding, tutor to H.H. the Nizam; Mr. V. D. Byrne; Dr. E. George; Mr. J. Small; Mrs. Hatch, wife of Lieut. General Hatch, R.A.

THE following changes have been ordered in the destinations of the regiments arriving from England and Malta, vis.:—2nd Battalion 24th Regiment to Secunderabad, 77th Regiment to Madras, and the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade to Puna. The 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment is to move by rail from Puna en route to Secunderabad on the 14th and 15th inst., and the 77th Regiment on arrival about the 11th inst. en route to Madras is to occupy the Rest Camp during its halt in Puna. The 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade may be expected to arrive at Bombay about the 15th inst.

THE Commander in Chief, Sir Frederick Haines, notifies that, with the approval of the Secretary of State, the Government of India has decided that probationers for the Staff Corps who have been unable to pass by the higher standard in Hindustan owing to prolonged active service with their corps, may, on return from service, have six months' extension of their probationary term to pass in. Application in each case is to be made to the Adjutant General, Simla.

HIGHLANDERS AND GOORKHAS.

BEFORE leaving Kandahar Sir Frederick Roberts presented distinguished service medals to the men of the 72nd, 92nd, and 5th Goorkhas for service in action about Cabul. In a short speech to the men he said:—"I am glad to have this opportunity of giving medals for distinguished conduct in the field to you, men of the 72nd and 92nd Highlanders and 5th Goorkhas. One thing I am sure of no men could deserve them better. You showed the other day what material Highlanders and Goorkhas are made of. I only hope it may always be my good fortune to have such brave, forward soldiers with me. The 72nd Highlanders have to mourn the loss of their colonel, as fine a leader of men as I have ever seen. With him fell an equally gallant spirit, Capt. Frome, and many brave men, amongst them, I regret to hear, Sergeant Cameron—a grand specimen of a Highland soldier. The 92nd lost heavily also, Colour Sergeant Fraser being amongst the slain. Fourteen gallant fellows were laid in one grave on the evening of Sept. 2, and many more are lying wounded in hospital. But, men, you have the satisfaction of knowing that you did your duty nobly. I have seen a good deal of hard fighting, but I never remember noticing a greater look of determination to win a battle than I observed on your faces on the morning of Sept. 1. No Afghans could stand against such a steady, bold attack. You beat them at Cabul, you have beaten them at Kandahar, and you can now leave the country, feeling assured that the very last troops the Afghans ever wish to meet in the field are the Highlanders and Goorkhas. You have made a name for yourselves in Afghanistan. You will never be forgotten here, and you may depend on it you will never be forgotten by me."

THE VOLUNTEER COMPETITION.

THE conditions of the prizes offered by the prize committee of the Simla Volunteers to be shot for amongst volunteers throughout India have been issued. The prizes aggregate Rs.1,000, which sum is divided as follows:—1st prize, Rs.300; 2nd Rs.150; 3rd, Rs.100; 4th, Rs.60; 5th, Rs.40; 6th to 13th, Rs.25 each; 14th to 19th, Rs.15 each; 20th to 25th, Rs.10 each. The distances to be fired at are 200 yards and 500 yards, seven shots at each, and the position to be observed is "standing" at the short range and "any position" at the longer one. The match may be shot any time between now and Dec. 10. The entrance fee is Rs.3, and any number of entries are allowed on payment of that amount for each time of shooting. Men can fire at any station, provided at least three competitors shoot together, and the shooting is superintended by an officer of the army or volunteers, "or an officer of the Covenanted Civil Service," the latter condition being entered to meet the case of outstations where an officer of either the regular army or volunteers is not easily obtainable.

AYUB'S FORCE AT MAIWAND.

THE colonel commanding the artillery under Ayub Khan, and who is now a prisoner in our hands, states that Ayub kept his army together simply by promising the loot of Kandahar. As soon as he arrived at Furrah he got perfect information of all our movements, every Pathan in the country being only too eager to carry detailed news of what was going on in and about Kandahar. As he advanced every fighting man in Zemindawar joined him, until he had some 20,000 men. Then the Wali's regiment mutinied and joined him. Ayub had resolved to make a bold dash for Kandahar, not meaning to touch General Burrows' brigade at all. With this object in view he tried to reach Sinjiri by a forced march; thence he would have attacked Kandahar, and he was sure that, with his overwhelming strength, he would succeed, and the city once in his hands only one fate—that of being destroyed—could have fallen upon General Burrows' brigade. In carrying out this plan, he made forced marches to Maiwand, and had halted to close up his baggage and guns, all of which he had with him when General Burrows' appearance from the Khushk-i-Nakhud direction left him no option but to fight. During the action his Herat regiments suffered so severely from our artillery fire that they twice retired in disorder. When our infantry gave way his irregulars made their rush, ending in our defeat. Ayub forbade his regulars to join in the pursuit at all, leaving the work entirely in the hands of the irregulars who returned to share the plunder of the camp, after following General Burrows as far as the Kushk-i-Nukhud stream. The colonel says that 1,500 regulars were written on the rolls as killed, while the loss of the irregulars was much greater.—Bombay Gazette.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

KAFIRISTAN.*

WHILE many talk about Central Asia, Northern Afghanistan, and the Neutral Zone, there are a few, and only a few, who exert themselves and endeavour to add anything to our knowledge of these mysterious lands. Chief among these is Dr. Leitner, and he is likely to remain the chief, because his interest in the subject is not the outcome of a passing whim, but is the result of long continued application and untiring perseverance. In 1866 he visited Dardistan, and brought back with him a mass of information, a mere fraction of which has yet been made public, but beyond this, he brought back with him the good will and confidence of the people he visited, and has since been able to hold constant communication with them. Dr. Leitner is the only gentleman, as far as we know, who has been able to attract these uncivilised tribes as visitors across the border. From these humble tribesmen he has been able to extract a large amount of information on the languages, habits, traditions, geography, physical features, and trade routes of the unknown lands north of Peshawur; and in this way he has laboriously checked and added to the facts acquired by himself in his own enterprising tour. The volume before us is one result of his labours, and it is as remarkable for the fulness of its details, as for the nature of the facts themselves.

The Bashgeli Kafirs occupy the northern corner of Kafiristan, on the further side of the Valley of Chitral, close to the point of junction between Badakhshan and Wakhan. In despite of their apparently inaccessible position, Dr. Leitner fills a book with the information he has gathered about them. He gives us a tolerably complete grammar of the language, with many valuable philological notes; a good vocabulary of useful words, and, what is more, a set of dialogues which throw much light on the syntax of the language in addition to their practical value to future travellers. The ethnologist will be delighted with the frontispiece, which is an admirable photographic group of six natives of these parts. Photography is of the greatest advantage for such purposes, as it brings almost the very men themselves within the reach of all interested in the study of races. Dr. Leitner is here, again, a pioneer, for he is the only man who has offered us actual photographs of the wild races of Dardistan. The extent of Dr. Leitner's additions to our geographical knowledge of these parts is shown by the two maps which accompany this volume, one of which gives a section of the last official service map of Afghanistan, and the other the same tract on a larger scale, filled in with the results of his own notes. Dr. Leitner's map is full of names of villages and towns, with watercourses, routes, hills, with the varying levels of the ground and special heights of mountains carefully marked. Thanks to the unaided exertions of Dr. Leitner the Government cannot plead want of knowledge in any course it may pursue with respect to the important tract of country north of Peshawur.

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.*

MR. JUSTIN M'CARTHY brings to a conclusion in these two volumes just published his admirable and excellent "History of Our Own Times." The critic is left scarcely more than the pleasant task of calling attention to the fact by the pains which the author has taken to render his work complete, and, above all other considerations, accurate, for as Mr. M'Carty very truly says in his remarks upon one of the great writers of the age, "History is worthless if not accurate." The first two volumes, published two years ago, described the events which marked the first twenty years of the reign of her Majesty, from the announcement of her accession to the throne, conveyed to her while at Kensington Palace, down to the Congress of Paris, when the Eastern Question was not settled, as Mr. M'Carty reminds us, but only put temporarily into the cupboard by the conclave of European Powers. The third volume begins with the dispute with the Chinese Government in consequence of the Arrow case, and we question whether this episode will form very pleasant reading for Englishmen. It concludes with the death of Lord Palmerston, whom Mr. M'Carty will only allow to have been "a great man of the time." With all his faults, future historians will probably place this English statesman on a higher pedestal than Mr. M'Carty is disposed to, and his plain English sense and patriotism—often no doubt, like that of Elizabeth, illogical, and always remote from cosmopolitanism—may one day be regretted for their absence, just as the prisca fides of the early Romans was by the writers of the Empire. This volume has much to say about the Indian Mutiny—no fewer than five chapters being devoted to it, and it is in this portion of his work that Mr. M'Carty has left himself most open to adverse criticism. It would be unfair, however, to criticise hardly a few details on a special topic when the mass of the subjects is so excellently described and arranged. The Civil War in the States is described at less length, and, of course, there is much about the iniquitous proceedings of the Alabama, and the folly and shortsightedness of public opinion in England and France in thinking that the South would win. The fourth volume is certainly not the least interesting in its contents. The important events of the last fifteen years are therein recorded, and assuredly these will not yield in importance to those of any similar period in our history. The Reform Bill, the legislation for Ireland, the Ballot Act, the Education Bill, in domestic legislation, have revolutionised the condition and the tone of thought of the nation, whether for good or for ill time alone can show. In foreign affairs, the union of Germany, the consolidation of Italy, the fall of the Napoleons, the aggressiveness of Russia, and the passing of Turkey through the crucible, have effected a not less startling change in the aspect of Europe—which is again becoming modified by the steady recovery of France, and by the slow but sure progress also being made by Austria. Mr. M'Carty brings down his history to the last election, and, although his views are decidedly of the advanced Liberal type, he writes fairly of his opponents, and in general with as much impartiality as could be expected. His work is one that is sure to be widely read, and it fully deserves its popularity. Fortunate in the subject he has chosen, Mr. M'Carty has turned it to the best account, and will receive the support of all who care to follow the course of contemporary history.

*"A History of Our Own Times." By JUSTIN M'CARTHY, M.P. Vols 3 and 4. London: Chatto and Windus. 1880.

THE INDIAN EXCHANGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As you have done me the honour of inserting in your issue of the 11th inst. a lengthened notice of my late publication on the Indian exchanges and bimetalism, I venture to ask you to be so good as to allow me to offer a few words in explanation of your remarks on what you term the "imaginary value of 2s. for an Indian rupee." You correctly quote my explanation of it as follows:—"That depends on what you mean by an artificial value. If you mean that it is more than the world-wide saleable value of the metallic contents of the rupee it, no doubt, is artificial in that sense; but if I say that it is the value actually paid in gold for the rupee, and for which it may be exchanged, I think it may be called a real value." And you illustrate the fallacy of this view by comparing the rupees with a piece of fashionable china, purchased at an exorbitant fancy price. Allow me to point out that this comparison is not fairly applicable. In order to make it just, we ought to have pieces of china used as money by the people which are, accordingly, of universal indefinite demand, whose minimum cost of production, in all the same, is that stated, and which can at any time be recovered. These conditions would be true with regard to the rupees, and would constitute a real value within the Empire; and I have admitted that, as to the outer world, their value might be called artificial. The subject is fully explained in the second appendix to the work, and has, therefore, probably not attracted your notice. It is there shown that the value of an international currency is the so-called intrinsic worth of the materials composing it; but that the local value of a domestic currency, though never less than, is not necessarily identical with that of the physical matter or substance forming the coins or tokens in circulation, but with the cost of producing them in the country or district where they are legal tender. I trust that you will have observed my argument that the present value of the Indian rupee, as compared with commodities, is 2s. in English money; and that the 4d. reduced in the exchange is a mere discount necessary to effect a sale of Indian products in sufficient quantities to pay for council and other bills at reduced prices in the English markets (vide answers 67 to 71, 30 and 73) reduced, not because rupee money has fallen, but the English pound sterling has risen in value. Further, that the fall of the Indian exchange was not caused by the depreciation of silver, but the depreciation of silver by the fall of exchange. (Answers 49 and 53 to 55.) In consequence, I state my opinion that silver, which loses its European value the moment that Indian exchange turns against her, and becomes useless when it is wanted for remittance, is unfit to be a standard of value and regulator of the Indian currency, and that it is of the highest importance to make gold, of the same value, a new standard, with or without the use of gold coins; on the easy accomplishment of which, all the difficulties and losses connected with the exchange would gradually disappear.—I remain, Sir, your most obedient servant,

J. T. SMITH, Colonel R.E.

THE PROSPERITY OF THE CIVIL SERVICE FUND.

THE Bengal Civil Service has at last begun to reap the fruit of the prudent measures of 1850. The fund was then seriously involved, and subscribers determined at once to extricate it from its difficulties, and to increase the benefits afforded by it. The "ordinary" subscription, payable by all members alike, was raised from 2 to 2½ per cent., while married members were required to pay "additional" subscriptions of 2 per cent. for their wives, as well as subscriptions for children. At the same time, the pension of widows and orphans was declared to be independent of any private property they might possess. For many years, nevertheless, the fund remained with a deficit. A length, however, the corner was turned, and in 1870 the subscriptions of annuitants were reduced by half. In 1873 larger proposals were made for increasing benefits, and thus bringing assets and liabilities into equilibrium; but some members of the service considered that the amount of the surplus should be accurately determined by a professional actuary before any distribution should take place. The result of the inquiry is embodied in Mr. Sutton's report. He shows that—even assuming that the rule requiring deduction of one-sixth from pensions in cases in which the subscription balance of the deceased members has not reached a certain minimum—the surplus of the fund on March 31, 1878, was more than thirty lakhs. The subscribers are practically pledged to Government not to hoard their capital, and they have accordingly distributed the surplus by providing increased benefits. The result is, that annuitants will be relieved from all liability to contribute; that the family of the youngest member dying in the service will receive full pensions; that the family of a subscriber dying in the service will get a donation of £300; and the family of a subscriber dying after retirement a donation of £200, in addition to the pensions; that motherless orphans will get 50 per cent. more than heretofore; and that boys between sixteen and twenty-one will get £150 a year, or, if they are motherless, £200 a year, instead of £100 as hitherto. Finally if a member is compelled by ill-health to retire early from the service when his subscription balance is low, he need not, as heretofore, struggle to pay up a certain sum to secure a quarter, one-half, or three-fourths benefits to his family. They will be absolutely entitled to one-half pension at least, without any further effort or contribution on his part. It is said that, under further advice from Mr Sutton, the managers have decided to retain a part of the annuitant's subscriptions for a time; but this is a small matter, and the measure is, we believe, avowedly a temporary one. The net result is as we have described it; and while the service will consider it satisfactory, Government must recognise the readiness of the subscribers to keep their capital at high interest.

THE INDIAN FRONTIER TRADE.

AN important and interesting report has just been issued by the Department of Finance and Commerce of the Government of India, relating to the character and extent of the trade carried on across the British Indian frontier, from Sind to Burma. We are familiar with the returns of imports and exports by sea, which have been for some years past regularly issued by Government; but the present report is the first that has been compiled with a view to arriving at an estimate of the land trade between our territories and the numerous countries beyond our extensive frontier, from Beluchistan to Siam. The value of the imports along the whole frontier registered during 1878-79 was Rs.4,88,89,774, and of the exports Rs.3,96,47,419, giving a total trade of Rs.8,85,37,193. Of this, the amount credited to the portion of the frontier the traffic across which was not registered previously, is Rs.20,03,800, so that the trade in 1878-79 with the same districts that the registration system was applied to in the previous year was in value Rs.8,65,33,390. In 1877-78, the value of the total traffic (exports and imports) over the same routes was Rs.7,19,37,292. There was a falling off in the trade with the following countries, and to the amounts stated:—Afghanistan, Rs.35,11,834, Kashmir, Rs.6,03,335, and Beluchistan, Rs.6,44,825, besides a slight loss in the case of the Southern Shan States and Zimmay, the trade carried on with which is very small. In the case of Nepal, the increase shown is Rs.1,43,75,774; of Upper Burma (where the figures would no doubt have been higher but for the political uncertainty which existed), Rs.37,95,931; of Siam, Rs.4,65,670; Thibet, Rs.5,39,005; Northern Shan States, Rs.1,76,583; and Ladakh, Rs.22,503. The chief item in the list of imports is food grains—wheat, gram, rice, &c., which represent a value of about 80 lakhs. The wheat, gram, and peas imported come chiefly from Upper Burma, and are mainly consumed in the British Province adjoining. Rice and paddy are imported from Nepal into Behar, to take the place there of the rice which is sent down to Calcutta for export. Next in importance comes timber, representing a value of 42½ lakhs, the trade in which is almost entirely confined to Upper Burma (22 lakhs), Kashmir (10½ lakhs), and Nepal (7¼ lakhs). A little is also brought in from the wooded hills of the country between India and Cabul. The cattle trade is a large one between Upper Burma, Siam, the North Shan country, Nepal, and the British territories adjoining. The value of this trade given in the 1878-79 returns is nearly 37 lakhs, but the report points out that the figure is not strictly accurate, there being "little doubt that the registering clerks recorded all the pack animals crossing both ways as imports and exports." Next in value is the wool trade, which the report represents as being capable of very large development, if woollen manufacture in India is taken up and conducted on an extensive scale by Europeans. The value of the trade in 1877-78 was Rs.30,31,713, and in 1878-79, Rs.27,37,593. The falling off was in the imports over the western border, and is attributed to the war. The largest portion of the wool imports comes from Khelat and Kandahar, the falling off in the supply from which places in 1878-79 led to a large demand, with elevated prices, from Thinet and Ladakh. The shawl imports from Kashmir were valued at over 18 lakhs of rupees; ghi, from Nepal, Kashmir, Afghanistan, and Baluchistan, at 17½ lakhs; fruits and nuts, at 16 lakhs, nearly 15 lakhs of which represent imports from Afghanistan; raw silk, from Kashmir and Cabul, at 16 lakhs; manufactured silk, chiefly from Upper to British Burma, at 18 lakhs; sugar, all unrefined, from Burma, and a little from Kashmir, at 14 lakhs; seeds (linseed, rapeseed, and mustard), which are brought largely from Nepal and in small quantities from Baluchistan and Kashmir, 10¼ lakhs; spices, chiefly from Nepal, 7½ lakhs; oils, mostly from Upper Burmah, 16 lakhs; intoxicating drugs (chiefly charas,—the resinous exudation from the stems, flowers, and seeds of the hemp plant—which comes in large quantities from Cabul, 8½ lakhs; dyes, for the most part madder from Cabul, 5 lakhs; and horses, ponies, and mules, from Towang into Assam and from Upper into British Burma, 9½ lakhs; raw cotton, from Upper Burma to Rangoon for export to China, 8¼ lakhs; cotton piece goods, also from Upper Burma, 5 lakhs; gums and resins, from Upper Burma and Nepal, nearly 3½ lakhs; opium, nearly all from Nepal and a little from Kashmir, 3½ lakhs; and saltpetre, from Nepal, 2 lakhs. The principal export is cotton piece goods, which were sent across the frontier during 1878-79, to the value of 111½ lakhs, viz., Rs.84,63,486 European goods, and Rs.26,89,608 Indian goods. This item of export applies to the whole frontier, cotton goods being sent to all the countries mentioned in the report. It is pointed out that a material increase may be expected in this trade beyond the Western frontier and in Kashmir, as the outcome of establishment of railway communication between Karachi and Quetta, and between Ahmedabad and Ajmir. Of cotton-twist and yarn 21½ lakhs worth were sent across the frontier during the year, chiefly to Upper Burma. The cotton-twist exported is almost entirely European, the value of the Indian made twist and yarn included in the returns being less than 1¼ lakh. The manufactured silk exported represents a value of 18½ lakhs; it is sent in large quantities to Upper Burma, and in smaller consignments to Nepal. The exportation of raw silk is almost entirely limited to Upper Burma; its value is 11½ lakhs. Ngapi, a paste formed of pounded fish mixed with salt, takes a high place in the list of exports, having a value of 17½ lakhs. This article is exported entirely to Burma, Siam, the Shan States, and Karenni. Ngapi is universally used by Burmans as a condiment for their rice. Its manufacture gives employment to a large number of fishers and fish curers on the coasts of Pegu and Tenasserim. There is a great export trade in rice also with Upper Burma. The value of the total exports of rice across the frontier for the year was Rs.39,15,289, and of this Rs.36,90,605 worth went into King Theebaw's country. Indeed, the people of Upper Burma are entirely dependent on British territory for their supply of rice, the staple food of the population; and if its exports were prohibited, they would be reduced to a miserable condition. This rice exported from British territory by inland communications to Upper Burma is passed free of duty. If it were taxed at the same rate as similar exports by sea, namely, three annas per maund, an annual revenue of about three lakhs of rupees would be realised. After mentioning divers other articles of miscellaneous commerce along the frontier, which we have not space to enumerate, the report speaks of the trade in wollen goods, and remarks that "it might be developed largely, for the people of Afghanistan, Cashmere, Nepal, Thibet, and Bhutan all wear woollens extensively, and though they wear their home-made goods, there is little doubt that woollen clothing made by machinery in mills would supersede such clothes in those countries as they have done elsewhere. Yet to them little is sent, more than half the total exports being taken up for Burma." The manufacture of wool in India is an industry which will repay any attention given it by capitalists. There is a wide outlet for such goods in India itself, as well as in the neighbouring countries.

AT the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council on Sept. 8 a bill to provide against the spreading of certain contagious diseases among horses was passed. The bill provides that owners of diseased horses must give information to the police, or, in default, pay a penalty of Rs.500. The police are to have the horse examined by a veterinary surgeon, and, if found affected with disease, to cause it to be conveyed to hospital, or slaughtered forthwith. A bill to amend and consolidate the law relating to the rating for the construction charges and maintenance of district communications and other works of public utility, and of provincial public works, was also passed. In the absence of the Lieutenant Governor, who was confined to his room from illness, Mr. Paul presided. The council adjourned sine die.—Pioneer.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

PHYSICAL TRAINING.—"Formerly the wealthier classes of the native gentry of Calcutta were forward in vieing with their European fellow-citizens in getting up races. But now no such races are to be heard of, nor is there even a Hindu cricket club in this city, where the educated and wealthy Hindu muster so strong. It is hardly possible to exaggerate the value of physical development to the native races, who have greatly deteriorated in physical strength through the influence of those sedentary pursuits to which the educated classes so largely bet themselves, especially in Bengal. We are glad, however, to see that Bombay is setting a good example to the other Presidency cities. The Hindu Cricket Club there has already become a local institution, which is rapidly growing in popularity; and we should rejoice to find that our youthful countrymen in Bengal and other Provinces would imitate the example of Bombay, and organise clubs for cricket playing and other healthful and manly exercises."—Indian Mirror.

PUBLIC WORKS IN BENGAL.—In conformity with instructions from the Secretary of State and the Government of India, the Government of Bengal is said to have directed that, owing to present financial pressure, all public works in Bengal, including, in certain cases, the periodical repairs, whether connected with irrigation or otherwise, should be suspended, with the exception of those urgently required. In consequence of this order, the works, in connection with the proposed improvements in the Eastern canals, the cost of which—viz., sixty lakhs, was included in the Budget for the ensuing year, and was sanctioned by Government, are not to be commenced at present. The only work connected with the canal which is to be carried on is the construction of the lock gate at Dhappa, which is fast progressing towards completion, and the estimated cost of which is said to be about five lakhs of rupees, but the actual cost of which will presumably exceed the estimate, in consequence of several extra works having been carried out in connection with the project.—Indian Daily News.

CAWNPORE AS A SALT CENTRE.—The importance of Cawnpore as a distributing centre for Sambhar salt is clearly brought out in Mr. Halsey's inland customs report. In 1878-79, 533,188 maunds, and in 1879-80, 937,607 maunds were consigned from the lake by railway to Cawnpore. The exports from this entrepot are chiefly by railway into Oudh. A great deal of salt also reaches Cawnpore by the Ganges Canal. Mr. Halsey is arranging for the establishment of depots at Agra, Delhi, and Cawnpore, which will prevent sudden rushes of trade on Sambhar itself, and give the railway a steady carrying business all the year through, the depots being re-stocked at the slack trading season. The system of through booking salt, from Sambhar to any railway station in India, on indent accompanied by a Treasury receipt for duty paid on salt and bags, affords, by its simplicity, the greatest convenience to traders; and the transactions in this way have increased by 50 per cent. in 1879-80 as compared with 1878-79.—Pioneer.

THE HIDE TRADE.—An interesting fact connected with the hide trade is brought out in Mr. Halsey's recently published report on the working of the Salt Department for 1879-80. To be properly cured, hides must be treated with sulphate of soda (khari), as pure as possible; if dressed with the impure form generally used they absorb moisture to a large extent, and sweat and rot in the holds of vessels. The purest khari is got from Patna, where it is found mixed with only about 2 per cent. of chloride of sodium. But the difficulty of getting khari free from salt has led to the use of arsenic and preparations thereof, chiefly arsenicate of potash, which is cheaper; and when the hides, moreover, are treated with this they become half as light again as those cured with khari. But Mr. Halsey justly points out that there is a great objection to the increased use of arsenic. The class of people who collect the hides are of very low caste, and it is to them that the arsenic has to be distributed. The temptation thus put in their way is very great, and has led to several cases of cattle poisoning. Mr. Halsey is trying to develop a sufficient supply of sulphate of soda in the North Western Provinces, so as to obviate the use of arsenic.—Ibid.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Tukvar Company, held Sept. 4, the report and accounts were passed and the directors were authorised to pass an ad interim dividend at the close of the season or earlier if possible. At the half-yearly meeting of the Hoolungoree Tea Company, held Sept. 4, the report and accounts were passed. At the half-yearly meeting of the Dunbar Cotton Mill a dividend of 3 per cent., or Rs.3 per share, was declared, and it was resolved to increase the insurance on the mill to five lakhs of rupees.—Englishman.

RAJSHAHYE AND COOCH BEHAR.—The resolution on the General Administration Report of the Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Divisions for 1879-80, tells of a very materially improved state of affairs, as compared with that period when these districts—particularly the latter—were the scenes of constantly recurring riots. Now we read of nothing but progress in agriculture and commerce generally, and of a thoroughly contented people. On this latter point, the commissioner's remark is expressive. He says:—"The great majority of the people of the division are uneducated agriculturists, and under our settled system of Government have scarcely a thought beyond their domestic and village affairs, their cattle and crops, and the rates of rent and cesses. . . . I believe that the people from the highest to the lowest are fully sensible of the advantages they enjoy under British rule, and are generally contented." The rainfall of the season was heavy, and, on the whole, the crops were good. The heavy rains, too, are said to have flooded and carried away vast "accumulations of dirt from villages," and to have cleaned the stagnant pools and beds of old rivers. As a natural consequence, fever cases were comparatively few, having in Dinagore fallen from 32,164 to 24,411, a decrease of 24 per cent.; and in connection with this subject, the collector affirms that he believes this to be a real improvement, and not a fallacious one, resulting from faulty registration; as, on his tour, he heard on all sides confirmatory evidence of the fact. Under all these circumstances, it is not surprising that we should be told that "the people of the division are, on the whole, well off." Emigration from the district has ceased; and, on the contrary, there is an influx of people from the neighbouring districts in search of work, tempted, perhaps, by the comparatively high rate of wages. The daily rate of wages for ordinary coolies is—at Rajshahye, three annas; at Julpigoree, three to four annas; at Rungpore and Dinagore, four to eight annas; and at Serajunge, six annas. These rates are much higher than Danghars and Santhals can make in their own mehals. These tribes, in consequence, give off large contingents, who cross the Ganges in search of employment. Manufactures of various kinds, chiefly tea, indigo, and silk, seem to be carried on in the division on a large scale; immense quantities of gunny cloths are made at home by the people, besides the large outturn of the Serajunge mills, which is estimated at "sufficient cloth for four and a-half million bags" annually.—Indian Daily News.

THE GANGES CANAL.—The Finance and Commerce Department of the Government of India has prepared for the information of the Marquis of Hartington a statement showing the cost of the Ganges Canal, now near completion. The net cost of the canal appears to be Rs.3,29,40,885. The total earnings in 1878-79 were Rs.32,82,961 (Rs.26,11,154 direct revenue, and Rs.6,71,807 indirect revenue); while the working expenses amounted to Rs.9,69,993. Thus the net direct revenue amounted to Rs.16,41,251, being a return of 5.47 per cent. on the capital outlay at the close of the year. The net direct and indirect revenue combined, amounting to Rs.23,13,058, gave a return of 7.71 per cent. The maximum area commanded by the canal was estimated in 1873 at 1,205,000 acres, which, as shown from the actual result, 1,182,330 acres, was not far from the mark. The report concludes with a request that her Majesty's Government will give sanction to the sum of Rs.3,41,47,177, being accepted as the limit of capital expenditure on the canal, in place of Rs.3,18,33,905 as now sanctioned. This new amount is intended to include the cost of constructing a navigable channel, known as the Dasna channel, to connect the Ganges and Agra canals, estimated at Rs.7,50,000.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—At date of mail the disengaged tonnage in port stood at 30,239 tons. London via Canal: The market closed quiet at £2 2s. 6d. for rice; £2 10s. for jute; £2 15s. to £3 light freight. For London via Cape: The market closed firm at £1 15s. to £1 17s. 6d. for rice or wheat; £2 7s. 6d. for linseed; £2 10s. for rape and poppy; and £2 5s. for jute, &c. For Liverpool via Suez Canal: Quotations nominal. For Liverpool via Cape: £1 15s. for wheat; £1 18s. 9d. for linseed; and £1 17s. 6d. for jute.—Englishman.

CHOLERA.—The cholera epidemic at Gwalior and Morar has subsided. There have been several deaths among the natives of both places, but only two fatal cases have occurred among the Europeans in the latter cantonments. Among these was the engineer in charge of the ice house.—Indian Herald.

PATIALA.—We hear that his Excellency the President of the Patiala Council of Regency has received a telegram from the Punjab Government thanking the council for their congratulations to the Government on the success of General Roberts. We stated in our issue of Sept. 9 that the Patiala State is distinguished for its loyal feelings to the British Government, to which we should add that the Government is ever ready to acknowledge the loyal spirit shown by the princes or chiefs under its protection.—Civil and Military Gazette.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT SIMLA.—The correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes:—"There has been a serious accident at Jutogh, which has a very unpleasant look about it. A soldier of the 72nd Regt. was in Simla on Saturday, and was returning to Jutogh, a distance of five miles, when he was either thrown or fell down a khud of some thirty feet depth, and lay there till six next morning, when he was picked up in an insensible state and carried into barracks. He was seriously injured about the head and other parts of his body, and from these wounds the blood had flowed very freely during the time he was lying where he fell. In his delirious state he often called on the name of a party at Simla with whom he had been in company on Saturday. This, with various other circumstances which have transpired, leads the authorities to suppose that his fall was caused by some person or persons interested in the death of the soldier. I do not know if the poor fellow is dead; he was not expected to live on Sunday."—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of this association was held at Calcutta on Sept. 10.

Mr. Justice Wilson, the president, delivered a long address in the course of which he said their numbers were very substantial, their financial position thoroughly sound, their meetings were generally well-attended, they had during the past two years—nearly two years—that he had the honour of being connected with the association, an excellent series of papers from members of various classes, and they had every reason, to look forward with fair confidence, to the prosperity and usefulness of the institution.—Times of India.

THE OFFICIAL MIGRATION.—The secretariat offices at Simla break up on Oct. 12 for Calcutta.

JUDGES' HOLIDAY.—The Judges of the Calcutta High Court are scattering themselves for a holiday. The Hons. A. Wilson, L. Broughton, L. Tottenham, and C. D. Field go to England; the Hon. W. F. McDonnell, V.C., to Suez, and the Hon. C. Pontifex to Ootacamund.—Times of India.

GRIEVANCE OF COTTON GOODS IMPORTERS.—Intense dissatisfaction is felt by the importers of cotton goods with the course which has been adopted by the collector of customs regarding duty-free cloths in which trivial irregularities have been found. The very smallest of these irregularities, which can with ingenious perversity be construed under the Sea Customs Act into an offence, is visited with the confiscation of the goods in which it occurs, and with the maximum fine. It thus happens that an irregularity which may not involve the loss of one rupee to the revenue is made the excuse for exacting a penalty of, possibly, five thousand rupees. The collector treats every case alike, rejects proofs which should satisfy him of the accidental nature of the irregularity, and, by straining the law to the utmost, visits misfortune with the rigour which should be reserved for fraud. It cannot have been the intention of the framers of the Act that the almost unbounded powers which they reserved to the collector should be wielded with an entire absence of discretion, and the Government would do well to arrest a scandal which is growing into portentous dimensions.—Englishman.

THE LATE REV. M. A. SHERRING.—It is stated that an effort is being made to obtain the recognition by the Secretary of State of the late Mr. Sherring's literary merits and of his valuable works in the course of education. It is proposed also to raise a memorial to him, and subscriptions from his friends for this purpose will be received by the Rev. J. A. Lambert, Benares.—Times of India.

THE SIMLA FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—We have received from Col. Maisey, hon. secretary of the Simla Fine Arts Society, a copy of the resolutions passed at the meeting recently held under the presidency of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab. It was resolved that steps be taken for the formation of a permanent society for the encouragement of the fine arts, and that there be an annual exhibition of pictures, &c., at Simla. Prizes will be given according to conditions to be notified each year, for the best productions of amateurs. The works of professional artists are to be received for exhibition, and for sale if so desired, but not to compete for prizes. A collection of works upon subjects connected with the fine arts will be formed at Simla as speedily as funds allow, and some of the best art periodicals have been ordered for the use of members. As soon as suitable rooms are secured by the society, measures are to be taken towards the formation of a free fine arts gallery at Simla. Members of the society will pay a yearly subscription of Rs.12, and a donation of Rs.50 or upwards will constitute the donor a life member. The resolutions are signed by Sir R. E. Egerton, Sir F. P. Haines, the Hon. J. Gibbs, the Hon. C. Grant, Major General Napier Campbell, R.A., Surgeon General J. W. Cunningham, Col. Maisey, and others.—Times of India.

COURT MARTIAL.—At a general court martial assembled at Jhelum, August 17, Private James William King, 9th Lancers, and Private Martin Cullen, 10th Regt., were respectively found guilty of insubordination and violence, and sentenced to five years' penal servitude.—Times of India.

THE LICENCE TAX IN NORTH WEST PROVINCES.—The report on the licence tax operations in the North West Provinces and Oudh, for the year ending Dec. 31, 1879, has now been published. A hurried glance at the table of contents yields some interesting information:—"The licence tax is a tax on ostensible means, tempered by appeals to actual income. The nominal cost of establishment is wholly fallacious, as the mass of the work devolved upon the ordinary establishments. Serious evils attended in practice the administration of the tax in 1879. The enormous labour involved necessarily interfered with other really more important work and rendered the tax most costly. A reasonable revenue had to be raised from this source, but to do this with any decent regard for an appearance of equity involved an amount of labour and energy that might have been better utilised. Certainly no measure, as a whole, has ever received more constant and intelligent attention; but it cannot be asserted that the results were correspondingly satisfactory. No two officers could be depended on to arrive at the same results, for the majority of the assessments were purely guess work. Really correct and just assessments were impossible in the majority of cases in 1879. Naturally the uncertainty that attended the assessments paved the way for widespread corruption amongst the putwarrees, and more or less demoralization of higher officials; in some cases even to tahsildars. Facts are established enough to condemn any tax; and the entire service that had so loyally administered it does almost unanimously condemn it." The report, however, according to the table of contents, goes on to affirm that with the recent important modification of the law, the licence tax may be unobjectionably maintained on one condition, namely, "that the status quo be now accepted, and the hunt after taxees discontinued, the lists for 1880 being maintained for some years practically unaltered." If the system advocated in the report be pursued, "£100,000 a year may be realised unobjectionably by the license-tax in the North West Provinces and Oudh."—Pioneer.

THE SALT REVENUE IN BENGAL.—The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has had reason to complain lately that sufficient care is not taken in his dominions to protect the salt revenue. There are some magisterial officers, it seems, "who persistently neglect to give due effect to the rules for the grant of rewards to police officers and informers" in cases of illicit manufacture, possession, and transport. The prosecutions under the salt law in Bengal last year numbered 1,355; there were 1,473 persons convicted, and Rs.1,775 were realised from fines and forfeitures; while only Rs.66-4 was paid in rewards to the police and informers. The Lieutenant Governor has desired the Board of Revenue to bring to his special notice next time those officers who neglect his orders about rewards.—Pioneer.

THE BANJARAS.—The Banjara tribes of Central India still provide pack bullocks for carriage where the railway system has not penetrated. The State railways run in parallel lines, north and south; the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsular Railways east and west at a considerable distance apart. Within the included space, thousands of bullocks, carrying every conceivable article of country produce, move in all directions, the average rates of carriage varying from four annas to eight annas a maund per 100 miles. No form of carriage could be designed better, adapted to a country in which, with hardly any roads, there are immense tracts of grazing ground. From time immemorial the Banjaras have had the exclusive right of trading in salt. Bankers make them small loans, which the Banjaras repay by their profits from the sale of the salt, with usually a very high rate of interest. Formerly a loan of Rs.100 or Rs.150 enabled the Banjara to do a good business, and the risk was slight; but, owing to the British duty being levied at the time of purchase, a capital of Rs.600 or Rs.700 is now required, and bankers are less willing to make advances. The traders, however, finding that their supplies of salt were failing, have begun to advance the necessary funds, sending a member of their firm with the Banjara to secure a refund of their money. One of the chief causes of the distrust of the Banjara trade was the length of time their bullocks take to march; they seldom travel above five miles a day, and a banker in Bhopal advancing money to a Banjara for the purchase of salt might not hear of him for six months. When the railway is open to Neemuch the journey will be greatly reduced; and it is probable that the Banjara will eventually be a carrier of salt, as he is of everything else, instead of a trader.—Ibid.

BRITISH BURMA.—Mr. W. W. G. Beatson has been appointed consular agent for the United States of America at Bassein, in the place of Mr. J. G. Grieve, resigned; and Mr. J. E. Orr, consular agent for the United States of America at Akyab, in the place of Mr. W. F. Halliday, resigned.—Ibid.

MUSSOORIE.—A fatal accident has befallen a Mr. Conner, one of the Mussoorie Volunteers. A large parade was held at the Manor House; he was present at it, and when on his way back to Mussoorie must have been overtaken by the storm. Whilst proceeding along the lower road by Messrs. Whympers' brewery, during the pitchy darkness of the night, he stepped over the khud. He was found dead next morning by some of Messrs. Whympers' employes.—Delhi Gazette.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The directors have made the following changes in the bank's establishment:—Mr. A. MacBean has been appointed agent at Benares, vice Mr. Slater. Mr. P. D. Harrison, accountant at Hyderabad, has been granted six months' leave.—Gazette.

MADRAS.

FINANCIAL RETURNS OF THE DIOCESE OF MADRAS.—We have been kindly favoured by the Bishop of Madras with a printed summary of the financial returns from the clergy ministering to English congregations in this diocese, with the following statement by the Bishop:—Ootacamund, July 21, 1880. The accompanying summary of financial returns from European and Eurasian congregations embraces a period of fifteen months ending March 31, 1880. The object of this change has been to assimilate in future the financial year in the Ecclesiastical Department to the Government official year. 2. The amount of contributions freely given during the fifteen months through the clergy is found to be Rs.1,38,121-11-5, viz.:—Collected from all sources within the church and district, Rs.1,46,799-12-8; deduct school fees, Rs.5,804-15-2; do. interest, sales, &c., Rs.2,837-2-1; total Rs.1,38,161-11-5. 3. The corresponding sums in the three preceding years were:—1876, Rs.1,24,752-9-8; 1877, Rs.1,22,662-1-4; 1878, Rs.1,06,912-10-4. If the sum collected in 1878 be increased by one-fourth, i.e., Rs.26,728-2-7, the amount collected at the same rate in fifteen months will be Rs.1,33,640-13-11, which our present amount exceeds by Rs.4,480-13-6. If the Rs.1,38,121-11-5 collected in the fifteen months under review be reduced by one-fifth, viz., Rs.27,624-5-6, the remainder Rs.1,10,497-5-11 assumed to be collected in twelve months, exceeds the amount collected in the previous twelve months by Rs.3,584-11-7. Under either comparison the period under review is an improvement upon the year 1878. But, notwithstanding this, it is disappointing to observe that our latest twelve months' contributions fall short of those of 1877 and 1876, under the latter computation, by Rs.12,164-11-5 and Rs.14,255-3-9 respectively; and according to the former computation, by Rs.15,205-14-3 and Rs.17,819-0-8. The absence of many members of our congregations at the seat of war will account in some measure for this unfavourable appearance. But vigorous efforts on the part of the clergy are needed to recover lost ground.—Madras Times.

THE LOCAL FUNDS BUDGET.—The balances brought forward amount to Rs.12,71,850 for road fund, Rs. 2,66,340 endowment fund, and Rs.6,63,320 for the general fund, being a total of Rs.22,01,510. Last year the Budget estimate of balances was only Rs.8,85,520. Under the head of allotments by Government there is a falling off of Rs.34,200, the grants for roads and for schools being less than those of last year. There is a slight increase in the receipts from rates and taxes, the cess on land showing an increase of Rs.28,000, or say, Rs.40,80,860, against Rs.40,52,130. Tolls, however, exhibit a falling off, for during the current year they are estimated to yield Rs.3,41,960 only, against Rs.3,76,530 received last year. The fees in schools show an increase of Rs.2,550, and the increase in the contribution from municipalities is upwards of Rs.2,000. The receipts from endowments, contributions, and donations also show an increase, being Rs.2,68,130, against Rs.2,39,310. Miscellaneous receipts exhibit a falling off from Rs.33,280 to Rs.64,400, the total estimate of receipts of the various local fund boards amounts to the large sum of upwards of seventy-three lakhs of rupees, or an increase of thirteen lakhs over the previous year. In the estimates of expenditure there is an increase of about four lakhs of rupees under the heading public works. New communications will swallow up clearly three lakhs of rupees; repairs, establishment, tools and plant, contingencies, all show a slight increase. The expenditure under Grant II. Education, will be less this year than last by about Rs.16,000; the greatest reduction is under the head of grants in aid. Under the heading Grant III. Sanitation, Medical Services, and Public and Charitable Institutions, there is an increase of a little over one lakh, the totals being Rs.11,36,410, and Rs.10,32,549, respectively. Miscellaneous also exhibits an increase of Rs.16,000. The total expenditure is set down at Rs.58,94,380, against Rs.52,82,320 last year, and the balance that will be carried forward will be Rs.15,20,380. On looking at the detailed estimate for the road fund, Rs.7,42,950 are set down for new works, and upwards of nineteen and a-half lakhs for repairs. The establishment will cost Rs.5,70,100, and tools and plant Rs.67,600. The details of the receipts and expenditure of the endowment fund are a balance of Rs.2,66,340 brought forward; interest is set down for Rs.22,320; rents and produce of lands, Rs.1,91,441; allotments from capital, Rs.1,2000; contribution grants from Government, Rs.46,396. The expenditure gives Rs.59,375 for fixed charges of endowed institutions; Rs.1,63,413 contingent charges of endowed institutions; Rs.73,190 allotments for public works and sundry other allotments we need not name. There is a very great difference in the estimated receipts of the different boards; that of Chicacole is set down at Rs.83,890, while that of Tanjore figures for Rs.6,00,920; the Nilgiris is for Rs.76,5000; and Salem for Rs.3,06,410. While Rs.16,020 are raised from tolls in the Chingleput district, Rs.28,280 in Coimbatore, and Rs.42,000 in Calicut, Gooty raises by tolls only Rs.1,920; Coconada, Cuddapah, and Mudnapulli receive nothing from tolls. The returns from the cesses also show wide variation; in Chicacole they yield Rs.65,000, in South Arcot Rs.2,39,000. The allotments from general revenue are made on a principle we do not understand; while Calicut receives Rs.36,400, and Tellicherry Rs.33,600, Mudnapulli gets only Rs.850, and Cuddapah Rs.1,130.—Madras Times.

NILGIRI CINCHONA.—A Madras correspondent writes:—You will, no doubt, be glad to learn that a trial consignment of Nilgiri cinchona bark is going to Australia, with a view to test the market for this article in the Southern continent. Messrs. Dymes and Co. have obtained fifty bales of bark from the Government plantations by purchase. The bark will contain a fair proportion of trunk, branch, and twig bark. It is also to be partly original bark, partly mossed and partly renewed. Messrs. Dymes and Co. will pay the average price realised at the latest sales of similar bark in England. In making this concession, the Government are anxious to avoid creating a precedent, and state that they are not prepared to depart from the general principle of open competition in the sale of Government cinchona bark.—South of India Observer.

MAJOR GENERAL CRAWFORD COOKE.—Major General Crawford Cooke, of the Madras Staff Corps, who was for some time quartermaster-general of the Madras Army, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant general.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The actual expenditure of the Madras Irrigation Canal Company during the quarter ended March 31, 1880, Rs.40,028-15-3, and the outlay up to March 31, 1880, Rs.1,15,38,389-15-5. The charges for establishment during the quarter were, general management Rs.4715-10-8, and executive establishment Rs.8,895-5-1, equal to 11·78 per cent. and 22·22 per cent., respectively, upon the outlay on the works.—Madras Times.

PORTS FOR SHIPMENT AND LANDING OF GOODS.—In exercise of the power conferred by Section II of the Sea Customs Act VIII, of 1878, his Grace the Governor in Council is pleased to declare the ports of Perupalem and Pulicat in the districts of Godavari and Chingleput, respectively, to be ports for the shipment and landing of goods.—Madras Times.

A REMINDER.—The following notification has been published. The heads of departments and of offices are reminded that the Budget Estimates for the year 1881-82 are due, and that they should be submitted to Government with as little delay as possible. The estimates for petty construction and repairs, dealt with departmentally, should also be submitted for 1881-82.—Gazette.

PATENT.—There has been received in the office of the Chief Secretary to Government, a copy of the specification of the invention of which the following is a brief description:—Mr. Edward Henry Leveaux, of Hampton Wick, in the County of Middlesex, England—"Improved apparatus for storing and transmitting motive power and for indicating the supply and expenditure of the same."—Madras Times.

PENSIONS OF OFFICERS' WIDOWS.—A question of considerable interest was decided by Mr. Justice Kernan in the Madras Insolvency Court the other day. A soucar opposed the petition of Mrs. M. J. Mandeville and Miss Mandeville, the widow and daughter of an officer, who are in receipt of pensions of Rs.238 and Rs.30 per month respectively. His lordship decided that he had no power to allocate the pension drawn by Mrs. Mandeville as the widow of a military officer.—Bombay Gazette.

NATIVE OFFICIALS.—The Fort St. George Gazette of the 31st ultimo announces that Mr. S. Gopal Krishna Iyer, B.C.E., has been appointed to the Public Works Department as an assistant engineer, 3rd grade. The Madras Mail remarks on this appointment:—It is some years since a student of the local Civil Engineering College has been nominated to the Engineer Establishment of the Public Works Department, and the course now followed indicates a fresh departure in the policy of the Government which is probably the outcome of the views enunciated by his Grace the Governor at the last University Convocation. Mr. S. Gopal Krishna Iyer passed first out of the Civil Engineering College in December, 1879, with an assistant engineer's certificate and subsequently obtained the degree of bachelor of civil engineering at the Madras University.—Ibid.

TEA AND COFFEE.—Certain statistics required by the Government of India of the extent of tea and coffee cultivation in this Presidency have been prepared by the Board of Revenue on information obtained from the districts. Tea cultivation is confined to the Nilgiris, where there are seventy-nine estates, which comprise an area of 9,002 acres; of these 4,831 acres were taken up and planted. 2,543 acres with mature and 1,628 acres with immature plants. The approximate yield of tea was 645,126lb. last year, giving an average yield of 253lb. per acre of mature plants. Coffee cultivation is carried on in seven districts in the Presidency, at Vizagapatam, Madura, Tinnevely, Coimbatore, the Nilgiris, Salem and Malabar. In the first named district there are but 650 acres under cultivation; in Madura about 3,000 acres are under coffee; the Dindigul taluq has the largest number of plantations. In Tinnevely there are forty-six plantations, but the area of land under coffee is only 2,679 acres, with an approximate yield of 236,302lb.; in the Coimbatore district the average is larger than in Tinnevely, though there are a smaller number of plantations, the yield being 105,140lb. The Nilgiri district has a large area under coffee, namely, 45,990 acres with a yield of 10,256,125lb; in Salem there are 10,059 acres under cultivation with a yield of 1,302,960lb. The estates in the district are chiefly on the Shevaroy-hills, where the average production per acre is returned at 335lb. against 462lb. on the Nilgiris. In five taluqs of the Malabar district coffee is largely cultivated, the total of plantations is returned at 14,858—which shows a falling off when compared with the figures returned in the previous year, owing to some of the plantations having been destroyed by fire and have therefore been struck off from the accounts. The acreage under coffee in the Wynaad is given at 65,829, of which 32,197 acres are returned as the area with mature and 6,905 acres with immature plants; 26,727 acres have not been planted out, but will in course of time be cultivated. The total approximate yield of coffee on all the estates in the presidency is returned at 20,381,086lb. for 131,353 acres, 62,729 being planted with mature and 12,996 acres with immature plants. The cost of cultivation varies, and is returned at Rs.250 per acre in the Wynaad, against Rs.36 per acre in Tinnevely.—Madras Standard.

THE LATE RAILWAY FRACAS.—Some time ago Captain Berkeley Archer, of Bombay, was charged before Mr. Welsh, head assistant magistrate of North Arcot at Arconum, with assaulting Mr. Seymour Keye, of Hyderabad, while he was a passenger in a railway train, with interfering with the comfort of passengers, and with assaulting the servants of the railway company while in the execution of their duty. The defendant was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of twenty-five rupees in regard to each of the

THE PROGRESS OF MADRAS.

THE eloquence of statistics has recently received a new and interesting illustration in a Parliamentary paper bristling with figures, which has been carefully compiled by the Revenue, Statistics, and Commerce Department of the India-office. The columns and tables of figures, with concise comments and explanations, set forth, when carefully studied, the growth and changes in the Presidency of Madras, of revenue and taxation, and the sea-borne trade, together with the statistics of the salt trade, from the beginning of the century to 1878. The point of departure of the review contained in these pages is from the era when the stronghand and autocratic measures of Lord Wellesley, in the words of Mr. Wheeler, put an end to the anarchy and oppression which had prevailed for centuries in Southern India. The Madras Presidency, which was originally restricted to a sandy tract on the Coromandel coast of six miles in length and one inland, was extended westward to the coast of Malabar, northward to the Kistna and Godavari, and southward to Cape Comorin. Between the years 1620, when the first trading settlement was settled at Masulipatam, and 1800, when the information contained in these statements commences, successive conquests, cessions, and treaties had ended in the acquisition of the territories, which, with little alteration, either in addition or loss, constitute the Madras Presidency of the present day, with its total area of 138,856 square miles, and a population by the last census of 31,597,822 souls, under British administration. Since the opening of the century the only acquisitions of territory are the districts of Kurnool, which territory was annexed in 1838 upon the discovery of the complicity of the then Nawab in a Mussulman plot to subvert the English raj. His concealed military preparations were held to afford abundant proof of the disloyalty which was punished by the confiscation of his principality, comprising an area of about 7,000 square miles, containing an estimated population of 293,190 souls, and yielding a revenue of about £80,000. That population by the last census had grown to over 900,000. The purchase of the Danish settlement of Tranquebar for £20,000, and the transference in 1862 of the important district of North Kanara to the Presidency of Bombay, by which Madras lost an area of 4,000 square miles, with a population of 338,000 souls, and a revenue of £147,000, form the only other changes in the territorial limits of the ancient loyal Presidency. The native States of Travancore, Cochin, and the three smaller ones of Poodocotta, Bunganapilly, and Sundoor, do not enter into the scope of the report, and Mysor and Coorg, being under the direct administration of the Government of India, are equally excluded. The State revenue of taxation of the Presidency is set forth with great care, distinguished under its several heads or sources, and the miscellaneous revenue which is derived from items, not strictly of taxation, is kept clearly apart, both in the annual totals and averages. The different columns are totalled so as to show, as far as is practicable, the decennial growth of the revenue and the average of each decade. For thirty-five years the revenue arising from the land, moturfa, or tax on trades, houses, &c., the excise and tobacco monopoly, are necessarily given in a lump sum, and, up to the date of the abolition of the tobacco duties, show a curiously uniform average after the advance between 1800 and 1810 of from two and a-half to nearly four million pounds. But during the last three decades, applying the term to the period of eight years, during which the moturfa tax was relinquished in 1861 in favour of a license tax, there was an increase from an average of four millions to £4,826,401. As this total is made up during the last period of the two items only of land revenue and abkarri excise, we may take out the £582,022 representing the latter, and find that the land revenue averaged since 1870 £4,243,129; the highest year, 1872-3, returning £4,693,469 and the lowest, 1876-77, £3,296,575. When first the land revenue is found recorded separately—namely, in the fourth decade—the average is shown as £3,160,827, which was augmented by about £300,000 in the ensuing period of ten years. The growth of the land revenue and the extension of the occupied area of land in the Presidency since 1852-3 is separately shown in an elaborately tabulated statement, which includes the annual demand and the realisations, the general results obtainable from which may be thus summarised. Comparing the averages of the first with those of the last quinquennial period, which includes the two years of famine, the increase in realisations of land revenue generally has been £588,257, or about 17 per cent. Taking the figures for the fully assessed ryotwari lands only, and omitting an increase due to the inclusion of Malabar in 1865-66, the assessment has risen by £731,942, or 25 per cent., and the occupied area by not less than 7,215,896 acres, or 60 per cent. The causes of the decrease in average rates are partly special reductions of assessment from time to time; partly the gradual introduction of the revised settlements, which, since 1856, has been extended to twelve districts; and partly the extension of cultivation to poorer and more lightly assessed soils. The absolute decrease is from about 5s. per acre to about 3s. 10½d., or 23 per cent. The relative decrease of the rise in prices, if taken into consideration, is of course greater. On dry land the occupied area has increased by 6,654,847 acres, or about 72 per cent., the assessment by £448,801, or 37 per cent., the rate having fallen from 2s. 7½d. to 2s. 1½d. On wet lands there is nominally an increase in area of 903,371 acres, or 36 per cent., the rate having fallen from 13s. 1d. to 8s. 11½d. The real increase of irrigation is, however, not inadequately exhibited by these figures, as is shown by the great increase in water rates of more than 300 per cent., and about 18 per cent. in the charge for second crops.

The growth of the total revenue or taxation during the century can be but imperfectly compared with the population, but, besides the statement as to the land revenue, the report contains statements of similar details with regard to the local and municipal taxation since 1853, and an important one on the sea-borne trade and the returns of the salt trade and revenue from the beginning of the century, to which we can only briefly refer. The first year in which an approximate comparison of the incidence of total taxation can be given is 1822-23, when the population was returned as thirteen and a-half millions. It is carefully stated that, previous to 1871, the returns of population are untrustworthy; but, accepting those figures, we find the State revenue in that year, totalling £4,794,775, amounted to 7s. 1d. per head of population. In the period 1872-73 to 1877-78 the revenue and taxation amounted per head of population to 4s. 9½d., of which 5½d. comes under the head of local and municipal taxation. Thus the augmentation which has taken place in the progress of the century, while it has added to the revenue four million pounds, inclusive of all sources, has diminished the actual incidence of taxation from 7s. to 4s. 4d. per head.

The tabular statements dealing with the sea-borne trade and the salt returns give these general results. Since 1844-45 a rapid and gradual increase of trade is to be noticed. The average receipts from custom duties for the quinquennium 1845-46 to 1849-50, as compared with the last five years reviewed, show an increase from £129,543 to £283,045, while the value of the sea-borne trade had risen from £4,700,000 to nearly 24 millions sterling, and the duties bearing upon the trade thus appear to be 2·75 per cent. in the first as compared with 1·10 per cent. in the second. The receipts derived from salt show a gradual increase of not quite £150,000 for each period of ten years, the result being that the salt revenue, which in 1800 is put down at £19,352, in the last decade averaged £1,283,972; the salt rate, including duty, being in 1810 14 annas, as compared with an average of Rs.2 4 annas before the increase of duty in 1878.

first two charges, and he was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs.1,000 for assaulting the servants of the railway company while in the execution of their duty. Out of the fine the magistrate awarded Rs.25 as compensation to Mr. Keaye and Rs.25 to the railway company. Mr. Keaye submitted a petition to the High Court against decision of the magistrate, setting forth that the magistrate had treated the petitioner with very great indifference. The petitioner prayed that Captain Archer might be called upon to show cause why the punishment passed on him by the magistrate for the assault committed on the petitioner should not be enhanced, and also why fresh charges should not be entered against him, and he be punished for them. The case was heard before Mr. Justice Kindersley and Forbes, who were of opinion that substantial justice had been done in the case and dismissed the petition.—Times of India.

H.H. THE MAHARAJA OF MYSOR.—The Maharaja of Mysor and Mr. Gordon recently visited Kolar. Grand demonstrations, attended by many thousand people from the surrounding villages, took place wherever the Maharaja went. A durbar was held on Saturday. In a speech made by Mr. Gordon at the Kolar School he said that the Maharaja had received a good English education, and he (Mr. Gordon) was sure the Prince would see that the care the British Government took in the province would in no way be remitted under his rule.—Ibid.

ANOTHER ENTERTAINMENT TO HIS GRACE THE GOVERNOR.—We hear that preparations on a grand scale are being made by the Mirzah Feroze Hoossain Saib Khan Bahadoor, agent to her Highness the Nawab Begum of the Carnatic, to give an entertainment to his Grace the Governor previous to his departure from Madras.—Madras Mail.

BOMBAY.

THE NIZAM'S GOVERNMENT.—There is to be a good deal of reductions in the Government of H.H. the Nizam, effected from the month of Aban; nearly one lakh in the revenue survey and the same amount in the adawlots, &c. The lucky munsibdars are always free from these reductions, but hereafter they will have to pass examinations and go on service, if not after a certain term, no munsib will be given to them.—Bombay Gazette.

INDIAN GOLDMINING.—Another gold mining company—the Ripon—has issued its prospectus. The company proposes to raise four lakhs of capital to work such land in the Wynaad as may be selected hereafter, the right of selection over 30,000 acres situated in the auriferous districts having been secured. The prospectus says:—The concession is so large that some months must necessarily elapse before the numerous reefs of quartz that traverse the ground can be properly examined and the richest selected. It is therefore intended at present merely to call up one rupee per share and to wait until the two best blocks have been selected, reported on, and the gold-bearing quality of the quartz ascertained before proceeding further in the business. The reports, &c., will then be submitted to the shareholders at a general meeting of the company, when it will be decided whether the scheme should be carried out or not. In the event of the shareholders deciding not to proceed, the amount of deposit money paid will be returned less any expenses properly incurred. The following gentlemen form the provisional board of directors:—Messrs. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, J. Gordon, Ahmedbhoy, E. B. Carroll, Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, F. A. Little, Nanabhoj Byramjee Jeejeebhoy, Raghoonath Narayan Khote, Pooranchud Panalal, and C. H. B. Forbes.—Ibid.

THE GOA RAILWAY.—Latest news from Portugal states that the negotiations with the Stafford House Committee for the construction of the Goa Railway are progressing favourably, and in case of their early determination the work will be undertaken soon after the monsoon.—Ibid.

THE COURTS OF LAW IN SIND.—The Government of Bombay have issued a rule in the Judicial Department to set at rest the question which has been the cause of much contention between judges and lawyers in Sind as to the necessity for advocates to file a certain document authorising them to practice before they can appear in any case. Government declare that "no advocate of any high court established by royal charter shall be required by any criminal court to present any document empowering him to act for an accused person."—Ibid.

THE KUTCH REGENCY.—It may be interesting to recall the history of the Kutch Regency. The late Rao had a well-deserved reputation for shrewdness and foresight, and before he died, as his successor was a mere child, he embodied his wishes about the government of the State during the minority of his heir in his will. Some of these recommendations the Bombay Government were able to adopt, and the Queen-Regent fully acquiesced in the compromise between the wishes of the late Rao and the desires of the Government, which resulted in the establishment of a Council of Regency. This body consisted of five members. The Government were represented by the political agent, who occupied the post of president. The other members were the Dewan, as the native administrator of the State, a representative of the Durbar, a representative of the Bhyads, the most influential class in Kutch, and a representative of the people. The government thus became possessed of a larger share in the direct management of the State affairs than is usual in the political agencies, for the political agent virtually held the power of nominating all the other members. So long as Col. Barton remained president of the council, everything went smoothly enough. But with the appointment of Major Reeves, all manner of differences began to arise between the president and the other members of the Council, under the leadership of the Dewan. The hostility became so pronounced that these gentlemen formulated some sort of charge against Major Reeves, and asked for permission to be allowed to present it as a confidential document. By way of a reply, the Bombay Government moved the Dewan to his old appointment under the Baroda Residency, and asked the other members of the council to resign. At present, then, Major Reeves seems to stand in the place of the late Rao, as sole master, under the Government, of the affairs of Kutch. We presume, however, that Government will be satisfied with a change of the personnel in the Council, and that the system of administration hitherto in force will be allowed to continue.—Times of India.

THE RETIREMENT OF THE POSTS.—Major Jacob's report on the retirement to Chaman of the detachments from Abdul Rahman, Mel Karez, &c., which was recently published in the local Government Gazette, appears in last Saturday's Gazette of India, accompanied by a letter from General Phayre, bringing to the notice of his Excellency Sir Frederick Haines the soldierlike manner in which the difficult duty entrusted to Major Jacob was performed, and the services rendered by Lieut. F. B. G. D'Aguilar, R.E., and the signallers, Private Sawyer, 92nd Highlanders, and Private M'Kenna, 100th Foot. Sir Frederick Haines is pleased to say that the retirement was carried out with ability and judgment, and brings to the favourable notice of the Government of India Lieut. D'Aguilar and the men mentioned by Major Jacob. His Excellency the Viceroy in Council concurs with the Commander in Chief in regard to the manner in which the retirement was effected, and agrees with his Excellency's remarks regarding the behaviour of the officers and men concerned. It is not often Bombay troops get praise like this.—Ibid.

CAPTAIN CLAUDE CLERK, superintendent of the Nizam's education, has been obliged to go on leave owing to ill-health. He was on the staff of his father, Sir George Clerk, when the latter was Governor of Bombay.—Ibid.

MAHABLESHWUR TELEGRAPH OFFICE.—Mr. T. H. Stewart, collector of Sattara, writes:—As many residents of Bombay and other parts of the Presidency have hitherto been discouraged from visiting Mahabeshwur during the cold season owing to the absence of means of telegraphic communication, I think the public will be interested to learn, through your columns, that arrangements have been made to keep the Mahabeshwur telegraph office open from Oct. 1 to June 15 next, as an experimental measure. If the office prove self-supporting it will in future years be kept open for a like period.—Ibid.

SPANISH VICE-CONSUL.—His Excellency, the Governor General, has "recognised" the appointment of Mr. A. Blascheck as honorary vice-consul for Spain at Bombay.—Gazette.

THE PERAK WAR EXPENDITURE.

AT a recent meeting of the Straits Legislative Council, the Governor of the colony laid upon the table a despatch from Lord Kimberley, dated July 10, concerning the Perak War expenditure, in which his lordship consents that the amount of $298,882, locally spent upon the war, be retained as an asset to be recovered as convenient from Perak and Sungei Ujong, in the proportion of $248,000 from Perak and $51,000 from Sungei Ujong. Lord Kimberley, however, insists that no portion of the war expenditure shall remain charged to Imperial funds, and that, therefore, the sums advanced by the Indian and Imperial Governments, estimated at $550,000, must be repaid from the colonial treasury, in three annual instalments, and he emphatically expresses himself unable to consent to a recommendation of the Executive Council at Singapore, submitted by General Anson, "that the native States concerned should be required to refund the whole expense incurred for the suppression of the disturbances."—Times of India.

THE DEFEAT OF AYUB KHAN.

"KANDAHAR, SEPT. 2.

"The following is a fuller description of yesterday's action. General Hugh Gough's reconnaissance on August 31 had shown that the enemy were in great strength beyond the Baba Wali Kotal, and the Pir Paimal Ridge, which extends for about a mile south-west from the Baba Wali Kotal. This ridge is very precipitous on all sides, only winding footpaths leading to the crest, the highest point of which is over a thousand feet high. To the right or north-west of the Baba Wali Kotal is a higher precipitous range, broken by one pass called the Murcha Kotal, almost due north of the Kandahar city. Ayub Khan has placed three guns—viz., one of our 9-pounders and two Armstrong breech-loaders in position on the Baba Wali Kotal—a position of great strength naturally, as only two roads a few feet wide lead over it, both commanded perfectly from the near hills. Our spies had magnified the fortifications of this Kotal, assuring us that embrasures had been made, whereas only platforms had been made for the guns, which were fixed over the natural barrier of rock, with open spaces filled in with earthworks. The Kotal once in our hands, Ayub's position might be looked upon as forced, unless he had a second line of defence; and here again the reports furnished by the spies sent out by Col. St. John misled us. Ayub Khan was said to have formed an entrenched camp at Mazra and to have many guns in position there. From what we have since seen, he relied solely upon the strength of the Baba Wali Kotal and on our attacking him only in that direction. His camp was in itself quite defenceless. But as it was clear that a direct attack upon the Baba Wali Kotal would cause us heavy loss, and perhaps end in an actual repulse, Sir Frederick Roberts sent out a cavalry reconnaissance to examine the possibilities of the Pir Paimal route to Mazra. The Pir Paimal ridge ends abruptly on its south-western side, and on the open plain below are many walled enclosures and orchards, with several villages scattered in the direction of the Kakran and Herat roads. Innumerable watercuts and irrigation channels from the Argandab Canal usually serve to fertilise these and also supply Kandahar with water, but the supply having been cut off during the siege these channels were dry. This was all in our favour, although it was clearly seen that our troops would have some severe fighting in clearing the inclosures of the enemy. If, however, the south-west point of the ridge could be turned and the village of Pir Paimal on the lower slope be secured, the Baba Wali Kotal would become quite untenable, as it would be taken in reverse. Locked at from the city of Kandahar, or from Sir Frederick Robert's position near our cantonments, the Pir Paimal ridge presented nothing but a rocky barrier, the crest being lined with men. But beyond it was an open basin bounded on its further side by another high hill with precipitous sides facing Pir Paimal and a long sloping descent to the north, towards the Argandab Valley. To gain this open basin would involve the forcing of the village of Gandigan with all the walled enclosures previously mentioned, and also the capture of the Pir Paimal village itself. Ayub Khan's right rested on Gandigan and Pir Paimal, near which he had five guns in position, and his men filled all the enclosures, which were loopholed for musketry fire. About the water cuts were orchards and gardens, in which the undergrowth had sprung up most luxuriantly during the past month's neglect. In spite of these obstacles, it was resolved to force Ayub's right to take the Baba Wali Kotal in reverse, and then to advance upon his camp entrenched, or otherwise, at Mazra. Sir Frederick Roberts's position on the evening of August 31 was in rear of the pickets and karez hill, west of the cantonments, former face Baba Wali Kotal, and the latter runs parallel to the Pir Paimal Ridge for about half a mile. These orchards and enclosures stretch away from it to Gandigan and the Herat road. The position was within range of the enemy's guns on Baba Wali Kotal; but as their shells had to be pitched over protecting hills, no mischief was done by the few directed against the position. They were about of as much importance as stray bullets. Sir Frederick Robert's plan of attack was to shell and threaten an attack upon Baba Wali Kotal, while two brigades forced Ayub's right by way of the Gandigan and Pir Paimal villages; at the same time General Hugh Gough's Cavalry Brigade, crossing the Argandab River, was to cut off the fugitives as they retreated westwards towards Herat, or north westward to the Khakrez Valley.

Accordingly, yesterday morning, Sept. 1, our troops breakfasted at 7 a.m. and were formed up an hour later in the following order:—In the old Cavalry Lines at Kalacha-i-Haidar, facing the Baba Wali Kotal, were placed four 40-pounder breech loaders of 5-11 Royal Artillery Battery, under the escort of four companies of the 66th Foot and two native regiments, together with the Kandahar Cavalry Brigade under General Nuttall. This was part of the contingent furnished by the Kandahar Garrison; General Burrows being in command. Their duty was to threaten Baba Wali Kotal and watch the Murcha Kotal if the enemy tried to escape in that direction. Six guns of C-2 R. A. were also placed near the heavy battery. General Macpherson and General Baker's Brigades fell in behind the karez and picket hills respectively, while General Macgregor's Brigade was held in reserve on its camping ground. General Hugh Gough, with the Cavalry Brigade, consisting of the 9th Punjab Lancers, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, and the Central India Horse, was joined by four guns of E-B Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, under Major Tillard, and moved towards the Gandigan village; but could not reach the Argandab River as originally intended, Gandigan having been occupied during the night by the enemy in force. Our cavalry was to have moved simultaneously with the infantry, but had to wait until Gandigan was cleared. The Horse Artillery was escorted by two companies of the 7th Fusiliers and four companies of Native Infantry, from Kandahar. Sir Frederick Roberts, whose headquarters, on the previous day, had been in a large house formerly used by the Royal Engineers, moved out to the karez hill, General Primrose making the house his headquarters. General Ross had the immediate direction of our infantry attack, moving his troops as they advanced, and keeping Sir Frederick Roberts constantly informed of the progress made. Our infantry were admirably handled throughout the action. Shortly after nine o'clock our demonstration was made against the Baba Wali Kotal, the 40-pounders shelling the enemy's position there with great vigour. The enemy returned shot for shot; his fire, which had been before directed over the picket hill, now being concentrated on our heavy artillery. It is needless to say that his guns were no match for ours, and his fire soon slackened. General Macpherson's brigade, consisting of the 92nd Highlanders, 2nd Goorkhas, 23rd Pioneers, and 25th Punjabis, worked out into the gardens between the karez hill and the Pir Paimal Ridge; the village of Mullah Sahibdad, at the foot of the southern slope of the ridge, being held by a large body of Afghans, who would have galled General Baker's right in his advance upon Gandigan. At 9.15, two guns of C-2 Royal Artillery began shelling Sahibdad; the rest of the battery soon after coming into action, as well as the screw guns placed to the north of the karez hill. The enemy responded with rifle fire, while the 92nd and 2nd Goorkhas skirmished towards the village from the right, the 23rd Regt. working to the left with the 24th in support. The village was taken by the 92nd Highlanders and the Goorkhas with a rush, at half-past 10; many Ghazis fighting desperately and inflicting a severe loss upon our troops. Even when the village had been stormed, the fanatics shut themselves up in rooms, whence some of them were not dislodged until nightfall. Lieutenants Menzies and Donald Stewart were wounded in this first attack. Lieutenant Menzies was placed in a doolie and carried into a room out of the sun. A Ghazi, hidden in the room, made a rush, cut down one of the guard, and slashed Lieutenant Menzies over the head and on the back. The fanatic was bayoneted before he could do further mischief. In the meantime General Baker, with the 72nd Highlanders, 5th Goorkhas, 2nd and 3rd Sikhs, and the 2nd Biluchis, had begun to clear Gandigan and the enclosures protecting Ayub's right. Here a most desperate resistance was made; every orchard and enclosure being full of the enemy. The 72nd Highlanders and 2nd Sikhs formed General Baker's first line, with the 5th Goorkhas and 3rd Sikhs in immediate support, together with the 2nd Biluchis again in the left rear. Our troops advanced steadily, clearing all before them; the 72nd Highlanders and 2nd Sikhs having to meet several charges made by Ghazis, who, however, were swept away by volleys, sometimes at a few paces distance. The right wing of the 72nd Highlanders had the hardest work in the nullahs and water-cuts. In one of these the two leading companies found themselves enfiladed from loopholed walls on the left. Captain Frome and two or three men were shot while their companies lay down to return the fire. The 2nd Sikhs were in rear of the loopholed wall, clearing the enclosure of the enemy. Before this was quite done, Colonel Brownlow came up, and seeing how his men were placed ordered them to push on further. He had scarcely given the order when a bullet struck him in the neck and he died in a few minutes. The enemy were driven out by this advance, leaving the walled enclosures strewn with dead. The left wing of the 72nd Highlanders, with the 3rd Sikhs, 5th Goorkhas, and 2nd Biluchis, made a wide sweep to the left while this was going on, and were shelled by five guns which the enemy had in position at the entrance to the Pir Paimal basin. In the meantime the 92nd Highlanders, under Colonel Parker, and two companies of the 2nd Goorkhas, under Captain Becher, had hugged the slope of the Pir Paimal Ridge; C-2 R.A. and the screw battery coming into action in support, Major White, with the advanced line of the 92nd Highlanders, now swept round the south-western end of the ridge and came upon the main body of Ayub's force in the open. The enemy were some thousands strong, scattered along the northern slope of the Pir Paimal, right up to the Baba Wali Kotal, and also clustering thickly in the small camp where the guns were in position. The 92nd Highlanders and the 2nd Goorkhas were then perfectly secure on both flanks; the steep ridge protecting their right, while General Baker's brigade was working up on the left, the 23rd Pioneers being just able to join hands with the advanced regiments of General Macpherson's brigade. Major White and Captain Becher therefore went straight at the mass of men in front, and after a sharp fight, in which both regiments were severely punished, Ayub Khan's army broke and fled in utter confusion, leaving the guns where they stood. The screw gun battery shelled them, while General Baker's brigade swung round and went straight up the basin over the low ridge which hid Mazra and Ayub's headquarters from view. The enemy made no second stand; but evacuated Baba Wali Kotal. They left their guns and ammunition waggons on the road; the artillerymen mounting their horses and riding hard up the Argandab Valley. By one o'clock Ayub Khan's camp was in our hands; and with it were taken thirty-two guns. Our success was marred by the discovery of the cruel murder of Lieut. MacLaine. Five men of Jacob's rifles, who were recovered (they had probably been taken prisoners by Ayub at Khush-ki-Nakhud), said that Ayub Khan fled at 11.30 a.m., and that soon after the officer was brought out by his guard, and his throat cut in the most deliberate way. Poor MacLaine was weak from illness, and submitted quietly to his fate without a struggle. While our infantry were forcing Pir Paimal, General Hugh Gough's Cavalry Brigade had made a wide detour to the left. Finding it impossible to get through Gandigan they crossed the Argandab River, where they came upon detached bodies of fugitives. For fifteen miles the pursuit was kept up, over 300 of the enemy being killed in repeated charges. The return was only ordered when some of the fugitives had escaped to the hills. It was ten o'clock at night before the last cavalry regiment reached camp. General Nuttall took two cavalry regiment of his brigade, passed through Ayub's camp, and followed the enemy up the Argandab Valley, killing about 100. Our casualties are 240—viz., 33 killed, 196 wounded. The 92nd Highlanders have lost 14 killed, 66 wounded.

HOME NEWS.

THE INDIA MUSEUM.—We announced some time since that the Science and Art Department proposed to depute an officer to India to make purchases of Indian art objects to complete the collections exhibited at the India Museum, South Kensington. We are now able to announce that Mr. Caspar Purdon Clarke has been appointed to this mission, and that he will leave for India on Oct. 7. A fund of about £8,000 has been placed at his disposal, of which £3,000 has been contributed by the India-office, this sum being the unexpended balance of the money received on account of the exhibition of the Prince of Wales's Indian presents in 1876, and expressly reserved by his Royal Highness for the purpose of promoting the interests of Indian art. Mr. C. Purdon Clarke has been furnished with instructions drawn up by Dr. George Birdwood, C.S.I., of the India-office, and will be placed during his visit to India on the footing of an officer of the Indian Government. He will make purchases in particular of the metal work of Madras and Cashmere, the wood carving of Ahmedabad and Canara, the pottery of Madura and Mooltan, and the textile fabrics of Masulipatam, Jeypore, Dacca, Lucknow, Delhi, Ahmedabad, Sindh, Bangalore, Malabar, and Central India. Mr. Clarke's intimate knowledge of Oriental art and his practical success in the expositions of the Indian Court at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, and more recently of the India Museum on its transfer to the administration of the Science and Art Department, are a sufficient guarantee of the success of his new undertaking, the results of which are anticipated with the keenest interest by those who have become acquainted with it both in this country and on the Continent.

INDIA AND ENGLISH ART.—We are informed that Rajah Sir T. Madhava Rao, K.C.S.I., the well-known Minister of his Highness the Gaecwar, has invited Mr. J. T. Nettlehip to visit Gujerat as the guest of the Baroda State, in order that he may make studies and pictures from the wild animals, hunting scenes, &c., for which the place is famous.

DIAMONDS IN INDIA.—In a paper in the forthcoming number of the "Journal of the Scientific Proceedings of the Royal Dublin Society," Mr. V. Ball, of the Geological Survey of India, gives an account of the mode of occurrence of diamonds in India and of their distribution, and adds references to the most important authorities on the subject. There are in India three extensive tracts, widely separated from one another, in which the diamond has been sought for. The most southern of these has long borne a familiar name, which is, however, to a certain extent, a misnomer. There are no diamond mines in Golconda. This name, originally applied to a capital town, now represented by a deserted fort in the neighbourhood of Hyderabad, seems to have been used for a whole kingdom, but the town itself was many miles distant from the nearest of the diamond mines, and it was only the mart where the precious stones were bought and sold. The second great tract occupies an immense area between the Mahanunda and the Godavery Rivers; and the third great tract is situated in Bundelcund, near the capital of which, Punnah, some of the principal mines are to be found. The work of the Geological Survey has demonstrated that the diamonds occur in the Vindhyan rocks of Northern India. In the upper division of this formation there is a group of clay slate (Rewah), and in the lower a group of sandstone (Semri), in both of which diamond-bearing beds are met with. It is still very doubtful, however, if a diamond has yet been found in India in its original matrix. Mr. Ball gives an account of the chief mines, describing in detail, from personal observation, that of Sambalpur, which has now for some time ceased to be productive. The Punnah mines are still productive, yielding a mean annual produce of between £40,000 and £60,000 a year. Europeans have attempted diamond-mining in each of these three tracts, but in no one instance have their operations been attended with success, and yet there does not appear to be the least ground for supposing that there has been any real exhaustion of the localities where mining is possible. In diamond-mining there must necessarily be a considerable amount of individual handwork. There are immense facilities for speculation. It would almost seem that to work it profitably a system of slavery must be adopted. It is, therefore, to be distinctly understood that, except by a mere chance, diamond-mining will not prove a rapid road to fortune. Still, writes Mr. King, "For those content with a slowly-paying occupation and a hard life, involving close personal supervision of the workers, it would pay, provided such persons possessed capital sufficient to last them a few years."

OBITUARY.—The death of Major G. F. Blackwood, commanding E Battery B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, adds another name to the roll of gallant Scotch officers who have fallen in the Afghan campaign. George Frederick Blackwood was born in 1838, the second son of the late Major William Blackwood, of the Bengal Army, and a grandson of the founder of the well-known publishing house of that name. His maternal grandfather was Brigadier G. F. Moore, for many years colonel of the 59th Bengal Native Infantry, which in his days was a nursery of many officers who afterwards rose to high distinction in the service. George Blackwood was educated at the Edinburgh Academy, and afterwards passed to Addiscombe, where he made choice of the artillery branch of the Bengal Service. He was gazetted a lieutenant on Dec. 11, 1857, and was soon hurried out to India, where he served in the suppression of the mutiny with the Rohilkund Movable Column, under the command of Lieut. Col. Wilkinson, 42nd Royal Highlanders. In this force Blackwood was entrusted with the command of two guns. His services here led to a divisional adjutancy of artillery, the duties of which he discharged from 1859 to 1862 at Bareilly and Gwalior. From November, 1862, to December, 1863, he acted as adjutant of the 22nd Brigade R.A., and afterwards as adjutant of the 19th Brigade until September, 1864. He received his captaincy in February, 1867, and was selected for the command of the artillery in the Looshai expedition, under Brigadier General Bouchier, C.B. Captain Blackwood was present at the attacks on Tipai Mukh, Kungnung, and Taikooni, and earned the praise of General Bouchier, who, in his despatch, dated March 19, 1872, wrote as follows:—"Captain Blackwood and officers of Royal Artillery nobly sustained the reputation of the corps. The word 'difficulty' was unknown to them." Captain Blackwood's report upon the artillery in the Looshai campaign contained many valuable suggestions as to the nature of the gun most suitable for such service, and on the management of artillery and the equipment of elephants in mountain, jungle, and morass campaigning; and was printed and published by the Government of India. His services in this expedition were rewarded with a brevet majority in September, 1872. He afterwards commanded a battery of the Royal Horse Artillery during the absence in England of Major and Lieut. Col. Hills, C.B. Obligated to take sick leave to England, he was prevented from sharing in the first part of the Afghan war, but after the massacre at Cabul he was moved up to Kandahar, in command of the E Battery B Brigade. On the advance of Ayub Khan, he was ordered out in command of the artillery under General Burrows, and correspondence from Kandahar speaks of the high state of efficiency in which his gunners took the field. In the action with the mutinous troops of the Wali the artillery distinguished themselves in the punishment of the rebels, and General Primrose reports that "the determined energy with which the artillery was brought up to the front reflects the highest credit on Major G. F. Blackwood." Of the battle of Khush-i-Nakhud the details are as yet so fragmentary that we cannot profess to speak with accuracy; but the aspects of the field, when visited by the burial parties, showed that the artillery had made a desperate struggle, had fought like heroes, and had inflicted a terrible punishment upon Ayub Khan's forces. The position in which Major Blackwood's body was found indicated that he had fallen during the last gallant stand made by our troops against the enemy. The following passage in a private letter from a distinguished officer lately holding high command in Afghanistan may be taken to represent the estimation in which Major Blackwood was held throughout the service:—"Blackwood's death weighs also most heavily on all his brother officers and friends, not one of whom but deeply regrets his loss, not only as a personal one, but also as a public one to the regiment and army, for no better officer ever entered the service."—Col. E. H. C. Simpson, 4th Bengal Cavalry, who retired from the regiment last year, died on Sept. 26, at Raby Hall, Monkstown, Ireland, aged forty-seven years. The deceased entered the Indian Army in December, 1850, and was promoted lieutenant colonel in December, 1876. He served in the Indian mutiny of 1857-58; accompanied Havelock's force from its first taking the field, in July, 1857, and was present at the actions of Futtehpoore, Cawnpore, Bithoor, relief of the garrison of Lucknow, and subsequent defence of the Residency, until relieved by Lord Clyde in November, 1857; served afterwards at the defence of the Alumbagh under Outram until October, 1858, including the repulse of numerous attacks on that position; also at the final siege, assault, and capture of Lucknow (mentioned in despatches, medal with two clasps, and a year's service).

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

Ash's "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines, from 50s. each.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

Ash's Freezing Powders, 34s. per cwt., or in Boxes at 11s., 22s., and 40s. each.

THE SELF-FEEDING REFRIGERATOR.

PATENTED BY MR. CLARKE
ASH, 1872.

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, a uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cures short attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF FRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE-WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 10d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S
OVERSTRUNG
GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between. All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Sept. 25; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 23; Calcutta, Sept. 22.

THE following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 14:—Rain has again been general during the week; it was specially abundant in the Bombay Presidency, Berar, Hyderabad, and the Central India States. In British Burma and Assam prospects continue satisfactory. Moderate rain in Bengal and intervals of sunny weather have been very favourable for the crops; and the autumn harvesting has commenced. In Madras, Mysor, and Coorg prospects remain fair; in some places in Madras crops have been harvested, with an average outturn. In Bombay rain has been general and plentiful; prospects have much improved throughout the Presidency, as well as in Sind, where the Indus is rising. In Hyderabad and Berar also good rain has fallen, with much benefit to the crops. In the Central Provinces rain was fairly general, though limited in the Satpura districts; prospects are now satisfactory. General, and in parts heavy, rain fell in Central India and Rajputana; and though more is required in a few places, on the whole prospects are favourable. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, where the crops had already been injured to some extent by drought, good rain has fallen in all but the south-eastern districts, and has gone far to relieve anxiety. There were slight showers in most districts of the Punjab; and prospects are fair except in the districts of the Delhi and Hissar divisions, where the rainfall has been insufficient. Prospects are now either good or fair in most parts of the Empire, though more rain is still required, particularly in portions of the North-Western Provinces and of the Punjab. The long break has injured the crops in many places, but the favourable rain which has fallen during the past fortnight has lessened or removed the apprehensions of drought and scarcity that were felt in some provinces.

THE health report for the same week is as follows:—Bombay: some fever in Karachi and Hyderabad; other reports good. Bengal: seasonal fever prevails in some places, otherwise public health good; cholera still reported in Cuttack and small-pox in Pooree and south of Balasore. North West Provinces and Oudh: general health good, but fever still prevalent in Agra and Kumaun, and cholera continues in Bareilly. Punjab: good. Central Provinces: health on the whole good; cholera abating in Sambalpur, but fever and small-pox prevalent in Jubbulpore and Saugor, and fever in Nagpur. British Burma: good. Assam: reports good. Central India States: cholera continues in Morar, otherwise good. Rajputana: Sirohi, malarious fever; elsewhere reports favourable.

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 7.—St. John, telegraphing from Kandahar, 4th, reports all quiet there. Ayub Khan said to have reached and entered Herat, having left Sirdars Mahomed Hashim Khan as Governor Furrah, and Mahomed Hassan Khan at Sabzw. The Zamindawar people are quiet. Helmund Barakzais also quiet. Corporal Donald M'Phail, 92nd Highlanders, died of wounds received at Mazra."

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 12.—Reported from Peshawur that Mahomed Jan came in to Ameer on 2nd. Roberts telegraphs from Quetta that, owing to reports of Murrees and Bugtis collected to raid on Sind frontier, small force, under Col. Norman, has been ordered to Sibi to strengthen frontier posts and protect railway."

THIS week's telegram states that cholera still hangs about the troops returning from Cabul. The 67th Regiment had been halted at Hassan Abdul owing to the appearance of some cases; but the regiment has now been free from the disease for some days. The force which intended to halt at Hassan Abdul will be broken up, and General Gib, who was to have the command, is returning to Madras. The Lawrencepoore Camp is free from cholera; but it seems likely that it will also be broken up. The 8th Hussars arrived at Rawul Pindee last week, and relieved the 10th Hussars, who march to Lahore to join the Vice-regal Camp. The 1st and 4th Madras Infantry have passed Rawul Pindee on their homeward march. The E Battery of the Royal Horse Artillery has marched for India.

THE following telegram, dated Kandahar yesterday, appears in to-day's Standard:—

"Continued rumours are current in the city to the effect that Persian and Turcoman assistance is being given to Ayub to continue his preparations for another campaign. His chief want at present is money. The Mollahs are hard at work exciting the population and denouncing downheartedness and want of confidence. Ayub is regarded as a popular hero returned from having gained a great victory over the Kaffirs. His defeat is regarded as a mere trifling incident by the side of the glory of his victory. A European sentry was killed yesterday by a Ghazi deserter from the 23rd Bombay Infantry. The man was a native of the Punjab. This is the second case of the sort during the week. Sickness is upon the increase. Fifteen per cent of the Europeans and ten per cent of the natives are ill, mostly with dysentery, but some with small-pox. Major Oliver, of the 66th, has died of the latter malady.

GENERAL ROBERTS will leave for India about the 30th, when General Phayre will assume the command in Southern Afghanistan. General Primrose has been recalled to England, and General Burrows and Nuttall to India. Colonel St. John is at Quetta, where he will meet the Foreign Secretary. Mr. Lyall, the Foreign Secretary, has so far recovered from his illness that he has determined to push on to Kandahar. He left Lahore last week.

VAGUE rumours regarding the oppressive acts alleged to have been perpetrated by Abdurrahman at Cabul have found their way into some Indian papers. These stories, however, are not authenticated, and must be received with caution.

THE Queen has expressed to the Viceroy her sincere distress on hearing of the sad calamity at Naini Tal.

A LETTER to Lord Ripon states that her Majesty, having been informed that India subscribed £3,660 to the Princess Alice Memorial Fund, has expressed "her sincere appreciation of this gratifying mark of loyalty to herself and sympathy with her in her grief."

THE Indian papers contain the following programme of the Viceregal tour:—The Viceroy leaves Simla on the 28th, accompanied by Sir D. Stewart, Mr. H. W. Primrose, private secretary, Major White, military secretary, Major Nisbet, deputy commissioner of Simla, and three aides de camp. He reaches Nahan on the 31st, and accepts hospitality from the Raja of Sirmoor. At Mazra, on the 2nd of November, he will be joined by Mr. Ross, the superintendent of the Dun, and reaches Dehra on the 5th. After the shooting excursion, he reaches Lahore about the 10th, and holds a levee and a durbar as already announced. He will leave Lahore on or about the 15th for Mooltan, stay there on the 17th, and leave in the evening for Bhawalpore and Jacobabad. Thence he proposes to go up the new railway as far as Sibi, and then returning to Jacobabad he proceeds to Karachi, whence, after a stay of two days he will come by steamer to Bombay, arriving here on the 29th of November. He starts from Bombay on the 4th of December, and goes right through to Calcutta, without further delays. It is thought likely that there will be some investiture ceremonies at the durbar.

THE Secretary of State has, it is said, sanctioned the erection of the new Government House at Simla projected by Lord Lytton.

THE RIGHT HON. W. P. ADAM, who leaves England shortly to assume the Governorship of Madras, has selected Captain Curzon Wyllie (now politically employed in Afghanistan), son of General Sir William Wyllie, G.C.B., to be his military secretary.

A GAZETTE extraordinary was published at Simla on Sept. 13 containing the following notification:—A vacancy having occurred in the office of an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor General of India by the resignation of General the Hon. Sir Edwin Beaumont Johnson, R.A., K.C.B., C.I.E., her Majesty the Queen, Empress of India, has been graciously pleased to appoint Lieut. General Sir Donald Martin Stewart, K.C.B., to be an ordinary member of the said council. Lieut. General Sir D. M. Stewart has this day, under the usual salute, taken his seat as an ordinary member of the Governor General's Council.

COL. GEORGE CHESNEY, R.E., President of the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's-hill, has been offered, and has accepted, the appointment of secretary to the Government of India, Military Department. Col. Chesney is expected to leave for India immediately. Colonel Johnson, the Military Secretary, will vacate his appointment on his arrival at Bombay with the Viceroy about the end of November.

It is said to be in contemplation by the corporation of London to confer the freedom of the City, with a sword, upon General Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., in recognition of his distinguished services in the army. A like compliment has been paid in recent years to Sir Garnet Wolseley, Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir John Burgoyne, Lord Clyde, Sir James Outram, and others.

MR. STOKES has obtained leave to introduce to the Supreme Council a Bill enabling the Government to issue loan certificates payable to the bearer with coupons, in the place of the present system of promissory notes payable to order.

THE Nawab of Joonaghur has contributed a thousand pounds to the Bombay Military Relief Fund.

THE attempt of Count Czechenyi to travel from China via Lob Nor and Thibet has failed, the traveller having been turned back by Thibetans as he approached the borders of Thibet.

AT the wish of Admiral Ryder, Commander in Chief at Portsmouth, the Duke of Buckingham has started a fund in Madras on behalf of the families of the seamen lost in the Atalanta.

DURING the month of September the number of visitors to the India Museum was 12,824; the highest number in one week being 3,479, during the week ending the 11th; and the lowest, 3,063, in the following week. Since the opening, on May 15, 104,905 visitors have been recorded.

A TELEGRAM from Rangoon, dated Monday, states that a thousand men armed with rifles had assembled, with the avowed intention of attacking Allammyo, opposite Thyetmyo. Fuller particulars are given in a telegram from the Standard correspondent at that place.

"Affairs have suddenly assumed a warlike aspect here. For some time but little news had arrived from Mandalay, and it was supposed that, although diplomatic relations had not been resumed, things were likely to continue in their present state. It now appears that the King, rendered arrogant by the easy suppression of the futile attempt at rebellion got up by Prince Nyoungoke, has been preparing for a war with us. Two detachments of the King's regular troops have arrived at the frontier, and have taken up their posts on the banks of the river facing each other. The one is seven hundred and fifty, and the other three hundred strong. The attitude of these troops is arrogant and insolent in the extreme, and they give out ostentatiously that they are about to attack our territory in retaliation for Prince Nyoungoke's attempt to incite insurrection in Burmah. It is stated that they are in daily expectation of the arrival of reinforcements of a thousand men under a general, with a messenger from the King, with instructions to demand from the British Government an indemnity for the losses suffered by Burmese subjects from the expedition of Prince Nyoungoke, and that, failing to obtain the indemnity, they will at once cross our frontier and attack us. It is reported that the Burmese intend blocking the channel of the river shortly to prevent the upward passage of our gunboats. Two companies of a native infantry have been ordered up from Nyatoung to protect the villages most exposed to attack, and to support the detachment at Allammyo."

THE Burmese account for the assembling of troops on the frontier by saying it is due to the number of dacoities, and also to the rumour that the Nyoungyan has escaped from Calcutta, which is untrue. The Allammyo garrison has been strengthened. The Simla view of the matter is expressed in a telegram, which says that the reports published by a London morning paper of an expected attack by the Burmese troops on the British garrison at Allamtyo are greatly exaggerated. There is no cause for alarm, the latest news received from Mandalay showing that there is nothing to indicate the probability of disturbances.

THE Standard is informed that Major Beresford Lovett, C.S.I., is about to proceed to Astrabad as our Consul, in succession to Colonel St. John, now on special service in Afghanistan.

PROFESSOR MONIER WILLIAMS has just returned from Berlin, where he has been making inquiries as to the arrangements for the reception of English Orientalists at the Congress to be held in that capital next year.

SIR THOMAS WADE, her Majesty's representative in China, has issued an important communication, reminding such of her Majesty's subjects as take an interest in the question of military service in China, of the existence of certain regulations which he thinks may be overlooked by those publicists who have been dealing with the matter of late. He refers such to section 5 of the Order in Council, 1865, for the Government of her Majesty's subjects in China and Japan, the section relating to war, insurrection, and rebellion, and appends to his public note a reprint of paragraphs 81 and 82 of the Order, which prohibit, under serious penalties, engagement, whether for or against the Emperor of China, in war between his Imperial Majesty and any enemy, domestic or foreign. This notification was supposed to be aimed at Colonel Gordon specially. Colonel Gordon pointed out that he was far from being a firebrand, and that there were other Englishmen in China to whom these articles might be more appropriately commended than himself, Mr. Robert Hart, for instance, who has been taking a very active part in preparing the country for war.

COL. SIR WILLIAM L. MEREWETHER, K.C.S.I., C.B., Bombay S.C., died suddenly on the night of the 3rd inst.; so unexpected was the sad event that Sir William had made preparations for proceeding to Southampton to meet his old friend, Sir Bartle Frere, on his return from South Africa. The deceased, who was a member of the Council of India, became a second lieutenant in the Bombay Army in March, 1841. He served in Sind with the 21st Regiment of Native Infantry in 1842 and 1843, and was present at the battle of Hyderabad (medal). Two years later he fought in the campaign in the Southern Mahratta country, and in 1847 he was with the Sind Irregular Horse on the frontier of Upper Sind. Here, in command of a party of 132 men, Lieut. Merewether defeated a large body of Bugtis. In 1848 and 1849 he was with a detachment of the Sind Irregular Horse with the army of the Punjab at the siege and surrender of Mooltan, the battle of Gujerat, and the pursuit and surrender of the Sikhs. (Medal with two clasps.) He served on the frontier of Sind from 1847 to 1862, and, having got his company in 1856, successfully held the frontier during 1857, and crushed an extensive rebellion projected by the Beluchi and Brahni tribes. In addition to the military distinctions which he had gained, Captain Merewether had shown great prudence and skill in political negotiations. He was made a C.B. in 1860, and in 1865 was appointed political agent and resident at Aden. In this capacity he was present at the operations against the Fohdli tribe of Arabo, including the skirmishes at Bir Saed, Ahmodra, and destruction of Shugra, and, having conducted the negotiations with King Theodore from 1866 to 1868, he accompanied Lord Napier's expedition to Magdala. He was appointed chief commissioner of Sind in 1868, and afterwards became a member of the Indian Council.

THE Times of India states that the court of inquiry had suspended Major Currie, 3rd Bombay Cavalry, and Col. Malcolmson, 3rd Sind Horse. This points to a thorough investigation of the causes that led to the retreat of Maiwand. It was hoped that the inquiry would also be directed to the false information supplied to General Burrows.

A LETTER communicated to the Times by the brother of the writer who served with the Bombay Cavalry at Maiwand, gives details of the action which constitute a very fair defence for the fact "bitterly" recorded by General Nuttall, that the cavalry, when called upon to charge at a critical moment, failed—in fact, refused, to charge. The writer describes how the cavalry had stood for four hours exposed to a murderous fire, which had killed and wounded half their horses and a fourth of their men, and they were quite demoralised. What ensued upon the retirement of the guns for want of ammunition, and the retreat of the infantry, is best told in the words of the writer:—

"Then Burrows rode up to Nuttall and said, 'The only chance now, to give our retreating infantry time to retire in an orderly manner and to rally a bit, is for the cavalry to charge the line of Ghazis in the rear.' The 3rd Cavalry and 3rd Sind Horse, who were nearest, amounting, I suppose, to about 100 sabres, led by their officers, Nuttall, and myself, then advanced. I saw how hesitating their manner was, and that they did not like the job; instead of going straight to their front and trying to smash clean through the line of Ghazis, they stopped short with a small band who were actually inside the Grenadier square, cutting the men down, and as soon as they had disposed of these they wheeled to the right about and retired without orders, in spite of their officers. As soon as we could get them together again, a desperate attempt was made to get them to advance once more; but it was of no avail; they were quite demoralised by the heavy fire they had stood for four hours, and would not face the right way. The battle was then, of course, clean lost. The cavalry retired very steadily at a walk, and the infantry 'legged it' as fast as they could away from the Ghazis."

THE military career of Sir W. L. Merewether is in itself a record of good service done by the Bombay Cavalry and Sind Horse. The service demands a full inquiry, that "the right shoulders be found to lay the blame on." The whole narrative of the defeat of Maiwand, and of the sortie against Deh Khoja, is an impeachment, not of the conduct of this or the other regiment, but of the leading, which it would be, if the unvarnished statement of facts be true, a cruel mockery to call generalship. The Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta that all accounts agree as to the demoralisation prevailing among the Kandahar garrison at the date of General Roberts's arrival, and it is even stated that General Primrose would not allow the British flag to be hoisted lest it should attract the enemy's fire. The Kandahar correspondent speaks in the strongest terms of the effect produced on the natives, which even Roberts's victory did not repair.

THE remarks as to the previous services of the general commanding the cavalry brigade call for an exact statement of those services. Brigadier General Thomas Nuttall, Bombay S.C., commanding the cavalry, Kandahar Field Force, obtained his first commission 29th N.I. in 1845, and his captaincy in 1856. He served with the Persian Expeditionary Force in 1857, and was present at the bombardment and capture of the forts of Mohumra and pursuit of the Persian army (medal with clasp); was in command of detachments of police in the Deccan and Concan against rebel Bheels, Peint rebels, &c., in 1857-58-59, including the relief of Peint and skirmish there; engagement at Wassiembrein (had two horses wounded under him), Tursia Doonjur; skirmish and pursuit of the Bheels over the Ohupurgam Hills, and engagement of Ambora Durria (horse twice wounded); received on five occasions the commendation of Government; served in the Abyssinian campaign as second in command of the Land Transport Corps (mentioned in despatches, brevet of Lieutenant Colonel, and medal); in 1878 he was commandant of the Sind Frontier Force.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India gives the list of the casualties of the 3rd Bombay Cavalry, of which about 250 sabres were in action:—Killed, one European officer, twenty-six non-commissioned officers and men; wounded, two European officers and sixteen non-commissioned officers and men. Fifty-nine horses were killed and forty-two wounded.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE's work on "India in 1880," which, as we stated some time ago, Mr. Murray promises for the ensuing season, will deal with such topics as the following:—Progress, moral and material, of the natives; national education; religious missions; native states and chiefships; official classes, European and native; non-official Europeans; law and legislation; revenues; canals and irrigation; roads and railways; products, agricultural and industrial; commerce, internal and external; famines; public health and sanitation; physical science; learned research; foreign relations; armies; navy and marine; finances; and statistical summary. In an introduction Sir Richard will point out the claims that India has on the attention of Englishmen, and his final chapter will be devoted to discussing the effects and prospects of British rule.

THE analytical index to Col. Malleson's "History of the Indian Mutiny," which has been compiled by Mr. F. Pincott, will shortly be published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. This will more than supply the want of an index to facilitate reference to this valuable work.

A MAN-EATING tiger, which had killed no less than fifty human beings during the last three years, has been shot at Chakrata.

THE net Indian sea and land customs for the first five months of the financial year have amounted to Rs.88,77,000, against Rs.80,37,000 in 1879.

A NOTIFICATION has been issued from the Board of Revenue, Bengal, that from November 4, 1880, to October, 1881, a total of Rs.56,400 chests of opium will be offered for sale.

DURING the week ending September 11 there were 185 deaths in Calcutta, being a death-rate of 22.4 per 1,000 per annum. In Madras for the same week the deaths numbered 258, a death-rate of 38.7 per 1,000 per annum. During the week ending the 14th deaths in Bombay numbered 442, being a death-rate of 32.51 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India contains the following obituary of the week:—The Maharaja of Jeypore; Colonel R. Jenkins, C.B. (1st Bengal Cavalry); Colonel Ponsonby Cox, R.E.; Mr. J. E. Short; Mr. G. E. Whiteside; Colonel Taylor, R.E.; Mr. L. Taylor, C.S.; and many others by the land-slip at Naini Tal.

A TELEGRAM from Bombay announces the death at Sibi, Afghanistan, of Lieut. Col. James John Collins, commanding the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles. Colonel Collins, who is stated to have fallen a victim to dysentery, had commanded his battalion since August, 1878, and was with it throughout the Afghan war, including the occupation of Kandahar, the advance on Ghuznee, battle of Ahmed Kheyl, advance on Cabul, and march from Northern Afghanistan to Kandahar, when his regiment formed part of Sir Frederick Roberts's 3rd Infantry Brigade. He had been frequently mentioned in despatches for his services, and he would no doubt have been duly rewarded when the honours for the successful operations under General Roberts are gazetted. The deceased was one of four brothers in her Majesty's service. By his death Major Algar, who was with the rifles in the Indian Mutiny and China campaigns, succeeds to the command of the 2nd Battalion.

SIR DONALD STEWART ON THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

At the meeting held at Simla on Sept. 14 Sir Donald Stewart made an important speech, in the course of which he said:—

"There are three classes of people who will benefit by this fund. These are the widows and children of British soldiers—I fancy also British soldiers themselves who have been maimed, and the widows and children of our native soldiers, or those who have been maimed, with their families. You all know that the Government does its duty by all those classes, except one, and, even with regard to that, it does its duty. The family of the British soldier who is killed gets nothing; therefore his widow and children are objects who ought to benefit by this fund. The man who has lost a leg or an arm is pensioned and has a small sum of money to start him in business—a pension small, it is true, but still enough for him to live upon. Then as regards native soldiers, every man who dies in war or who is killed in action is allowed by the regulations of the service to nominate an heir. He can nominate his son, daughter, wife, father, or mother during his life-time, but it is only one of these that gets the pension. Of course, children only get it till they arrive at a certain age; mothers and fathers receive it to their death. The only class which really comes on this fund in large numbers is the families of followers. These are greatly to be pitied; there is no pension for them whatever; but I think there is a misapprehension as to the number of persons who will come upon this fund under that class. I daresay you have all read in the newspapers that the ground from Mooltan to Kandahar, for example, is white with the bones of those unfortunate followers. I made inquiry into this matter very carefully, and have discovered that two men did die and were found on the roadside; but, still, that would not cover the whole space which I have indicated. We were also abused for not providing them with various other comforts; at the beginning of the war there was a good deal of difficulty in supplying everything the Government intended to give. Every exertion was used, but notwithstanding that the men in some cases were sent very ill-provided into the field, and a large number of them consequently suffered. But, perhaps, you will be surprised to hear—I have not got the statistics correct to the end of the war, and I am now talking about the first period of the war—that it can be shown that the number of followers who died was less than the number of fighting men, taking them at a percentage. Now that, I think, speaks for itself as to the care taken by the Government, both as to the selection of the men that went into the field and the manner they were taken care of after they got there. This is a point to which I specially draw attention on account of the many misrepresentations made upon the subject, and the abuse put upon the Government in consequence of their supposed neglect. As I said before, this perhaps does not bear much upon the resolution, but it will enable subscribers to understand what we are about—that is, to assist the families of soldiers who have been killed in action and those who are maimed, and mainly the families of followers and those who have died and will get no provision whatever from the State."

MR. LEPEL GRIFFIN ON AFGHAN POLICY.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs that Mr. Lepel Griffin, prior to his departure from Simla, was entertained at a dinner by a large party of his Punjab friends, Mr. Acheson presiding. He took occasion to deliver a speech, which has caused some sensation. He spoke most hopefully of the Cabul settlement, and said that the Ameer was rapidly creating a stable administration, and that his position was much strengthened by Ayub's defeat. The Cabul policy inaugurated by the Conservative Government had been energetically carried to a conclusion by the present Viceroy. He attached no importance to the criticism that the Ameer was a protégé of Russia. Shere Ali was ruined through ignorance. Abdurrahman possesses complete knowledge, and those who knew Russia best would like her least. The criticism on the withdrawal from Cabul was, he went on to say, as foolish as it was unworthy of Englishmen, Sir Donald Stewart could not have supported General Roberts, and it was well known that General Roberts would meet with no opposition before reaching Ghazni. To have left an army at Cabul would have made the Ameer unpopular with his subjects. As to the talk about annexation, he could only thank God that the destinies of the country were not yet entrusted to crack-brained enthusiasts, who fancied it high and Imperial policy for the Government to drag its coat through Asia for a barbarian to trample upon. This speech has been generally condemned by the Press and by public opinion, and it is universally felt that Mr. Griffin showed a want of tact and of taste in this sweeping denunciation of the policy which has the approval of nearly the whole Anglo-Indian community.

CUTCH GUNDAVA.

In a letter to the Times Major General Green thus describes the country lying between the Indus and Quetta, "which for upwards of twenty years I was in the habit of patrolling, and about which much ignorance has lately been shown. Up to Jacobabad the country is well known. From this station to Dadur, a distance of about eighty miles, the province of Cutch Gundava presents during certain seasons, and particularly to a stranger, a dismal waste; yet during others, with the exception of a central strip of desert, it is covered with luxuriant crops of jawaree, wheat, and in some parts rice of the most excellence. The heat in summer is extreme. Nevertheless, I have marched through all parts, accompanied by English officers, during each month of the year, exposed at times to the fiercest rays of the sun; yet on no single occasion can I recall to my recollection an English officer being seriously affected by the heat. This may be accounted for by the extreme dryness of the atmosphere and the extraordinary copiousness of the perspiration thrown off by the body. Water is at times scarce, and in certain localities extremely unpleasant to drink; yet during the dry season of 1859 I was encamped at Bagh, situated on the bank of the Nara river, for a month, with a force of some 10,000 Beloochis, horse and foot. I was able to obtain water, in addition to that procurable from wells sunk in the dry bed of that river, by directing the embankment which confines its waters, for irrigation purposes, soon after they enter the plains, to be breached, and strengthening the one which already existed near my encampment. By this simple means in twenty-four hours I obtained sufficient water, not only for my 10,000 men, but for 50,000 or 100,000 had it been required. The tribes located in the province under review are principally Belooch, and have long since, under General Jacob's rule, given up their former plundering habits. The exception to this is the Marri tribe before mentioned, who reside in the mountain district called after them, which is situated on the northern side of the province. This tribe has been exceptionally mismanaged of late years. In place of the manly, straightforward policy adopted by Jacob, which won over these wild tribes, the Marrs have been subjected to a system of petting and spoiling, and have been paid such extravagant sums in the form of black mail that they at last believed that they were either necessary to our very existence as a Power, or that we were afraid of them. To such a pitch was their insolence carried that a few months ago they attacked a British convoy, killed twelve Europeans who accompanied it, and carried off £15,000. The last accounts we have received relating to them are to the effect that General MacGregor has been despatched for the purpose of chastising them. This tribe a very few years ago could muster about 2,000 fighting men, armed, some with matchlocks, some with swords, and others with sticks; but the large sums which have been lavished on them of late years may have enabled them to procure better arms, which they are now using against us. In the plains they are utterly contemptible as foes, and within their mountains are equally so if attacked with judgment. At a lecture given by a distinguished officer at the United Service Institution some months ago, I was astonished to hear him relate how this tribe was in the habit of swooping down into the plains with 2,000 horse. They must have become rich in horses since my wardenship of the marches. They once, I can recall to my mind, attempted a swoop into Sind with twenty-five horsemen, every one of whom was killed by a patrol of the Sind Horse. It would be well worth the while of any member of Parliament interested in Indian finance to ask what sums this tribe alone has received since the commencement of the late Afghan war, or even since 1873. When the advance on Kandahar had been decided upon, the headquarters of this Marri tribe, situated at Kahun, should have been occupied by a detachment of troops, and a good road made from the plains up to it. In fact, this ought now to be done, in which case our whole line of communications to Quetta would be free from danger of molestation. I may add that during the winter months the plain of Cutch Gundava affords pasturage for thousands of sheep driven down from the surrounding mountains by the snow. I feel confident that under a proper administration, and with the application of a good irrigational scheme, this province would become a valuable grain-producing one."

MALLESON'S HISTORY OF THE MUTINY.* [SECOND NOTICE.]

THE prominent place in this volume is necessarily occupied with the details of the Central India Campaign. The bearings of the operations, which preceded the execution of the plan submitted by Sir Robert Hamilton, upon the prevention of the spread of the rebellion are carefully narrated. With the aid of the small but clear maps the reader is then enabled to follow the course of each of the two columns which co-operated from the Bombay and from the Madras Presidency in the restoration of our imperilled authority in Central India. If in reviewing these events we find that the historian has manfully and truthfully told the errors of administration which has converted friends into foes, we read on the other hand a most vigorous and graphic history of valour and endurance. It were an impertinence to sum up the work accomplished by the force under Sir Hugh Rose in any other words than those of Colonel Malleeson. They are worthy of quotation, if only to show how he can present what map-makers call a bird's-eye view, just as well as he can delineate each part of a war scape, and fill in bold details with the accurate though bold hand of one who limns scenery and active life:—"On Jan. 6, 1858, Sir Hugh Rose had left Indur; on the 24th he laid siege to Ráthgarh; on the 28th he defeated in the field the Raja of Banpur; on the 29th he took Ráthgarh; on Feb. 3 he relieved Sagar; on the 13th he took the strong fort of Garhákót; on March 4 he forced the pass of Maddanpúr; on the 17th his 1st Brigade stormed the fort of Chandairi; on the 22nd he invested Jhansi; on the 31st he defeated Tantia Topi on the Betwah; on April 3 he stormed Jhansi; on May 6 he defeated Tantia Topi and the Raja of Jhansi at Kunch; on the 23rd he beat the rebels at Galabri, near Kalpiol, and occupied that fort the following day." In the military annals of "the unreformed British army" there is no more illustrious achievement, whether for general or soldiers, than the prompt and successful pursuit and checkmate of the rebels who captured and lost Gwalior. The narrative reads like a romance of war; but it is an enduring monument of endurance and bravery, to which the most graphic story of the marches, the fights, the unceasing contest with fatigue, with terrible heat, and a foe beaten, but still unyielding, can after all scarcely do full justice. The venerable veteran, who still survives to wear the honours so worthily won, will be the first to share with those whom he led to victory the eulogium:—"In every undertaking he was successful, and he was successful because, careless of himself, he thought of the great end he had in view, and spared no means to attain it."

The peace of Central India was, however, by no means accomplished, and another important section of this volume narrates the pursuit of the indefatigable Maratha leader, Tantia Topi. Col. Malleon awards his full merits to this faithful supporter of his natural leaders, as he esteemed the Nana and Rao Sahib, and raises the question as to the confirmation by posterity of the justice of the sentence which condemned him to an ignominious death, which sentence he underwent, not merely as a foe to the British raj, but as a leader of mutinous rebels, for of such it must be conceded his army was composed. Wherever he went he attacked the loyal, and endeavoured to seduce the wavering or partially disaffected chiefs, and we fail to see the analogy between the patriotic Tyrolean innkeeper and the Maratha partisan, gallant and faithful to a name though he might be. The pacification of Oudh is the next in order of narration to the story of the restoration of peace in Central India. The two narratives are, to a certain extent, interwoven in order, as the events they record were correlated in their mutual influence. The defence of Lord Canning's proclamation, taken in connection with the explanatory letter, will commend itself, not indeed to all, but to most. The difficulties of the situation are shown to have been fully comprehended by Lord Canning, and the difference between his views and those of Sir James Outram is well expressed. "The end of the two men was really the same, the difference was in the manner by which that end should be attained. Sir James would have carried leniency to a point at which leniency would have missed its aim. Lord Canning, maintaining the right to be severe, was prepared to be as merciful as Outram. Whenever the exercise of mercy was politically desirable, Lord Ellenborough's hasty conclusions on imperfect information, his indecent hurry to inflict on Lord Canning his "severe and galling strictures," and his improper disclosure of his despatch, prompted by vanity, are clearly told. But it is impossible not to read the descriptions of Lord Canning's calm and dignified reception of the despatch without feeling that the outward calm could but hide the wound inflicted on a noble but sensitive nature. His vindication was indeed complete, and, in the words of the historian, the result of the whole business was to seat him more firmly in the saddle, and to give him greater strength to carry out the policy which he believed to be adapted to the circumstances. But to the enormous strain upon the Viceroy's energies entailed by the tremendous nature of the crisis at which he was called to govern India, it was a fatal cruelty to add the insolence of overbearing official superiority. Col. Malleon's tribute to the greatness of his character is not overdrawn. He has pointed out his mistakes, "due to the inexperience of a generous nature, guided by men whom he had been told to look upon as masters of the situation, but who were, in fact, hopelessly ignorant and incapable." His Oudh policy was no such mistake. The chief moving cause of the mutiny is found by Col. Malleon in the annexation of that kingdom, both in its principle and in the manner in which it was carried out. The campaigns which completely restored peace in that country are necessarily told at greater length than the labour and successes of Sir Robert Montgomery, then only a plain squire, who won his spurs by the accomplishment of a task full of difficulties, which he met with all the skill, the temper, and the judgment which might have been expected from so experienced a ruler of men." Of his carrying into effect the Oudh proclamation, it is well written by the historian, who views the past in comparison with the present, "interpreted, as Lord Canning meant it to be interpreted, by one of the ablest administrators in India, it became the charter upon which the position now occupied by the people of Oudh, has been built up and secured." Very briefly does Colonel Malleon record the great change from which dated the new departure of the history of India—first a kingdom, then an empire, instead of a collection of territories ruled over by the Company. More at length does he seek to trace the causes which combined to turn the faithful Sepoys into mutinous rebels, and he seems himself to give more practical importance to the successive acts of bad faith towards the Sepoys than to that act of policy which he would place nominally in the front. His words need careful reading and pondering at present, if only a portion of what is bruited about concerning the discontented feeling of our native troops be true. Doctrinaire politicians may do incalculable harm by their mischievous misrepresentation of, or tinkering alterations in the administration. Meddling efforts to alter without regarding the special requirements of the army organisation of India have once already, according to the historian, resulted in a mutiny. At present we have had a commission, as yet barren, and a long protracted period of foreign service, in which there is grave reason to believe the native soldiers have been neglected, and have been in consequence disgusted. But we must leave much unwritten on the subjects discussed or hinted at in this concluding volume. The Indian Navy has, we are glad to see, received a full and well-deserved "honourable mention," and the first chapter of the last book, which tells the tale of revolt and gallant defence in several isolated districts, contains a splendid eulogium on the civil servants of India untrained to arms, but equalling their military colleagues in their own especial merits. Unhonoured, save in the recollection of those who knew their services, are some names which here receive a lasting record, and for once every reader of Colonel Malleon's pages (except the followers of Mr. Grant Allen) will be at one mind with him, as he inscribes upon the historical monument he has now completed:—"The History of the Indian Mutiny is, in fact, a record of the display of all the qualities for which Englishmen have been famous—of the qualities which enabled the inhabitants of a small island in the Atlantic to accumulate the noblest and largest empire in the world, and which, so long as they remain unimpaired in their descendants, will be maintained."

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—The Pattiala council of regency have contributed a lakh of rupees.—Times Telegram.

THE CALCUTTA COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS AND IMPORTERS.—Intense dissatisfaction is felt by the importers of cotton goods with the course which has been adopted by the collector of customs regarding duty-free cloths in which trivial irregularities have been found. The very smallest of these irregularities, which can with ingenious perversity be construed under the Sea Customs Act into an offence, is visited with the confiscation of the goods in which it occurs, and with the maximum fine. It thus happens that an irregularity which may not involve the loss of one rupee to the revenue is made the excuse for exacting a penalty of, possibly, Rs. 5,000. The collector treats every case alike, rejects proofs which should satisfy him of the accidental nature of the irregularity, and, by straining the law to the utmost, visits misfortune with the rigour which should be reserved for fraud. It cannot have been the intention of the framers of the Act that the almost unbounded powers which they reserved to the collector should be wielded with an entire absence of discretion, and the Government would do well to arrest a scandal which is growing into portentous dimensions.—Englishman.

THE REPORTED NAGA RAID.—The opinion of the local authorities, we understand, is, in accordance with our own, that the outrage at the Rupabali tea garden was the work of dacoits and not of Nagas. It is considered most probable that the men concerned in it were Manipuris, by whom most of the dacoities in that part of the country are said to be committed, and numbers of whom reside in the neighbourhood. They had doubtless either seen the coolies arrive with the money on the previous day or been informed of its arrival by accomplices about the factory, and it is looked upon as a suspicious fact that none of the chaukidars gave any alarm. The dacoits are said to have been traced to Sonaimukhi, to the south of the garden, which is itself on the south side of the Barak, a circumstance which is alone conclusive against their being Nagas.—Englishman.

KALKA.—Kalka has been declared to be in an exceedingly insanitary condition, and orders have been issued for cleansing the place. The outbreak of cholera at Kussowlie last year was attributed by the medical officer of that station to infection contracted at the Pinjore Fair; and the general officer commanding the division, in commenting on the report, stated that the want of proper sanitary precautions at Kalka was the chief source of disease in the neighbouring hill stations. In the interest, therefore, not only of the troops at Kussowlie, which is the station nearest Kalka, but also of the surrounding hill stations generally, the immediate adoption of proper sanitary regulations has been recommended, and the cause of offence will be removed, as far as possible.—Pioneer.

THE SIMLA BANK.—The seventy-first half-yearly meeting was held at Simla, on Sept. 6, when it was resolved:—That the balance-sheet before the meeting is satisfactory and be passed. That the dividend for the past half-year, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, declared by the directors, be confirmed. That the surplus profits, after payment of the dividend and loss on home remittances, i.e., Rs.22,523-2-2, be disposed of to credit of the bad and doubtful debt account. That the following gentlemen, elected by ballot, be directors for the ensuing half-year:—Charles J. Marsden, Esq., James Craddock, Esq., H. Hogan, Esq., Col. W. C. Gott, at Simla, and the Rev. R. Hine, at Umballa. That Mr. J. Elston be re-elected auditor for the ensuing half-year. The following is the general statement and balance-sheet for the half-year ended June 30:—The capital of the company is Rs.13,00,000, divided into 2,600 shares of Rs.500 each. The full amount of 2,600 shares (Rs.13,00,000) has been paid up.

THE NAINA TAL LANDSLIP.—The Rev. Alexander Robinson, chaplain of Moradabad, who lost his life by the second landslide, was on short leave of absence from his own station. Not sheltering in the Assembly Rooms, with zeal and energy he joined the "working party," and perished, leaving six young and motherless children.—Times.

COL. JENKINS.—We have to record the death of Col. Richard Jenkins, commanding 1st Bengal Cavalry, which occurred on the 9th ult., at Rawul Pindi, in the Punjab. The deceased was the eldest son of the late Sir Richard Jenkins, G.C.B., and was born in 1828. He entered the army in 1845, obtained his lieutenancy in 1849, and was promoted to captain 1856, major 1865, lieutenant colonel 1871, and colonel in 1876.—Times.

THE GANGES CANAL.—The final estimate of the cost of completing the Upper Ganges Canal is contained in a despatch lately sent by the Government of India to the Secretary of State. Some years ago an estimate of Rs.85,88,431 was sanctioned for what was called the remodelling of the canal, and this estimate included all the expenditure necessary to remodel and complete certain portions from the year 1872. In 1875 a great scheme for drawing the whole of the district of the Doab under the influence of canal irrigation was set on foot. The total cost of this was estimated at the time at Rs.55,30,000, but has been subsequently reduced to Rs.51,83,000; and of this the share chargeable to the Ganges Canal was Rs.21,26,000. The original estimate of 1873 provided Rs.5,00,000 only for drainage, and the estimate for completing the works now sent up has been accordingly increased by Rs.16,26,000, so that the total estimate of the completion expenditure now amounts to Rs.1,02,14,430. In the estimate now sent up the original outlay on the canal, apart from the completion estimate, has been brought out distinctly, and amounts to Rs.2,34,32,747. Thus the total estimated outlay on the works of the canal is Rs.3,36,47,177. This has to be increased by book charges on account of capitalised value of land revenue sacrificed by the appropriation of land for the canal, interest during construction, loss by exchange, &c., which bring up the total capital cost to Rs.3,79,65,138. A portion of this outlay, amounting to Rs.50,24,253, belongs to the terminal lines, which will eventually form a portion of the Lower Ganges Canal. Deducting this, therefore, the net capital cost of the Upper Canal will be eventually Rs.3,29,40,885. Lastly, a new project for a navigable channel known as the Damu Channel, which is to connect the Ganges and Agra Canals, and is estimated to cost Rs.7,50,000, has been sent up for sanction. In forwarding these estimates, the Government of India observes that the net profits on the outlay up to the end of the year 1878-79 were from direct revenue alone 5.47 per cent., from direct and indirect 7.71 per cent. The maximum area of irrigation originally estimated for the canal was 1,205,000 acres, and the area irrigated in 1878-79 was 1,182,330. In that year the new channels, estimated to irrigate 447,000 acres more, had not been constructed. The above figures show that the canal is likely to realise fully the expectation under which it was constructed.—Pioneer.

BRITISH BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times urges that the present is the time to make some much-needed reforms in various departments of the public service. The pay attached to many responsible posts is miserably low, hardly enough to keep a man in sound health and respectable in appearance. Take the case of some of the subordinate officers in the commission. The lower grades of these are wretchedly underpaid. Fancy giving a man all sorts of powers, making him head of the district treasury, superintendent of the gaol, and halt a dozen other things, and rewarding him with the handsome stipend of Rs.100 a month! Such a man cannot live and keep himself respectable on such a stipend. The thing is impossible in Burmah. The Recorder goes away from Rangoon on leave by the mail steamer, leaving on Saturday morning.—Ibid.

FLOODS.—The Himalaya Chronicle, published at Mussooree, mentions that the following telegram was received from Hurdwar on Sept. 18:—"The Ganges came down last night in the highest flood known for many years. Much damage has been done to canal works and property, and it is feared there has been considerable loss of life." There has been a serious breach on the East Indian Railway, between Gazeabad and Shadera, on the branch line between Gazeabad and Delhi. It has been raining very heavy in those parts lately, and the country for miles round is under water. The trickling, tiny stream, known as the Hindin river between Gazeabad and Shadra, was (reports the Indian Herald) last Saturday morning a swollen, rushing torrent. About noon of the same day it overflowed its banks and washed away the bridge and two hundred feet of embankment on either side. The Grand Trunk road has also suffered to a very considerable extent. Heavy rains have fallen in the Meerut district, and much of the country there is also reported under water.—Times of India.

A MEDICAL LIBEL CASE.—Dr. G. C. Hall has recovered damages from the editor and publisher of the Indian Medical Gazette, for publishing an article imputing to him unprofessional conduct in soliciting subscriptions for an eye infirmary at Allahabad with which he is connected.—Times of India.

The Maharaja of Hatwa has given Rs.500, and the Nawabs Abdul Gani and Ahsanula of Dhaka Rs.500, to Professor Monier Williams's Indian Institute.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—The prospectus of the Bareilly and Kumaon Railway Company has been issued. The company has been formed for the purpose of constructing sixty-one out of sixty-five miles of a railway from the station of Bareilly to Ranibagh, at the foot of the Kumaon Hills, on the road to Naini Tal, the remaining four miles being constructed by the Government.—Times of India.

RAILWAY CONVENIENCES.—The Government of India, as represented by the consulting engineer for guaranteed railways, has recommended that a carriage fitted up as smoking divan, and having bath-room accommodation for natives, be attached to each through train.

THE LATE MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE.—JEYPORE, SEPT. 20.—Yesterday morning, at eight o'clock, the body of the late Maharaja of Jeypore was conveyed to Ghetore, the place where the remains of the rulers of this State have been cremated since Jeypore was founded, and there, a little before ten o'clock, it was committed to the flames, according to the funeral rites of the State. The body of the late Maharaja was brought out of the palace and conveyed to the burning ground, clad in his royal robes and jewels, and placed erect in a car of state. Before this car torchbearers ran, carrying funeral cakes and oil. Next went the family priests of the deceased; their long hair unbound and waving in the wind, calling all the while upon Vishnu (with all sects), the guardian of the vital spark. Then came the carriage itself and immediately in rear the nearer relatives followed; and behind the populace, all showing signs of genuine woe, for the late prince was much beloved and did very much for the good of his subjects. Many thousands of the city people, including nearly all the private servants of the deceased and the officers of state, joined in the funeral procession, and every one walked the whole distance from the palace to Ghetore. Immediately after the ceremony all the male Hindoos of the city shaved their heads and beards, mourning as if a member of their own family had died, and the women too have all gone into deep mourning. All the shops were closed throughout the day yesterday, and no food was cooked in the city until after the funeral party had returned. There is no questioning the sorrow that is felt here. It is universal; it is genuine. Jeypore, among its many enlightened rulers, has never had one who has done so much for the real well-being of his people than the prince who has just departed, and it will be very difficult, if it is possible, to replace him. Just before his death the Maharaja, after consultation with some of his chief officers, nominated Takoor Kayam Singh, the younger brother of the Takoor of Isardha, as his successor, and it is not unlikely that the nomination will be confirmed by the Government. The Residency surgeon, who is acting here for the political agent, absent on leave, visited the palace in the evening and had a conference with the Ranees, the near relations of the late Maharaja, and the principal officers of the State, who, with one exception, all approved of the nomination. The dissentient was the Takoor of Jhilara, who contended that the successor should have been chosen from his branch of the family. Major Bradford, C.S.I., the agent to the Governor General for Rajputana, has been telegraphed for and is expected here in a few days. On his arrival final arrangements will be made. After the conference the senior Ranees was declared protector of the State pro tem.; and when this appointment was made public all the shops in the city were reopened. The Maharaja breathed his last on the 43rd anniversary of his birthday, and it is said that he died at the exact hour at which he was born.—Times of India.

THE UMBALLA SWEEP.—The winner of the first prize in the Umballa sweep is said to be Mr. Simmons, of the Thomason Engineering College, Roorkee, who purchased only one ticket. He does not, however, get the whole of the prize money. He sold half his share in the ticket to two gentlemen staying at the Mussorie Club for Rs. 3,500, and half of the remainder to a well-known sporting man at Simla for Rs. 5,000.—Times of India.

THE LAHORE CAMP.—It is stated that the following troops have been told off to assemble at Lahore on the occasion of the formation of the Viceroy's camp there:—The 10th Hussars, the 4th Bengal Lancers, the A Battery B Brigade R.H.A., and the C Battery 3rd Brigade R.A.; the 9th Foot, the 6th Bengal N.I., and a regiment of Madras N.I.—Ibid.

THE LAHORE CATHEDRAL.—The Bishop of Lahore writes:—"Will you allow me, in continuation of former notices, to inform the friends and well-wishers of our Lahore Cathedral Church, that towards the £10,000 still required to complete the design, up to the point of its being a solid and sufficiently capacious parish church for the Church of England community at Lahore, £300 has been promised by a generous contributor to church work in London, on condition of seven like sums being contributed, to be spread over three years, or fourteen sums half that amount, spread over a like term? It is proposed that the chancel of the mother church be partly raised as a memorial to the officers and men who fell in the late Cabul campaigns; and contain a suitable record of their names and services. It is also proposed that an aisle or transept be reserved for the use of the native church of India, on great occasions and high festivals especially; or it might be periodically employed for vernacular worship and preaching (as is one transept in St. David's Cathedral for the Welsh vernacular). Here a modest tablet might suitably find place to the memory of one of the chief apostles of the Punjab, the Rev. G. M. Gordon, over whose early martyr's death at Candahar, in venturing his life to bring in five wounded British soldiers, many true tears are wept by natives and Europeans in the Punjab.—Ibid.

THE LANDSLIP AT NAINI TAL.—Mr. E. Atkinson, C.S., Accountant General N.W.P. and Oudh, writes:—"On Saturday morning, at half-past nine, a portion of the Victoria Hotel fell in, burying a child of Mrs. Francis and the ayah; then a servant's house fell in, burying three natives. A party from the depot came to aid Mr. L. Taylor and the civil authorities under Capt. Balderston and Lieuts. Hackett, Sullivan, and Carmichael; and whilst digging out some natives, and endeavouring to turn the stream above the Victoria Hotel, the whole hill came down in less than one minute and carried away the working parties, Bell's shop, and the assembly rooms, into the lake. The rupture took place at the foot of old Government House, and appears to have been caused by percolation between the rock and the overlying strata of gravelly shale. Once the motion began the mass shoved before it all below, and the crust, as it were, to the depth of some twenty feet, went on clearing all before it into the lake. Bell's shop was carried bodily from its original position to the assembly rooms, where it lies in minute fragments at the top of a mass of dbris some forty feet high. One fragment of the assembly rooms remains—the scrap known as the lady's dressing room near the bathing sheds; all the rest was sent into the lake; and it was here, it is believed, that Major and Mrs. Morphy and Mrs. Turnbull lost their lives. There were a few more in the reading-room at the time, but their names are not known. I saw Captain Balderston, Lieutenants Sullivan, Carmichael, and Hackett, overseer Morgan, Rev. Alexander Robinson, Mr. L. Taylor, C.S., at the work from which they were carried away about ten minutes before the avalanche came, and had only got up to my house when a man came to say they had all been carried away. There was a considerable number of servants and others crowded in one corner of one of the verandahs of the hotel, all of whom (some forty at least) were lost, besides those in the long range of stables and outhouses. Mr. Noad, I understand, went up to aid Mr. Taylor, and Dr. Hannah to give medical assistance. None of the residents of the hotel have been lost, as they had all left after the first slip took place at half-past nine. The second did not occur till eight minutes to two p.m. The only persons saved at Bell's shop were Mrs. Gray and Miss Shaw and Mrs. Knight; the last has lost her husband and child, the first her son. The rain still continues. Old Government House has gone, Dr. Walker's house is threatened, and the lower end of the upper bazaar (Kya-muddin's shop) has gone, and others are going. The whole of Sher-ka-Dunda Hill is in danger, but people are leaving their homes and coming up to the church end. The moment the avalanche fell into the lake, a wave, some six feet high, ran its whole length to Tulli Tal, and nearly swept away General Ramsay, who was superintending the enlargement of the outlet. Two native assistants and a soldier were swept away beside him, and it is said some forty others in the lower bazaar. The assembly rooms and library were simply lifted up entire like a stone and dashed into the lake. If the entire hill comes down the lake must be silted up and Naini Tal be a thing of the past. We are full of sorrow, and a sense of our utter helplessness in the presence of this the greatest calamity of the kind that has ever occurred in India. We can do nothing to prevent it, and ask the sympathy of all your readers for the widows and orphans. Would you set up a subscription for them? I am far too distressed at the sight around and the sufferings of so many friends to write you a more detailed account, which in due time will no doubt be furnished to you.—Times of India.

SIMLA.—The Fine Arts Exhibition was opened on Sept. 18, by the Viceroy, who delivered a long and eloquent address. The attendance was small. The following is a list of prizes:—Viceroy's prize for an original picture in oil or water, Dr. Willcocks, for water colour; Lieutenant Governor's prize for an original picture in oil or water, Major Pullan, for water colour; Sir F. Haines's first prize to commissioned officers only for original water colour from nature or life, Captain Strahan; Sir F. Haines's second prize to non-commissioned officers and soldiers for an original picture any style, not awarded, owing to want of original pictures; Hon. C. SIR ASTLEY EDEN'S AGRICULTURAL SCHOLARSHIPS.—Three candidates have already appeared for the Agricultural Scholarships, which have recently been offered by the Government of Bengal to the graduates of the Calcutta University, of whom one is a Master of Arts, and two Bachelors of Arts in Physical Science.—Indian Daily News.

RAILWAY EXTENSIONS IN BENGAL.—On the strong recommendation of the Government of Bengal, the Government of India have sanctioned the estimated cost of about twelve lakhs and a-half for the construction of the Sonapore and Mograh line, in connection with the Calcutta and South Eastern State Railway, with the remark that the local Government should see that the amount is not exceeded. Instructions have also been issued to the Public Works Department to indent for the necessary stores from England.—Indian Daily News.

THE King of Portugal has conferred upon Sir Walter De Souza, Consul General, Calcutta, the honour of Knight Commander of the Noble Order of the Conception, in recognition of his valuable services and the high esteem in which he is held by the Portuguese Government.

MADRAS.

THE PRESIDENCY MAGISTRACY.—The Government, we find, in the appointment of a successor to the late Mr. Mahomed Yusuf Sahib Bahadur on the bench of the Presidency magistracy, have adhered to the policy, inaugurated by the late Lord Hobart, of having among the four Presidency magistrates a representative of each class of the community—the European, the Eurasian, the Mahomedan, and the Hindu. It is meet and proper that the Government should pursue such a policy, as it shows that, in the dispensation of public patronage, the Government are actuated by a desire to give all classes of the community an equal chance of advancement, but it is a question whether in this case the adherence to the policy may not result in detriment to public justice. Is the officer chosen to fill the vacancy a duly-qualified person to discharge the very important duties devolving on a Presidency magistrate? We think that the mere fact of his being a Mahomedan ought not to be a sufficient qualification for the post, if he does not possess the other qualifications necessary to make him a fit and proper magistrate. In the uncovenanted branch of the Government service of this Presidency there were but two candidates from whom a selection could be made; the gentleman who has found favour in the eyes of Government and Mr. Mahomed Azam Ghatalah Saib, deputy collector of Nundial. By common report, the latter official was the better qualified of the two, and he was generally looked upon as a fit successor to the late Mr. Mahomed Yusuf Saib, but the Government evidently are of a different opinion, judging from the selection they have made. The appointment, we have no doubt, will be watched with much interest, and the new magistrate will have need of much care in his conduct of business, for should he at all be found wanting, the policy of appointing a man merely because he happens to be the senior Mahomedan in the Government service to the post will be very unfavourably criticised.—Madras Times.

THE HOBART PRIZE.—The Hobart prize has been awarded to Mr. Charles Arthur Lafrenais, who passed in the first class at the second L.M. and S. examination held in July, 1880.—Ibid.

THE CIVIL HOSPITALS.—The report of the civil hospitals and dispensaries in the Madras Presidency for the year 1878 has just reached us. We shall not inflict upon our readers a resumé of the information it contains, as it is now somewhat old and useless. One or two items, however, deserve attention. There were 1,140,224 persons treated during the year 1878, of whom 572,783 were men, 288,008 were women, and 279,433 children. The death-rate amongst the in-patients was 132'85, and amongst the out-patients 1'60 per mille treated. The total cost for the year was Rs.7,80,995, of which sum Government provided Rs.3,48,983, municipal and local funds Rs.3,81,072, while Rs.22,862 was received as interest on capital invested and Rs.15,829 as donations and subscriptions, from Europeans, while Rs.12,247 were received as donations and subscriptions from natives. The annual cost of treatment per patient in and out was a little under eleven annas. It would appear from Surgeon General Smith's letter to the Chief Secretary to Government that some dispensaries are likely to be abused by conducting them as if they were alms-houses. Admissions are to be rightly restricted to those requiring medical aid. The medical officers were doing good service at the stations where they were located, as they had a seat at the municipal board, and afforded valuable advice and suggestions as to the sanitation of towns. The Government, we are glad to find, record the following observations in their order upon this report:—In his letter recorded in the order of Government the late surgeon general, Dr. Smith, offered an explanation of the delay in submitting the report on civil hospitals and dispensaries for 1878, stating that it had been sent to the Press in October; that the whole of his report, with statistical tables, had been printed; and that there only remained a small portion of the extracts from medical officers' reports to be completed. The complete report is eventually submitted to Government nearly six months later, or seventeen months after the period to which it refers, and no further explanation is afforded. Owing to the late submission of the report for 1877, Government considered it useless to pass any remarks in review, and it is obvious that control becomes little better than nominal when information is supplied to the revising authority so long after the expiration of the year to which it relates.—Ibid.

THE NILGIRI COMMISSION.—It is believed that the arrangement finally adopted to supersede the Nilgiri Commission is one by which the district magistrate and revenue commissioner will be invested with the powers of an assistant sessions judge. A Hindu gentleman, who lately filled the post of assistant secretary in the Legislative Department, is named as the probable future sub-judge of the Nilgiris. This gentleman is believed to have been the adviser of Government when the original scheme for superseding the commission was under discussion.—South of India Observer.

THE GOVERNOR'S INTENTION.—We are now in a position to assert on the best authority that there is no foundation for the statement in the Whitehall Review, that a marriage has been definitely arranged between the Duke of Buckingham and a young lady in Madras.—Madras Mail.

THE DEWANSHIP OF TRAVANCORE.—The Hon. V. Ramengar, C.S.I., inspector general of registration in the Madras Presidency and member of the Legislative Council of Fort St. George, has been offered and accepted the post of Dewan of the Travancore State.

H.M.'s 77TH REGIMENT.—The headquarters right wing of H.M.'s 77th Regiment (the Duke of Cambridge's Own), consisting of 450 non-commissioned officers and rank and file, with a number of followers, under command of Col. G. Colquhoun, arrived on Sept. 16. The regiment, we hear, is to be located in Fort St. George only for a few months, when it will be sent to Burma, and be relieved by the 44th Foot.—Madras Athenæum, Sept. 17.

THE GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERY.—Letters received from Paris by the last mail state that the Governor of Pondicherry is likely to be recalled shortly, as the Minister of Marine did not at all approve his conduct when he wished to remove from the Pondicherry Court and send to Karikal a native translator, whose opinion did not please Mr. Ponnontamby, the Pondicherry "black Governor." The Chief Justice, M. des Grois, refused to sanction such a proceeding, and applied at once to be allowed to return to France to render an account of his refusal in that case. The deputy for French India will not be re-elected also for supporting his protégé Ponnontamby.—Madras Times.

RIFLE MEETING AT BANGALORE.—The Non-Commissioned Officers' Cup was won by the 2-16th Regiment; the Officers' Plate by Captain Lewis, 48th; the Carbine Cup by the 14th Hussars. Volunteer Whitby, G.I.P.R. Volunteers, won the Empress Plate, second stage, with a capital score. In the inter-volunteer match the Madras Volunteers were first, the Bangalore second, and the G.I.P.R. third. The Diana Plate was won by Captain Lewis, 48th Regiment. The Martini-Henri Plate was won by Whitty, G.I.P.R. Volunteers. Lieut. Shubrack, belonging to the 2-13th Regiment, is the champion. The Bangalore Cup was won by the 48th, the 21st being second, and the 2-16th third.—Times of India.

MAHOMEDAN DEPUTATION TO THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—Our correspondent at Ooty writes under date the 18th inst.:—"To-day the deputation, consisting of seven of the leading members of the Mahomedan community, headed by Mr. Ghool Mahomed, a member of our Municipal Commission and the holder of an Empress certificate, a highly-respectable resident of this station for the past forty years, waited on his Grace in view to express their regret and surprise at the recent military demonstration, inasmuch as it reflected on their loyalty to the Queen Empress. The deputation was graciously received by the Governor, who shook hands with each member on being introduced. His Grace assured them that the Government did in no way suspect them of disloyalty, nor was any suspicion entertained in regard to the loyalty of the Mahomedan residents of this station, but as large numbers were flocking up from the plains and rumours that a disturbance was likely to occur had reached the Government, they had simply adopted such measures as were considered necessary to prevent a breach of the peace. The Governor then entered into a general conversation with each member of the deputation. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Ghool Mahomed, the spokesman, Abdool Cawder, Aboo Sait, Aboo Thos Aboo Mahomed, Abdool Rhyman, Manjee Sait, not one of whom has been a resident of Ooty for less than thirty years. Both the military and private secretaries were in attendance on the Governor during the interview.—Times of India.

BOMBAY.

DHOND-MANMAD (STATE) RAILWAY.—The four large bridges on this line have been completed, at a cost of about Rs.13,22,000, as follows:—The bridge of 21-50 feet arches over the Godaveri at Puntambh has cost about Rs.3,77,000; the 18-40 feet arches over the river Praora, Rs.2,30,000; the iron girder bridge over the Moola at Rahuri (four spans), Rs.2,90,000; and the Bhima bridge, of twenty-eight arches of fifty feet span near Dhond, 4¼ lakhs. The work was done very expeditiously; and the Government of India have thanked the engineers and upper subordinates for their good services. Major Warratt, R.E., deputy consulting engineer for railways, Bombay, brought the good work and the savings on the four bridges of about Rs.1,50,000 to notice. The station house and subsidiary buildings at Maumad are to be constructed by the G.I.P. Railway Company to avoid misunderstandings. Previous to taking over the line, the G.I.P. Railway Company will inspect the permanent way at no distant date.—Bombay Gazette.

THE CLOSE SEASON BILL.—The following report of the select committee of the council of his Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the "bill to enable Government to provide for the preservation of game birds and wild animals," and the bill as amended by the select committee, are, in accordance with Rule 25 of the rules for the conduct of business at meetings of the council, published for general information:—The select committee appointed to report upon bill No. 4 of 1880 (the Game Bill) have the honour to state that they approve of the bill as now amended by them. In order to provide under certain circumstances for the preservation of fish used as food the committee have thought it desirable to recast the bill. The bill as now drafted empowers Government to declare certain forests and parts of rivers to be preserves in which it shall be penal to kill or molest game or fish, not only during the breeding season, but at any time. There are certain parts of rivers in the neighbourhood of temples which have hitherto been held sacred, and in which public opinion has deterred native fishermen from killing fish. These places have proved of the greatest value as a means of preserving fish, which breed there unmolested and stock whole rivers. The bill will enable Government to declare such places to be preserves and to add to their number. The committee have reduced the fines leviable under the penal clauses of the bill from Rs.50 and Rs.100 to Rs.10 and Rs.25, respectively; they have, at the same time, rendered liable to punishment the persons who buy game and fish illegally captured, as well as the persons who illegally capture the same. Under the original bill the latter only were liable to punishment. A few

AN IMPORTANT LICENSE TAX DECISION.—Sir Charles Sargent and Mr. Justice M. Melvill gave recently at the High Court an important decision under the License Tax Act, Bombay, Act 3 of 1878. For the year 1879 Pujaphai Ghellabhai, a ghee seller, was charged by Mr. G. Wilson, collector of Khaira, Rs.25 for a license under the Act; and, having been served with a notice requiring him to pay the amount, he applied to the collector for a reduction, alleging that the fee was excessive, and that he did not fall under the class for which the amount was payable. The collector passed an order on the application enhancing the fee from Rs.25 to Rs.60. The enhanced amount was recovered, and the applicant was granted a license. He thereupon filed in the court of the district judge of Ahmedabad, Mr. Phillpotts, a suit against the collector of Khaira, alleging that his annual income in 1879 did not exceed the sum of Rs.1,000; that the collector, without properly examining his books, wrongly presumed that it was about Rs.3,000, and levied from him Rs.60, although he was liable to pay only Rs.20; and praying that a decree may be passed directing the collector to refund to him Rs.40, which he had illegally levied. In disposing of the suit, Mr. Phillpotts was of opinion that the Act clearly authorised the collector to pass the order for enhancement of fee, that it made the collector a judge for the purposes of the Act, and that, therefore, no cause of action had arisen. The plaintiff was rejected, and the discomfited but persistent ghee seller appealed to the High Court. Their lordships decided the appeal in his favour, holding that section 12 of the Act did not authorise the collector to enhance the fee on the appellant presenting his petition for a reduction. The collector having, in their lordship's opinion, exceeded his authority, the appellant had a cause of action against him to recover the difference between Rs.60 and Rs.25. The order of the district judge was reversed, and their lordships directed that the plaintiff against the collector be admitted; and, further, that the collector should pay the appellant's costs of his appeal.—Bombay Gazette.

THE KALYAN SALT DEPOT.—A number of merchants, traders, and other inhabitants of the town of Kalyan, in the Tanna district, have communicated to his Excellency Sir James Fergusson their sincere gratitude for the very favourable consideration which his Excellency gave to their petition of June 20 last, praying for the continuance of the Kalyan Salt Depot. His Excellency's consideration of the petition has, it is said, conferred a lasting boon on the ryots, and has saved from imminent starvation and serious calamity hundreds of poor families in the Konkan, who, but for the kind measures adopted, would have been reduced to abject poverty and compelled to leave their homes.—Ibid.

THE EX-GAEKWAR.—Gangabae, the second wife of the ex-Gaekwar Malhar Rao, is stated to have submitted a petition by telegram to the Government of India praying, in effect, for the restitution of conjugal rights, she being not allowed to reside with her husband at present. Another prayer she has submitted simultaneously is for the restoration of her allowance of Rs.500 per mensem, which, it is alleged, has been stopped. She is stated to have received from the Viceroy's private secretary a reply to the effect that his Excellency in Council will give his immediate consideration to the prayer.—Ibid.

REPORTED MURDER.—A case which seems likely to develop into a cause célèbre has cropped up at Chota Oodepoor. Chandia Sing, second son of the Rajah of that little State, is accused of murdering his wife. It appears that he suspected her fidelity, and, watching her movements, caught her descending a rope ladder to meet her lover. She was seized, and, it is said, tortured in the most cruel manner for three days before she died, when it was given out that her death was caused by a snake-bite. The Political Agent is holding an inquiry, and, should his report be unfavourable, the accused will probably be tried, as was the late Gaikwar of Baroda.—Times of India.

THE GAME BILL.—The Preservation of Wild Game and Fish Bill has been read a second time and considered in detail at the Bombay Legislative Council. The discussion resulted in the abandonment of the clause providing sanctuaries in which it should be penal to kill animals all the year round, and the addition of provisions for attaching a schedule to the Act, declaring specially what animals it applies to for three months, notice being given in all notifications under the Act for preventing the poisoning of rivers and pools for the destruction of fish, and for the protection of fish in certain ponds and parts of rivers, with special reference to waters contiguous to temples and sacred places.—Ibid.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—The half-yearly ordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Delhi and London Bank (Limited) was held yesterday, at the offices, 123, Bishopsgate-street Within; Mr. David H. Small presiding. The report of the directors for the half-year ending June 30 last stated that the net profits realised during the six months amounted to £10,514 9s. 1d., which sum, added to the balance of £551 8s. 6d. brought forward from the previous half-year, gave a total at credit of the profit and loss account of £11,065 17s. 7d. This the directors proposed to deal with as follows:—£8,440 12s. 6d. for payment of a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 5 per cent per annum (free of income-tax); and £2,000 to be credited to the doubtful debt account, leaving a balance of £625 5s. 1d. to be carried forward to next account. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report said he had much pleasure in stating that there had been a steady increase in the bank's business and that he thought the shareholders might reasonably expect a continuance of that prosperity. It would be gratifying to receive on this occasion an augmented dividend—the improved condition of the affairs of the bank justifying the directors in giving a dividend, for the past half-year, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, in place of the usual 4½ per cent., and at the same time enabling them, as the report showed, to set aside £2,000 to the doubtful debt account, which was being gradually liquidated. The deposits had exhibited a steady and gradual advance in amount—the increase during the past half-year having been about £50,000. With the further assistance of the shareholders and friends of the bank the directors trusted that a still larger increase might be shown in future balance-sheets. Dr. Beattie seconded the motion, remarking that in Calcutta the value of the shares of the bank had risen considerably; and that had taken place without any communication with those connected with it in London. The motion was agreed to without discussion, and votes of thanks having been passed to the chairman, directors, and officials, the meeting separated.

THE MANDALAY MENACE.

BURMESE affairs have again forced themselves upon the attention of the English public, and there is a growing impression that King Theebaw may go a step too far in trusting to the forbearance of the Government of India. Three telegrams have been published in London within the last few days from correspondents in Burma, and, although each differs somewhat from the other in details, they all agree in showing that a demonstration more or less warlike has been made upon the British frontier, near Thyetmyo by Burmese troops. One telegram, which is probably correct, represents that the Mandalay authorities intend to shut up the passage of the Irrawaddy for trading purposes, and to go even a step further—that is, to attack British territory. The reason of these belligerent signs is said to be that Theebaw intends to exact compensation from the Government of India because it permitted, a few months ago, the Nyoung Oke Prince to escape from Calcutta and enter independent Burma with a hostile force. Under the circumstances of the case, such an excuse for hostilities against a powerful, though just and long-suffering Power, could not enter seriously into the deliberations of any reasonable Government; but the Government of independent Burma is not a reasonable Government, and any folly committed by it would not be calculated to surprise those who are acquainted with its peculiarities. Therefore, it is probable enough that the Burmese have actually embarked on the dangerous enterprise of attempting to coerce the Government of India. No fear need be entertained about the safety of our frontier. Tolerably strong forces are posted at Thyetmyo and Tonghoo, and there is at least one good gun-boat stationed on the Irrawaddy. The number of Burmese soldiers—if such a term is applicable to a miserably armed rabble—who are reported to have arrived with hostile intentions on the British frontier is set down at something like a thousand. These the garrison at Thyetmyo will be able to disperse with ridiculous ease; and should they extend their operations further east, our troops at Tonghoo ought to have no difficulty in giving a good account of them in very quick time. The Chief Commissioner at Rangoon appears to have already ordered precautionary measures to be taken, as two native infantry regiments have been sent up to support the garrison at Allanmyo. Allanmyo lies on the left bank of the Irrawaddy, nearly opposite Thyetmyo. It is well within the frontier line, inside of which the King's troops could not move without leaving plenty of time for the garrisons to be warned, not only at Allanmyo, but at the much more powerful station of Thyetmyo.

But although there can be no doubt about the safety of our frontier from any serious attack which King Theebaw's tatterdemalions could deliver upon it, it is impossible not to admit that the threatening demonstration is annoying and apt to produce mischievous results, both politically and commercially, throughout Pegu. In Rangoon, Moulmein, Bassein, and other important towns in British territory, there are plenty of emissaries from Upper Burma who are always on the alert to foment public disturbances whenever it is currently reported that the King intends to attack the English. They sedulously circulate the tale that the King is really invincible, and that it is due alone to his good-natured forbearance that he has not seized the Shoay Dagon Pagoda and driven the English into the sea. However silly the assertions of these men may be, they are nevertheless believed by a large number of British Burmese subjects, who have inherited a traditional awe of the power and magnificence of the former native rulers of the country. The result, therefore, of such demonstrations as the present is that a feeling of insecurity spreads throughout British Burma, and trade is injured in proportion to the excitement of the general population. A notable illustration of this fact occurred last year, at the time when King Theebaw was murdering his relatives, and threatening to attack the British Residency in Mandalay. All classes of society in Rangoon were agitated. They believed that an English war with Upper Burma was imminent, and trade, so far as the great highway—the Irrawaddy—was concerned, came to a complete standstill. The police were constantly in the expectation of public riots, and the Chief Commissioner, Mr. Aitchison, actually felt it his duty to issue a circular to the English residents, informing them of the signals which would be used in the event of a general rising of the Burmese population. Volunteers were provided with extra ammunition, and additional parades were attended. In short, the state of feeling throughout Pegu resembled an exposed powder magazine near a locomotive—a flying spark might explode it at any moment. Although no information about the present state of public feeling in Lower Burma has been published here, there can be no doubt that it is in a condition of abnormal excitement, and that the ordinary operations of trade have been detrimentally affected. The mere movement of British troops to the frontier would produce these results.

It may soothe the vanity of the tyrants of Mandalay to produce panics in Lower Burma from time to time. The more fluttering they cause the more they increase a sense of their importance in the minds of their subjects, besides keeping alive in Lower Burma the feeling that there is a possibility of native rule being restored over Pegu, Arracan, and Tenasserim. So far, they play their political game. But there never was a political game played yet in which only one player was concerned. In the dangerous game which Theebau is now engaged, he has for an opponent the Government of India. Each irritating movement he makes compels that Government to ask how long this kind of thing is to be permitted to last, how long are British subjects to be subjected to periodical fits of excitement, how long is their trade to be upset and injured, merely because there happens to be a fool, an arrogant fool, in power at Mandalay. However averse the English public may be to a policy of annexation, each successive demonstration made by men like Theebau inevitably forces upon the Government of India the consideration whether it would not be better for all parties in Burma if the British frontier line were extended to Mandalay, or even to Bhamo—whether, in short, it should endure its present continuation of vexatious and expensive troubles, or, like Hamlet, rather “take up arms, and by opposing end them.” Not only would the annexation of Upper Burma be a blessing to the inhabitants, but it would secure a peacefulness in the adjoining British territories which they do not at present possess. Not only are the inhabitants of Pegu thrown into agitation whenever it suits the ruler of Mandalay to play the braggart, but disturbances are induced of a more or less formidable kind along the North-eastern frontier of India. If the truth were known about the Naga and Looshai raids, which are continually provoking expensive and exasperating little wars, it would probably be found that they are fomented by agitators belonging to the immediately contiguous territory of independent Burma. A great deal has been said and done about the rectification of the frontier on the North-west of India, but there are politicians who are of opinion that a little rectification of the North-eastern frontier would not do any harm. The best rectification of that frontier would be effected by the annexation of Upper Burma to British territory. The political and commercial advantages of annexation are obvious. The produce of the fairly rich country lying between Assam and the Irrawaddy would find a natural outlet in the emporium of Bhamo, whence it could be sent to China or to Rangoon, as best happened to suit the interests of the merchant. Trade on the Irrawaddy would be borne from Bhamo to the sea without interruption or fear of molestation. At present the commerce of Upper Burma finds a precarious market just as the ruler at Mandalay or his officials may choose to interfere with it, but under British Government rich argosies would be borne along in one constant stream on the bosom of the great river, instead of the sparse and precarious fleet of boats which is at present the result of misrule at Mandalay. The advantages of annexation would be as great to the people as to trade. The Shans, who are in a perpetual state of rebellion against the Government of independent Burma, would be brought into the ways of peace and industry; the Burmese themselves would be blessed with security of life and property; the unsettled state of feeling which periodically affects Pegu and also Arracan, into which dacoits from Upper Burma can enter through well-known passes, would terminate; and the resources of a splendid country would have a fair chance of proper development. In the meantime, King Theebau's insolent demonstration ought to be firmly dealt with. By the removal of our Residency from Mandalay we have pandered enough to his arrogant temper. It would be sheer pusillanimity, and would be interpreted as such, not only throughout Burma, but in Peking, which is well aware of the affairs of its Burmese vassal, if the Government of India did not punish Theebau now that he has given it such an excellent opportunity. An English journal, which ought to have known better, actually suggests that King Theebau has a right to demand compensation from the British Government for the injury done to some villages by Nyoung Oke and his rabble; but to entertain such a claim would be preposterous, inasmuch as the British authorities could not prevent Nyoung Oke escaping from their supervision into his own country. They did quite enough when they detained Nyoung Oke in Thyetmyo, and by deporting him to Calcutta put an end to further disturbances in Upper Burmah, thus in all probability saving Theebau from deposition and murder at the hands of the rebels who would undoubtedly have gathered around his brother.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The directors announce an interim dividend at the rate of four per cent. per annum being the same as for the last half-year, carrying forward £15,700.

MEDULSEEMA COFFEE AND CINCHONA COMPANY.—The prospectus of a company under the above title has been issued. The company is formed for the purchase of several well-known coffee and cinchona estates in Ceylon, the capital being £140,000, in 7,000 shares of £20 each, of which it is only intended to call up £10 at present. The list of applications will close on Saturday next.

GOLD MINING IN INDIA.—We are informed that the services of Professor Simons have been secured as mining engineer by the Devala Provident Gold Mining Company. Professor Simons returned from Wynaad on Tuesday week, and brings with him late information as to the quartz reefs of Southern India.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—The 48th Regiment has been added to the list of the infantry battalions returning to England this season from India. It is now stationed at Secunderabad, where its place will be taken by the 2nd Battalion 24th, lately arrived in India from Gibraltar. The 24th had been sent from Bombay to Puna to be quartered, but were to leave the latter station about the 15th ult. for Secunderabad, their place at Puna being taken by the 1st Battalion of the Rifle Brigade on arrival from England. The 77th Regiment, which had been officially put down for service at Seetapur and Benares, has, like the 24th and Rifle Brigade, had its destination changed. It now goes to Madras, with a wing of Bellary. The 48th will be the first regiment to embark for England, leaving Bombay about the 26th inst. in her Majesty's ship Euphrates. The 59th will follow in the Orotus on the 31st; the 2nd Battalion 1st Royal Scots in the Malabar on Nov. 5; and the 1st Battalion 5th Fusiliers, in the Fuma, on the 8th. The Serapis, which has just sailed for the East, and which is telegraphed to have passed Gibraltar, will leave Bombay early in December with the 62nd Regiment for Aden, whence she will bring home the 1st Battalion of the th. The battalions coming home will be for the most part quartered in southern garrisons, where there will be no want of barrack accommodation. Infantry quarters are vacant at Woolwich, Winchester, Chatham, Colchester, Dover, and Parkhurst, besides Fleetwood, Aldershot, and one or two Irish stations, to which regiments in the south will be moved in order to make way for those returning home. It is understood that three battalions will be moved to Ireland.—Times.

THE MAIWAND DISASTER.—Mr. W. W. Turnbull, secretary to the Supreme Court of the Good Templar Order, which during its annual session at Cardiff passed a resolution of sympathy on the occasion of the recent disaster to the British troops in Afghanistan, has received the following acknowledgment from the Viceroy of India:—"Government-house Simla, Sept. 3, 1880.—Sir, I am desired by Lord Ripon to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 12, forwarding copy of a resolution adopted by the conference of Good Templars at Cardiff on July 29, with reference to the defeat of General Burrows's brigade in Southern Afghanistan, and I am to request that you will convey to the International Court of the Order his Excellency's thanks for the sympathy with those who have suffered which the resolution expresses with so much feeling.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, H. W. PRIMROSE." A letter has been received from Lord Hartington, as Secretary of State for India, also acknowledging the receipt of the resolution. It is stated that there is a Good Templar lodge in every British regiment in Afghanistan.

OBITUARY.—Sir William Linton, of Skairfield, near Lockerbie, Dumfriesshire, whose death occurred on Saturday at his residence in Scotland, after a very short illness, from an attack of apoplexy, was the eldest son of the late Mr. Jabez Linton, of Hardrigg-lodge, Dumfriesshire, by his marriage with Jane, daughter of Mr. William Crockett, of Grahamshill, in the same county. He was born in the year 1801 at Kirkpatrick Fleming, in Dumfriesshire, and was educated at Edinburgh University. During the summer vacations of his attendance at the University he served four consecutive years as surgeon in a whale ship in the Arctic regions. He entered the Army Medical Department in 1826, and took his M.D. degree at Glasgow in 1834. He became staff surgeon of the first class in 1848. He served in Canada, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, Turkey, the Crimea, and India; he was deputy inspector general of the First Division of the army in the Crimea, was present in every action until the fall of Sebastopol, and had the care of the great hospital in Scutari in 1855 till the British forces came home. He was appointed inspector general of hospitals in 1857, and inspector general of hospitals in India in the following year. He was appointed an honorary physician to her Majesty in 1859, and retired from active service in 1863. He was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath in 1856, and was advanced to the dignity of a Knight Commander of that Order in 1865.—The colonelcy of the 99th (Duke of Edinburgh's) Regiment has become vacant by the death, on Thursday last, at the age of eighty-four, at his residence, in Gledhow-gardens, South Kensington, of General Samuel Braybrooke. The deceased general entered the army, as an ensign in the Ceylon Rifle Regiment, on Dec. 17, 1812, and served at the capture of the Khandian Territories in 1815, when the King was made prisoner by General Brownrigg, and the complete sovereignty of the Island of Ceylon vested in Great Britain. In the suppression of the Khandian rebellion in 1817-18 he was again engaged, receiving his commission as lieutenant in April of the latter year, and being promoted to the rank of captain in March, 1823. He was made a major of his regiment in February, 1835, and lieutenant colonel in January, 1844. In June, 1854, he received the rank of colonel by brevet, was made a major general in June, 1854, and appointed colonel of the 99th Foot in January, 1866; promoted to be lieutenant general in February, 1868; and general in April, 1875; he was placed on the retired list in October, 1877, on the issue of the new Army Promotion Warrant.—Colonel Hackett, V.C., late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, died on the 6th inst., at his residence, Riverstown, near Birr, King's County, from the effects of a gunshot wound in the abdomen, received accidentally. The deceased gentleman and some friends were out rabbit shooting on the previous Monday, when he placed his gun in a thicket, and in trying to remove it by grasping the barrel the piece discharged and the contents lodged in his body. He never rallied. This gallant officer served with the 23rd Fusiliers in the Crimea from June 6 to Sept. 6, 1855, including the siege of Sebastopol and assault of the Redan (medal with clasp and Turkish medal). He also took part in the Indian campaign of 1857-58, including the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, defeat of the Gwalior contingent at Cawnpore on Dec. 6, and siege and capture of Lucknow. He retired from the service by the sale of his commission in April, 1874. He received the Victoria Cross for daring gallantry at the Sikander Bagh, Lucknow, in having, with others, rescued a corporal of the 23rd, who was lying wounded and exposed to very heavy fire; also for conspicuous bravery, in having, under a heavy fire, descended the roof and cut down the thatch of a bungalow to prevent its being set on fire, and which at the time rendered invaluable service.

JOURNALISM.—The Leicester Daily Post has changed hands, Mr. Bradshaw having sold it to Mr. J. A. Parker, who was for many years editor and manager of the Indian Daily News of Calcutta. In the early portion of his Indian career Mr. Parker was the official shorthand writer to the Government of India.—Athenæum.

ORIENTAL COFFEE COMPANY.—The report states that in presenting to the shareholders the fourth annual report, the directors have great pleasure in notifying that the expectations held out to them at this period of last year have been more than realised. The virgin crop from the first year's clearing of 141 acres weighed out 27 tons 18cwt., and the net proceeds, after deducting all expenses and a full proportion of outlay on the estates, leave a profit of £1,244. With the first realisations, the directors felt justified in declaring, in May last, an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, which absorbed £457, and, after writing off one-third of the preliminary expenses, the balance of profit and loss carried forward amounts to £666. The directors propose to apply this by declaring a further dividend at the same rate, free of income-tax, for the half-year ending June 30, which will amount to £494, and to carry forward the balance, £172, to next year's account.

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

SHORTLY after the intelligence of the mutiny in India reached England in 1857, a public meeting was, as many of our readers will recollect, held at the Mansion-house, at the invitation of Mr. Alderman Finnis, who filled the office of Lord Mayor at the time, for the purpose of establishing a fund for the relief of the sufferers in that dreadful crisis. The appeal which was then made to the sympathies, not only of the inhabitants of these islands, but of all parts of the British Empire, and even of foreign States, was promptly and liberally responded to, and within a few months subscriptions to the fund to the amount of between £400,000 and £500,000 were received. Among other sums which were contributed to it while it was in process of formation was one of £3,000 from the surplus of the Times Crimean Sick and Wounded Fund. The names on the list of the committee over which Mr. Alderman Finnis presided, and of which Capt. G. J. Hamilton acted as secretary, included those of the late Sir E. Ryan, of Sir C. Trevelyan, Sir R. Temple, of Major General Tremeneere, and of many other distinguished men connected with India, whose zeal, care, and ability in the administration of the fund cannot be too highly commended. According to a memorandum which was drawn up by Major General Tremeneere in 1875, the committee had, from 1857 to the end of June, 1874, disbursed in relief to widows and other relatives of sufferers by the mutiny, and in the maintenance and education of orphans of officers, soldiers, and seamen who had served in India during the time, £434,907 17s. 11d., which included the expenses of management; the balance remaining in hand being £126,617 19s. 9d., and the estimated liabilities for all existing allowances £113,070 4s. 4d., thus leaving a surplus of £13,547 15s. 5d. The principle by which the committee would appear to have been guided in the distribution of relief was that every applicant for it should be proved to have been more or less a sufferer by the mutiny, and, acting upon that principle, they in the latter half of 1874 made an addition to the sums received by several of the annuitants out of the surplus which at the close of the first half of the year they found at their disposal. It became obvious, however, that as annuities lapsed owing to death or other causes the surplus would in the course of time assume such proportions that if it were divided among the surviving pensioners their allowances would be increased to an amount which would be unreasonably high, as well as foreign to the objects with which the fund had been instituted. It was, therefore, suggested that steps should be taken by which the committee should, as far as possible, be relieved from responsibility in the matter. In accordance with this suggestion, the committee, in the first instance, applied to the Charity Commissioners to take over the fund and release them from their trust; but finding that the commissioners, though willing to comply with their request, had no power to relieve them from their duties as trustees, application was made to the Court of Chancery, under whose authority a temporary scheme, which has been in operation for the last two or three years, has been sanctioned, in accordance with which the assets at the disposal of the committee have been transferred to the Paymaster General of the Court, the power being reserved to them to administer as before under an order of the Court the income of the fund, while the order is in no way to interfere with the allowances which have been granted to the present recipients, or to prevent the due consideration by the committee of any applications which may from time to time be brought under their notice in the future. The Court of Chancery having decreed that the further issue of annual reports by the committee was unnecessary, the last of those detailed accounts of their proceedings, which each successive year since the establishment of the fund had been published in the Times, relates to their operations during the twelve months ending Dec. 31, 1878. The following statement, however, which will show the position occupied by the fund at the close of last year, has been drawn up for the information of the committee:—

GEO. J. HAMILTON, Secretary.

THE ABANDONMENT OF THE S.S. "JEDDAH."

CAPTAIN CLARK, lately of the ss. Jeddah, has furnished the Strait Times with the following statement, signed by him, of the particulars of the abandonment of that vessel:—

"I left Penang on July 20 with a crew of fifty men, five European officers, and 953 adult pilgrims bound to Jeddah. The weather was heavy and threatening, strong head winds and high seas up to the '1½ deg. channel,' for two days only we had fine weather. After this (July 29) the weather became very heavy, the wind increasing almost to hurricane force at times, with a very high cross sea, the ship rolling, pitching, and straining heavily. The gale continued with unabating fury and the ship labouring and straining so heavily caused the boilers to break adrift from their fastenings on August 6. Steps were immediately taken to secure the boilers, but the weather was so bad that all the toms put in were broken up and every connection with the boilers broken. The water rose in the ship very rapidly, and the steam pumping power was rendered useless. The deck pumps were all at work and the Hadjis and firemen were baling the water out of the engine-room in buckets. Notwithstanding, the water gained about an inch per hour, and on the 7th, the water still increasing, all the boats were ordered to be prepared and provisioned. On the night of the 7th there was a great difference in the demeanour of the pilgrims; they armed themselves with knives and clubs. About 100 men were clustered all round my cabin on deck, and I was informed it was their deliberate intention to murder my wife. I satisfied myself assuredly on this point from the various conversations of the Hadjis, and their demeanour left no doubt in my mind as to their intention. At midnight they refused to take to the pumps, saying that they would sooner die than pump. I passed my wife through the window of my cabin, and got one of the officers to put her in one of the boats. Immediately after this, when starting to lower the boat, a general rush was made by the pilgrims, and I was pushed into the boat, during which I received several serious blows. The boat was manned by the chief engineer with a boat's crew. The boat went down with a rush, the chief mate, who was in the ship, was hurled overboard, and every effort was made to sink my boat. The Hadjis cut us away from the ship. There was a heavy sea on. The third engineer jumped or was thrown into the boat during the excitement and attack. I picked up the first officer and took him into my boat. This is all I know personally. It transpired in evidence at the court of inquiry that the second mate and eleven others—Hadjis and crew—who were in another boat, were similarly attacked and the boat cut away; the boat went down and all were drowned. I kept my boat's head hove to sea during the remainder of the night, and in the morning I saw no signs of the Jeddah. My boat was picked up about 10 a.m. by the Scindia and taken to Aden.—J. L. CLARK."

THE SIEGE AND BATTLE OF KANDAHAR.

THE battle of Kandahar, as the victory of September 18 will be known, is fully illustrated by both pen and pencil in the Kandahar News, Major Leach, R.E., V.C., contributing a sketch map. We take from our contemporary the following account of the siege up to the day of the sortie and battle:—

"JULY 29.—On the 29th commenced the work of strengthening our defences, removing enclosures, cutting down trees, &c., outside the walls, where the enemy might obtain cover. Those in front of the Eedga Gate were removed during the day. Some Pathans and their families were turned out of the city, the citadel walls being manned in case of a disturbance. Forty men of Jacob's Rifles came in this morning, also two bullocks, carrying ammunition, who walked into the fort by themselves, the latest arrivals from the battle-field having had their loads on their backs for two days. A telegraph line was laid round the city walls, placing all the gates in communication with each other and with the signal tower in the citadel. JULY 30.—Orders issued detailing officers and men to their posts, regiments being told off to certain positions of the city walls; a brigadier-general to be on duty every day. Some of the enclosures in front of the Herat Gate removed a 40-pounder gun mounted on the south-west corner bastion and a 9-pounder over the Eedga Gate. More Pathans turned out of the city. Plenty of wells containing excellent water found in the city and told off to the various regiments and departments. JULY 31.—Three companies 28th Native Infantry and some Puna Horse attacked the Seriab near north-east bastion and the village of Khairabad, and turned the enemy out of them, killing about fifty. Casualties, one man killed and two wounded of the 28th Native Infantry. From August 1 to 15 nothing particular occurred beyond the usual routine work of a garrison during a siege. Strong guards at the gates and a few sentries along the walls during the day, with reinforcements ready to turn out at a moment's notice, and sleeping on the walls at night, the gates being blocked up with sand-bags and the sentries doubled. Fire-balls, live shells, blue light, and torches kept ready at each gate in case of a night attack, which was considered not improbable, as the enemy were known to have constructed a considerable number of long scaling ladders. Every day the defences within were strengthened, and obstacles and cover outside removed under the protection of covering parties; wire entanglements also constructed all round the city walls outside the ditch, and abattis put up across the approaches to the gates. Water channels through the walls were stopped up, a large charge of powder being so placed inside that, on the removal of a certain sand-bag from the outside an explosion would occur, blowing the intruder out and indicating to the garrison the channel interfered with. Fires were also kept burning at the mouth of the channels inside the walls, so that if the obstructions were removed from the outside without an explosion the suffocating smoke would prevent anyone getting through. The Kotwell of Kandahar was made a State prisoner on the 3rd, and a proclamation was issued warning all Pathans to leave the city under penalty of death if they did not comply. The advanced guard of Ayub's army arrived before Kandahar on the 5th, and the villages on the east and south fronts and the cantonments on the west front were occupied by them in force on the 7th and following days. A large camp, composed principally of the tents taken at Maiwand, was pitched on the ground north of Picket Hill on the 6th, but on the following day a few shells from our 40-pounder on the north-west bastion made them clear out very sharp. Twelve guns were seen making their way from the camp towards Baba Walli. One of our shells fell into the Surteep's tent, killing three men, but unfortunately the generalissimo was out. On the evening of the 8th, the enemy opened fire from two guns on Picket Hill, but his shells did but little damage, and also threw some shells from our mortars into the village of Deh-Kwaja on the east front. On the 9th a large covering and working party went out of the Herat Gate, but were unable to do much work, as the enemy made it too hot for them, and they had to retire. A letter arrived from Sir R. Sandeman on the 11th, announcing a skirmish in clearing the Kojuk, also that General Phayre is collecting troops at Quetta and hoped soon to advance, that General Roberts left Cabul with a strong force on the 7th, and that troops had started from England for India. On the 12th a large working and covering party again went out at the Herat Gate to knock down walls and other covers, but did not succeed in doing much, as the enemy gathered in great force in the gardens and nullahs, and our troops had to retire under a very heavy fire. One Fusilier was killed and one was wounded, also nine native infantry. The enemy lost between fifty and sixty killed, amongst them Afzul Khan, the Governor of Furrak. There is a regular duel every morning between our 40-pounder and the gun on Picket Hill, but the enemy don't make very good shots, nor do they know how to burst their shells. All our guns are mounted on the walls, a 40-pounder on the north-west, south-west, and south-east bastions, and a field gun over each gate, and one in two of the corner bastions. Some of the enemy's sharpshooters having taken up a position in an enclosure about 350 yards from the south-west bastion gave Major Moore and his sharpshooters much trouble, especially one of them, who from his sudden appearance at unexpected places is known as 'Jack in the box.' During the 13th and 14th the enemy's working party had been seen hard at work in front of the general's garden, and on the 15th they opened fire from a gun on the Topkhana Gate." Then follows the account of the sortie, after which the following force order was issued on August 16 by General Primrose, C.S.I. :-

"The Lieutenant General commanding has much pleasure in bearing personal testimony to the gallant and determined behaviour of the troops this morning, both natives and Europeans, horse and foot. The enemy's loss has been reported to be very heavy, and many men of importance amongst them have been killed. Whilst deploring the loss of so many of our brave officers and men, the Lieutenant General desires to remind the force that we this morning stormed and took a fortified village of great strength. This will convince the troops that even with the advantage of cover the enemy must give way before us, and show how hopeless a task it would be for him to attempt an assault on Kandahar in the face of the deadly fire of the breech-loader. The Lieutenant General begs to thank all ranks for their gallant behaviour this morning." There was no firing on the 17th and 18th, and the fire balloons were seen to E. and S.E. on the 20th. The following days were marked by the retreat of the enemy and the opening of communications with Lieut. Phayre and General Roberts, whose force arrived on August 31. At 6 a.m. on Sept. 1 the generals commanding and principal staff officers of the Cabul and Kandahar Forces were assembled at General Roberts's quarters at the Sappar Gardens, and the proposed plan of attack was explained to them, which was as follows :-A strong body of infantry of the Kandahar Force to hold the right of Picket Hill, and while our 40-pounders engaged the guns on Baba Walli Kotal, to keep the enemy in the pass and on the hills in front of it in check. The cavalry of the Kandahar Force to watch the Moorcha Pass and support the infantry; E-B R.H.A. and six companies of infantry to occupy the village of Goondegaum and the adjoining hills; while General Gough, with the cavalry of the Cabul Force, worked down past them to the Argandab River to cut off the enemy's retreat. The three brigades of the Cabul Force to be massed in rear of Picket Hill, and to deliver the real attack by clearing the garden, storming the village of Ghundi Mulla Sahibdad in front, then turn the corner of Pir Pai Mall Hill and take the Baba Wali Kotal in rear, and the enemy's position at Mazra in flank. The programme was carried out exactly. The troops of the Kandahar Force, under General Burrows, commanding, took up their positions about 8.30 a.m., the 40-pounders at the north end of Picket Hill, four companies 2-7th Fusiliers and 19th Native Infantry behind the walls of the cavalry lines, the 4th Rifles in the Goorkhas village, two companies 1st Grenadiers, four companies 66th Regiment, and two companies

28th Native Infantry, under Brigadier General Daubeny, continuing the line to the left along Picket Hill, Karez Hill to Chilzina. About 9 a.m. the 40-pounders opened on Baba Walli Kotal and were replied to by a very brisk fire from the enemy's guns posted there. The duel between them continued for the next two and a-half hours. Shortly after the commencement of the artillery fire, General Baker's Brigade, composed of the 72nd Highlanders, 5th Goorkhas, 2nd and 3rd Sikhs, started from the left of Karez Hill, whence Sir Frederick Roberts and his staff watched the movements, and disappeared into the dense gardens on that side. C-2 Royal Artillery opened fire on the village of Ghundi Mulla Sahibdad from the ground between Picket and Karez Hills, and the Screw Gun Battery from the front of the latter. After a brief artillery fire some horsemen and infantry were seen escaping from the village, and it appeared unoccupied; but when the 2nd Goorkhas advanced in skirmishing order from the left a hot fire from the houses showed that it was full of men. The 92nd Highlanders in the meantime had formed up behind a garden on the right, and their leading companies working round beyond it advanced at a run in splendid style without firing a shot, and got into the village just as the Goorkhas reached it from the low ground on the left. The enemy, all Ghazis, were soon seen streaming out beyond it towards Pir Pai Mall, but were quickly followed by General Macpherson's men, and the united brigades (General Baker having worked round so as to touch Macpherson's left) pushed on towards the Pir Pai Mall shoulder. General Ross now went forward and took command, the 3rd Brigade remaining in reserve under the immediate orders of General Roberts. General Ross found the enemy's regulars strongly posted in front of the village of Pir Pai Mall and in two camps on the level beyond it. They belonged, it is believed, to the Kandahar regiments, and held their own steadily for some little time. But the British troops were not to be denied, and the enemy were soon in full flight up the valley under a hot artillery fire from our guns. This was enough for the main body of the infantry, and those posted in the Baba Walli Kotal, as soon as they saw their flank turned retreated to their camp at Mazra, preceded by Ayub Khan and most of his officers. After this there was no more fighting as far as the infantry were concerned, and when General Roberts arrived with the 3rd Brigade the battle was over. The cavalry of the Cabul Force, under General Gough, left camp at 8 a.m., and waited at Ahasabad for the development of the attack on Pir Pai Mall. At about 11 o'clock they proceeded to Kokaran, and, crossing the Argandab below the Surtip's house, pursued straggling parties of the enemy to Shuwin and the country round them, and returned to camp at night via the Baba Walli Pass. About 300 of the enemy were cut up. Two officers and twelve men were wounded. The cavalry of the Kandahar Force, under General Nuttall, moved into position to watch the Moorcha Pass and hills in front of Baba Walli at 8 o'clock; at 2.30 they, the 3rd Cavalry, and 3rd Sind Horse, pushed through the Baba Walli Pass, which was deserted, and pursued the enemy fifteen miles up the Argandab on its left bank to a point about four miles beyond Kaja Mulla, cutting up over 100 between the villages and the hills. Had it not been for the numerous dense gardens and orchards, in which the flying enemy took refuge and where the cavalry could not get at them, their loss would have been much greater. The loss of the enemy was about 500 killed and the same number wounded, not including those cut up by the cavalry. Thirty-one of Ayub's guns fell into our hands, the whole of his camp equipage, and a large quantity of ammunition and some grain and forage, also a few mules and an elephant.

On the 1st of November Messrs. WM. H. ALLEN and CO. will issue No. 1 of a New High-class Shilling Magazine, entitled

THE ARMY & NAVY MAGAZINE.

This Magazine has been established for the purpose of supplying the want, which has so long been felt, of a Magazine at a moderate price devoted to Naval, Military, and all other branches of Government Service, both at home and abroad.

Had any doubt existed as to the success of such a publication, any such misgivings would have been immediately dispelled by the very numerous promises of support and assistance which have come in from all sides.

The proprietors trust that the names of the writers whose services they have been fortunate enough to secure will be a sufficient guarantee that the literary work will be of the highest class, and no effort will be spared to maintain this standard in the pages of the Magazine.

Each number will contain a portrait of one or more of the leading Military and Naval Commanders of the day. The November number will contain, by special permission, a portrait of H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE, F.M., Commander-in-Chief.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Oct. 2; Madras and Allahabad, Sept. 30; Calcutta, Sept. 29.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 21 state that in Madras rain has fallen in all the districts from which reports had been received; harvest is proceeding with an average outturn, and prospects are fair. In Bombay good and general rain has again fallen; prospects are now fairly favourable everywhere; and rabi sowing has commenced in places. More rain is, however, required in the Satara district, and in parts of the Southern Mahratta Country. In Bengal there has been slight rain during the week, and more rain is now wanted in many places. The harvesting of the autumn crops is proceeding with satisfactory results. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh there has not been much rain generally; but in Meerut and Bareilly the fall was heavy, resulting in floods which have done much damage to village dwelling-houses in Meerut, and have caused great loss of crops and, it is believed, of cattle in Bareilly. More rain is required over the greater part of the provinces, especially in the Lower Doab. In the Punjab good rain has fallen in several districts, and agricultural prospects have much improved, especially in the Hissar and Delhi Divisions, where there had been some ground for apprehension. In the other provinces and in the Native States prospects remain generally satisfactory. Except in some districts of the North Western Provinces and Oudh, general prospects may now be regarded as, on the whole, favourable throughout the Empire.

THE health report for the same week is as follows:—Bombay: Karachi and Hyderabad, fever in some talukas. Baroda and Nausari: Fever prevalent, also in parts of Surat; general health good. Bengal: Fever prevalent. Twenty-four Pergunnahs and six other divisions: cholera still in Cuttack. N.W.P. and Oudh: fever in some districts, but general health good. Punjab: No health report. Central Provinces: Cholera still in Sambalpur; small-pox in some districts. British Burma: Generally good; small-pox in Bassein. Assam: Good. Mysor and Coorg: Good. Central India States: Cholera continuing in Morar (Gwalior); elsewhere, health good. Rajputana: Fever decreasing in Sirohi and Meywar; elsewhere, health good.

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 13.—Following received from Chief Commissioner, Rangoon, Oct. 12—In case exaggerated accounts reach you, I beg to report as follows:—On Sunday, the 10th, Deputy Commissioner, Thyetmyo, reported that Upper Burmans were collecting on frontier and intended to attack British territory. On Wednesday he arranged with commanding officer for increasing the Allanmyo garrison by one company Native Infantry. Yesterday (Monday) Deputy Commissioner telegraphed that possibly native informants had been misled, and there was no cause for alarm now. The cause for dissatisfaction was said to be our refusal to pay indemnity for losses caused by Nyoung Oke Prince's incursion last May. I do not anticipate trouble, but have directed Deputy Commissioner to take steps to improve his sources of information, as alarms of this kind harass troops and disturb the public; such rumours will have effect on trade, and already Flotilla Company's agent, Thyetmyo, has telegraphed alarming rumour to his Rangoon principal. Latest news from Mandalay gave no sign of probable troubles."

"FROM VICEROY, OCT. 17.—Kurram was evacuated 16th. St. John telegraphs from Kandahar 16th, all quiet in city and neighbourhood. No doubt of Ayub having entered Herat; Musa Jan is with him; Shere Ali's widow has remained at Farah with Hashim Khan. Zamindawar people have resolved to submit to us if called on, and commenced sending in supplies. There is a report in city of disturbances at Mazar-i-Sharif. Caravans are arriving from Herat. Chief Commissioner telegraphs from Moulmain under date 16th. Nothing has occurred on Thyetmyo, frontier, and no fresh rumours are reported thence. Origin of previous rumours not ascertained. I have no grounds for anticipating unusual events on frontier."

THE Standard of to-day publishes a telegram from Kandahar announcing the arrival of Mr. Lyall and Col. Sandeman. The latter concurs with General Phayre and Col. St. John in favour of appointing the Wali as Governor.

THE officers commanding detachments of troops which have been sent into Zemindawar report that the country is everywhere unsettled, Farrah and Terin being the centres of hostile intrigues. A cavalry sowar was on Sunday shot by a Pathan fanatic.

A KANDAHAR telegram which appeared in Monday's Standard contained the following news:—

"Mr. Lyall had received orders to come on here immediately. It is proposed to march up three Bengal regiments to take the place of three Bombay regiments. The news has created quite a sensation here. It is probable that Kandahar will be handed over to Abdul Rahman, the Wali being appointed by the latter to act as his governor of the place. The British will occupy it until Abdul Rahman is in a position to take it over. A portion of General Phayre's force is now thirty miles up the Argandab Valley, and the officer commanding reports that the villagers have not returned to their homes, and that all cultivation of the land has ceased."

A KANDAHAR telegram, dated 17th inst., says that the Maiwand despatches are unfavourably commented on at Kandahar. It is observed that General Burrows does not explain what he intended when he marched from Khushki-Nakhud, or why he fought a defensive battle on the open plain with the numbers against him and encumbered with an enormous quantity of stores and baggage; and why, if he meant to receive the attack, he did not choose a defensible position. General Nuttall's despatch is considered to prove that the cavalry were unskilfully and weakly handled, and that there was a want of agreement between him and the officer commanding the artillery. Many of the statements of both generals are disputed by those who were present, and what really happened is said to have been forgotten in the busy months which elapsed before General Burrows's despatch was penned. The troops under orders to march to the Helmund are detained for want of transport—a proof how inadequate the transport service still is for the troops in Southern Afghanistan. Nor is this wonderful, seeing that 2,346 transport animals were killed and missing at Maiwand, together with 455 followers. A deserter from the 23rd Bombay Infantry ran a muck on Tuesday evening and mortally wounded a sentry of the 7th Fusiliers at the citadel gate. He was wounded and secured, and will doubtless be hanged. The guns captured in General Roberts's fight of Sept. 1 have been despatched to India.

THE Indian journals contain the full despatches relative to the defeat of Maiwand, for which we are unable to find space in this issue. The telegraphic summaries have already made our readers acquainted with their salient points.

H.E. SIR JAMES FERGUSSON, Governor of Bombay, the Hon. H. Rivers Thompson, and the Hon. J. Gibbs have been created ex-officio Companions and Members of the Order of the Indian Empire. Dr. Johan E. de Vry Matheseos, of Lieden, has also been made a Companion of the same Order.

THE Pioneer gives a prominent place to the following announcement:—Mr. Lepel Griffin will succeed Sir Henry Daly as agent to the Governor General in Central India. Mr. Griffin, who is about to proceed to England on leave, will take up his appointment at Indore in February next. The following political appointments are also announced:—Major W. F. Prideaux has been made agent to the Governor General with the ex-King of Oudh, and superintendent of political pensions. Col. W. Tweedie is appointed political agent for the Western Rajputana States and commandant of the Erinpura Irregular Force.

THE Press Commissioner has informed the Indian journals that by an order of the Secretary of State for India, recently communicated to the military authorities in India, it has been decided that cabin No. 9 in her Majesty's Indian troopships is in future to be appropriated for invalid officers only on homeward voyages; and that the regular accommodation for ladies, heretofore provided for twelve per ship on such voyages, is to be restricted to eight.

SOME sensation has been caused by the arrest at Puna of Lieut. the Hon. G. W. H. Vernon, 12th Lancers, on a charge of striking a sowar of the Governor's Body Guard when returning home from the Puna racecourse. Mr. Vernon, however, denies that he struck the man.

THE Pioneer contains a long detailed account, or rather collection of accounts, of the catastrophe at Naini Tal, which should, in the opinion of the civil and military public, direct attention to the haphazard way in which sites for houses at hill stations are often selected and built upon. We give elsewhere particulars of the hairbreadth escape of Sir Henry Ramsay. A committee, chiefly composed of engineer officers, has been appointed under his presidency to inquire into the state of the hills, and the chance of such a danger recurring. On their conclusions very much depend the future of Naini Tal.

THE unprecedented rains which caused the landslip at Naini Tal swelled the River Ramgunga to an unusual extent, and great loss of life and property in Rohilkund has been the result of the inundation, which was at its height on Sept. 20 and 21. Native report says that three thousand persons have been drowned in the Moradabad district, and another account says that fifteen hundred were swept away in Rampur. The loss of cattle and damage to the crops has been so great that an Allahabad contemporary thinks it is not easy to see how the winter can be tided over without some special measures of indulgence or relief to the cultivators.

IN consequence of the late lamentable accident at Naini Tal the Directors of the Bareilly and Kumaon Railway Company (Limited) have decided to withdraw the prospectus for the present.

A TELEGRAM from Alexandria states that great damage has been caused to the Egyptian Government Railway at Suez and in the vicinity by a storm. Traffic on the line is entirely stopped. The embankment has been cut off in places to a depth of five yards, and to an extent equal to the length of rails. About three days will be required to repair the line. Torrents of water came down from the mountains. Great efforts are being made to prevent the inundation of Suez.

THE Government of India has ruled that young medical officers on arriving in India are not to be posted to civil appointments, and further that such officers are ineligible for civil employment until they have completed two years' military duty.

ORDERS were issued from army headquarters on Sept. 25 providing for the grant of furlough to 33 per cent. of the native army. As a general rule, says the Pioneer, the limit is fixed at 10 per cent. each year. It has also been ordered that all restrictions hitherto imposed on the grant of leave to officers on private affairs are to be regarded as cancelled.

IN reviewing the musketry returns for the season 1879-80 his Excellency the Commander in Chief regrets that he is again obliged to withhold the 1st Infantry prize for the native army; and again on account of inaccuracies in marking. In the case of certain Madras regiments stationed in Bengal the marking has not received close supervision. In particular, in the 27th Madras Native Infantry "all prizes are forfeited by order of his Excellency the Commander in Chief." Owing also to employment on field service the number of regiments and men untrained is considerable. With regard to British cavalry regiments the Commander in Chief remarks that the shooting is not sufficiently good, considering the means of instruction available and the excellent carbines now provided. In the native cavalry, however, in which the system of musketry has lately been introduced, the progress made is fair, and the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry have earned special notice by the very high figure of merit recorded—the marking being undoubtedly good. In Bengal "the extraordinary high figures of merit of 164·82 made by 162 recruits of the 4th Punjab Infantry, a regiment distinguished for exactness," is much commended.

IT is stated that the Financial Department has recently submitted to the Government of India a scheme, which it urges should be adopted at once, whereby Government shall make it compulsory for all uncovenanted officers in the public service to deposit a certain percentage on their salaries in the Government savings banks. Before according its sanction to the proposed measure the Government of India, it is added, has called upon all local Governments and administrations for an expression of opinion on the subject.

IT is rumoured in Calcutta that several appointments, designated superintendents of postal and money order accounts, have recently been, or are shortly to be, created, carrying salaries of Rs.200 and upwards, and that Mr. Monteath, late director general of post offices in India, has applied for officers from home to fill the new posts. The Anglo-Indian, referring to this rumour, says:—"Mr. Monteath's design is so distinctly opposed to the spirit of the India-office despatch ordering the appointment of young men of the country to all offices of the kind that, if the Anglo-Indian Association made a representation to the Viceroy on the subject, his Excellency would be likely to listen to it."

THERE are now thirty-three volunteer corps in India, with a total enrolled strength of upwards of 8,000 men.

THE subject of Afghanistan was touched upon at a meeting of electors at Blackburn, on Saturday, by the Hon. E. Stanhope, who said England could never afford to ignore Afghanistan. Sir H. Drummond Wolf, in his opinion, strongly condemned the policy of the Government in reference to Afghanistan. The speech of Lord Hartington in the House of Commons shook the loyalty of the troops around Kandahar, who were previously well affected towards us, and the disasters attending the march of General Burrows required to be explained. By withdrawing men from the service the Government were trying to send the weaker vessels to the wall, and endeavouring to defend at the expense of those gentlemen the conduct of Lord Ripon, who was their political colleague. He maintained that Lord Ripon had been sent to India to surrender Afghanistan and Kandahar. He could see war looming in the distance.

SIR GEORGE CAMPBELL, addressing his constituency at Kirkcaldy, took a bold view of the recent battles and the cause of the defeat. "Looking back on the folly perpetrated by the Tory Government and the last Lord Lytton, it seemed almost incredible, especially in the face of the solemn warnings addressed to them by the late Lord Lawrence. They had, it was true, found out their error, and were anxious enough to back out of Cabul. But it was easier to get into Afghanistan than to get out of it. Some of the Tories actually blamed the Government for the defeat of poor General Burrows and his brigade, but it was Lord Lytton who had placed General Burrows in a false position by supporting his puppet, the Wali, at Kandahar, and fighting Ayub Khan, whom we never ought to have fought against."

THE first number of the new service organ, the Army and Navy Magazine, will be published by Messrs. W. H. Allen on Nov. 1. A portrait of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge will commence the promised gallery of leading military and naval commanders. The programme of the first number is varied and promising. It will contain—A Preface by Dr. W. H. Russell, LL.D., &c.; Derval Hampton, by James Grant, author of "The Romance of War;" Kandahar, by Col. G. B. Mangleson, C.S.I.; A Garibaldian Episode, by G. A. Henty; Chinese Art of War, by Demetrius Charles Boulger; Our Volunteers, their Strength and Weakness, by Joseph Bennett, captain Tower Hamlets Rifle Brigade; Greece: Military, Naval, and Civil, by E. St. John-Brenon; Scarlet Coats and Scarlet Fever, by Adolphe Smith; Service Gossip and "Gup;" Reviews and Notices.

DURING the week ending Sept. 18 there were 204 deaths in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 24.7 per 1,000 per annum of population. The same week in Madras the deaths numbered 281, being a death-rate of 37.0 per 1,000 per annum. In Bombay during the week ending the 21st ult. there were 399 deaths, being a death-rate of 30.17 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week: Major C. S. Pratt (Bengal); Mr. J. O'Connor.

THE INDIAN MAIL DAY.

THE Government correspondence on the question of the day of departure of the homeward mail is published in the Bombay journal, which also contains a letter urging the adoption of the days of departure suggested by the Secretary of State. These days are Monday evening in the monsoon and Thursday evening in the fine season, and the following table will serve to show how the various centres interested will be affected:—

		N.E. Monsoon. Day of Departure.	S.W. Monsoon. Day of Departure.
Calcutta	...	Monday evening	Friday evening
Madras...	...	Tuesday "	Saturday "
Bombay	...	Thursday "	Monday "
London	...	Tuesday morning	Monday morning.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

WE have received from the secretary of the Indian Medical Defence Fund a summary of the present grievances of the service, which are mainly comprised in the statement that, although an essentially military medical department, it has, by the recent orders, as a military service been practically annihilated. The remedy sought for is thus defined in the words of the circular:—"If the Indian service is to maintain its prestige and efficiency, and if those now in its ranks are to be saved from manifest injustice and injury, reform and redress must be accorded on the following lines:—The military surgeon generalship in each Presidency to be given alternately to the two services. The most favourable circles of administration to be more fairly allotted, by being given alternately to the two services as vacancies accrue. The privileges conferred by the Royal Warrant of November last to be extended to the Indian service, with at least equality in all respects in matters of pay, pension, rank, &c. A modification of the furlough rules, allowing leave for sickness contracted in and by the service to count towards pension, and such a reconsideration and reform of the recent alterations in the mode of promotion as shall effectually obviate undue favouritism and protect the senior members of the service from unmerited supercession by their juniors."

GENERAL ROBERTS'S DESPATCHES.

A TELEGRAPHIC summary of General Roberts's despatches, which have been published in the last Gazette of India is furnished by the Times correspondent:—

"General Roberts's despatch, dated Sept. 26, details the strength of his force, his reasons for only employing mountain guns, the amount of supplies and carriage, and the numbers of followers. The desertion of the Afghan and Hazara drivers entailed heavy work on the troops. The distance actually traversed was 318 miles, which was finished in twenty-three days, including two halts. The march was begun on August 9, and Ghazni, a distance of ninety-eight miles, was reached on the 15th. A letter from Col. Tanner, from Khelat-i-Ghilzai, received on the 20th, reported that all was well. Khelat was reached on the 23rd, a march of eight days and a distance of 134 miles. General Primrose on the 26th, reported that the investment had been abandoned, and that Ayub had taken up a position at Argandab. On the 27th Col. St. John met General Gough's cavalry guard at Rohat, nineteen miles from Candahar. Ayub Khan was reported to be strengthening his position. The force halted at Rohat on the 29th. A letter was received from General Phayre, dated from Killa Abdulla, on August 24, expressing a hope that his division would march from that place on August 30. General Roberts felt that this news precluded all chance of General Phayre's arrival in time to co-operate with him. On the 31st the force reached Kandahar, a march of eighty-eight miles in seven days, including one halt. General Roberts describes the disposition of his force on Sept. 1 and the reconnaissance under General Gough to ascertain the chance of turning the enemy's position. He next describes the plan of attack to threaten the enemy's left, an attack in force by Pir-Paimal, the disposition of the troops by Generals

Ross and Macpherson to attack the Sahib Dad village and clear the enclosures up to Pir-Paimal, and General Baker's advance westerly for the purpose of clearing the gardens in front. Sahib Dad was carried in a most dashing style by the 92nd Highlanders and the 2nd Goorkhas. Major White, Lieut. Wheatley, Private Dennis Roddick, and four sepoy of the Goorkhas were noticed for distinguished gallantry. Meanwhile the 2nd Brigade, in spite of a stubborn resistance, cleared the enclosures. Our loss was severe, including Col. Brownlow, Capt. Frome, and Sergt. Cameron. Col. Brownlow's loss is greatly deplored. The repulse of the enemy's charge by the 2nd Sikhs, under Col. Boswell, is specially noticed. Sergts. Jacobs, Lander, and Gordon, of the 72nd Highlanders, and ten sepoy of the 2nd Sikhs were prominent during the action. Pir-Paimal was carried at noon. The 3rd Brigade then advanced. General Ross, relying on the courage and eagerness of his troops, wisely determined to press forward without reinforcements. The enemy retired to an entrenched camp, which they prepared to hold stubbornly. It was necessary to storm the position, and the entrenchment was carried at the bayonet's point by the 92nd Highlanders, supported by the 2nd Goorkhas. The 23rd Pioneers, under cover of the well-directed shells of the screw gun battery, under Col. Robinson and Major White, were first to reach the enemy's guns, closely followed by the sepoy and the 2nd Goorkhas. Three guns were captured by the 3rd Sikhs, under Col. Money. On the extreme left the enemy were now completely routed, but the nature of the ground prevented General Ross realising the extent of the victory. Expecting to have to attack a fresh position further on, he ordered the 1st and 2nd Brigades to halt and replenish their ammunition. A subsequent advance of one mile showed that Ayub's camp was deserted. Thirty-two pieces of artillery, including two of the captured guns, were taken. Captains White and Douglas, Corporal McGilvray, and Privates Grieve, Mackintosh, and Grey, of the 92nd Highlanders; and Major Becher and three sepoy, of the 2nd Goorkhas, were specially noticed for their gallantry and forwardness. As further pursuit was hopeless, the infantry brigades were halted at the Mazra village, where they were joined by General Macgregor's Brigade. Meanwhile, General Nuttall's Bombay Cavalry were ordered to advance and to pursue the enemy on the left bank of the Argandab. General Gough's cavalry, which at the outset had been held in readiness in the rear of the left to operate by way of Gundigan towards the bed of the Argandab River, having crossed the river, pushed beyond the line of the enemy's retreat towards Karez, killing 350 Afghans. The first brigade halted at Mazra all night, while the remaining troops returned to Kandahar. Capt. Straton was killed by a lurking Ghazi while heliographing the success of General Ross's turning movement. His loss was deeply deplored, and his services are favourably mentioned. General Roberts also records his deep sorrow at the murder of Lieut. MacLaine. The loss of the British troops was forty men killed and 228 wounded. Of the enemy's loss there were buried between Pir-Paimal and Kandahar 600 men. It is estimated that their total loss is 1,200. The enemy's force is calculated to have amounted to 12,800 men.

"The conduct and bearing of the troops are eulogised by the general. The rapidity of the march is the best testimony of the efficiency, discipline, and spirit of the force. Although much provocation was received by the murder of stragglers, not one act infringing the rules of civilised warfare was committed by our troops. The persons and property of the natives were respected, and everywhere compensation was given for the supplies taken. General Roberts alludes to General Ross in terms of high praise; expresses his indebtedness to Generals Macpherson, Baker, Macgregor, and Gough, and speaks with thanks of the aid given to him by Colonel Johnson, of the Artillery, and Colonel Perkins, of the Engineers. General Roberts also records his favourable opinion of the excellent service performed by the following officers:—Lieutenants Smith, of the Artillery; Captains Apperley, Stewart-Mackenzie, Gough, and MacMuir, of the 9th Lancers; Major Guinness, Captains Garnett, Kane, and Murray, and Lieutenants Milne and Munro, of the 72nd Highlanders; Major White, Captains Singleton, Darvall, Scott Napier, Douglas, and Cunynham of the 92nd Highlanders; Colonel Cracroft and Major Willock, of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry; Majors Anderson and Macpherson and Captain Egerton, of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry; Majors Buller, Colledge, and Gerard, of the Central India Horse; Major Becher and Lieutenant Wheatley, of the 2nd Goorkhas; Captains Patterson and Gordon, of the 23rd Pioneers; Captain Stedman, of the 24th Punjab Infantry; Majors Platt, Slater, and Hastings, of the 2nd Sikh Infantry; Majors Griffiths and Aislabie, of the 3rd Sikh Infantry; Major Sym, Captain Molloy, and Lieutenants Martin, Chenevix, Trench, and Lucas. The name of Colonel Chapman is prominently brought to General Haines's notice, as is also that of Major Badcock. Surgeon-General Hanbury's services are also specially noticed. Colonel Low and Major Cowie are also mentioned with special approbation. The political officers noticed are Colonels Ridgeway, Euan Smith and Prothero, of the Personal Staff, and Colonels Sherston, Pole Carew, Rowley, and Williamson, adjutant-generals."

The Commander in Chief in his despatch, after complimenting Sir F. Roberts on his clear and able despatch, says that the admirable spirit displayed by Sir Donald Stewart in depriving himself of the flower of his force and the skilful manner in which he afterwards brought the rest of his troops to India will be brought to the notice of the Government hereafter. General Haines concurred, after some doubt, in the wisdom of the view urged by Sir Donald Stewart and Sir F. Roberts that no wheeled carriages of any kind should accompany the force "on its march from Cabul to Kandahar, which had been criticised as a most rash military operation. . . . It would be out of place to point to its success in justification of any undue rashness, but it is right to state that, after a full consideration of all the circumstances, those who knew best felt satisfied that such troops, under such a commander, could cope successfully with any obstacles which might present themselves, and the results have fully borne out this feeling."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE STUDY OF HINDUSTANI.*

MR. LYALL presents a condensed sketch of the origin of the various grammatical forms of what is called by Europeans the Hindustani language. It was originally written for the Encyclopædia Britannica, but was considered "too detailed and minute in its treatment" for insertion therein. The editor's opinion seems a sound one; for the sketch is too detailed and concise to be even understood by one not previously familiar with the subject, while at the same time it is too sketchy to be useful to one who can follow it. Mr. Lyall has fairly summarised the main decisions arrived at by Mr. Beames, Mr. Kellogg, Dr. Hoernle, and Dr. Trumpp, who have treated the subject at length in their respective works; and he ventures on only one or two little suggestions of his own, among which the following deserves consideration, that the agent ne "may have arisen out of the pronominal instrumentals ini, uni, jini, tini, kini, which were in use down to a very recent period." The writer of even a sketch should, however, abstain from general assertions not warranted by fact. The paradigms Mr. Lyall gives (p. 31) are not "good for all the nouns in the language," for even as we write such masculines as dhū, ān, dāru, and such feminines as bhaun, gā, o, gā, e, sonh, rom, readily occur, no two of which are declined alike, nor do any of them agree with his paradigms.

Mr. Lyall has certainly studied the language of which he treats with some care, and, like all those who have given attention to the subject, he carefully distinguishes between the Urdū and the Bhāshā or Hindī. The latter is the language of Northern India, the former is an accidental excrescence, which, as soon as a scientific investigation of language is commenced, is dismissed from the mind as worthless. The hybrid Urdū, which has been so extravagantly petted and bribed by the English, is no language at all. It is as unintelligible to the masses of the people as English itself. This fact is notorious; it is discovered by everyone who, having learnt Urdū, attempts to converse with the people. He finds them talking an uncouth and barbarous tongue, containing scarcely a word that he can recognise; and the result is that the "griffin" generally subsides behind his interpreter, and troubles himself no more with the matter. But the language he despises is only uncouth and barbarous because he does not understand it. He has been coached in an artificial dialect, which native officials have been induced by self-interest to acquire, and not unnaturally he conceives that all deviations from his standard result from the crass ignorance of the population. Happily a better knowledge is now gaining ground. The fact that Hindī, in its various forms, is the real language of the people, and the necessity for direct communication with those whose industry and learning are rapidly bringing into importance, is now gradually becoming recognised. Its first public recognition is the permission just accorded in Bihār for the presentation of official documents in the Devanāgarī alphabet. This is all that is wanted to allow the Hindū population a fair chance in the struggle for life. Native Indian words cannot well be written in the Persian character, but with Devanāgarī, or even Roman characters, a Hindū can express himself with freedom and clearness. Furthermore, the permission to use in official documents the Devanāgarī alphabet removes from the most patient, industrious, and promising portion of the population a social and political stigma, which it has been ungenerous and impolitic so long to maintain.

THE vivacious author of the work which Miss Tilton has translated for the benefit of English readers would probably find many to sympathise with him when he tells us: "If before I had made up my mind to go to Holland some professor of geography had stopped me in the street and demanded suddenly, 'Where is Zealand?' I should have remained speechless." There is a general information of sorts, or what does duty for it, about Holland, its history, its dykes, cheeses, and its masters of painting. But a minute or even accurate topographical knowledge of the strange mélange of terra firma and water that constitutes the territory in Europe of the kingdom of Holland is indeed sufficiently rare. Still we think that many who have a passing and partial acquaintance with the Netherlands will be found to whom the graphic pictures drawn by the Italian traveller will at once recall and fill up their memories of the country where the sea has ever been the unrelenting enemy against which man has to maintain an unrelenting struggle, and, at the same time, has been in war the means of offence and defence, in peace the element on which the Dutchmen have won glory and riches. The Italian contrasts continually the skies, the climate, the flat and uninteresting landscapes of Holland with those of his own country, but he has a true knowledge of the history and the greatness of Holland both in arts and arms. The industry and cleanliness seem perhaps to strike him with most admiration, not to say awe. Signor de Amicis was no perfunctory traveller; he peregrinated the remote provinces and visited the smaller towns as well as the greater capitals; the dead cities of the Zuyder Zee as well as the flourishing Dordrecht, or the fashionable Scheveningen. Since his visit the great Amsterdam Canal has progressed to its completion, and the draining of the Zuyder Zee has advanced beyond an ideal scheme. But the tourist who may be tempted to follow in the track of the author of this lively diorama of Holland will find little changed. There have been other works written since the first appearance of the Italian original. Contributors to magazines and journals, who have been enabled by the increasing convenience of transit afforded by the Great Eastern or the Chatham and Dover Companies to take a holiday trip to Holland, have given the public many an animated sketch and amusing description; but the minute delineation, and the bold generalisation combined, the comic exaggeration which does not mislead, and the exquisite, though not obtrusive, subjectiveness which pervades the work will not fear comparison. The Dutch literature and art are each briefly but instructively treated, and the internal history is utilised to furnish traditions illustrative of each place of interest, but the Holland described is the Holland of the present, "the glorious, modest, and austere country."

CORRESPONDENCE.

INDIAN HISTORIANS.

WE are glad to have the opportunity of publishing the subjoined letter,—taking the lead, we hope, of a reviving interest in the past history and local annals of each Independent Native State in India—which has been so well inaugurated by Sir Salar Jung. The letter refers to a work by Professor Dowson, in continuation of Sir H. M. Elliot's "Historians of India," now in course of publication by Messrs. Allen:—

Hyderabad Residency, Feb. 23, 1880.

FROM CAPT. F. A. WILSON, FIRST ASSISTANT RESIDENT, HYDERABAD, TO A. C. LYALL, ESQ., C.B., SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

With reference to this Office letter No. 85, dated 9th inst., I am desired by the Resident to express his regret at the delay that has occurred in furnishing information regarding the MSS. required by Professor Dowson from the libraries at Hyderabad, and to state that it has been due to his having had to await the result of an inquiry which his Highness the Nizam's minister had kindly undertaken to have made. Sir Salar Jung now explains that it took some time to obtain access to the private libraries of Hyderabad, and to note the titles of MSS. bearing on the history of the Deccan principalities. He has now forwarded the accompanying list of the MSS. available, and expresses his readiness to help Professor Dowson in procuring transcripts of any work in the list which he may require.

2. In return, Sir Salar Jung requests that he may be furnished with a list of all similar works which Professor Dowson may have succeeded in collecting elsewhere, in order that he may be able to compare notes, and so be in a better position to assist the professor in future when he has himself made future additions to his own collection at Hyderabad.

3. Sir Salar Jung further begs that, if possible, he may be furnished with lists of all the Oriental historical works which are to be found in the libraries of the different native States in India, and in some of the well-known European collections, such as those in England and at the Vatican in Rome, &c. Sir R. Meade will be glad to be informed if this request can be complied with. Appended—Printed list of 224 MSS.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

INDIAN SMALL CAUSE COURTS.

THE bill just introduced into the Supreme Legislative Council to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Small Cause Courts has an interest which extends to all classes. We are not surprised to learn that these courts are the oldest in India, having been established in 1753, for they are eminently suited to the country; in them alone can we get that speedy and inexpensive decision of a case which is so necessary to justice. Our High Courts, instead of being, as at home, one of the bulwarks of the constitution, are regarded here as unfortunate necessities, by means of which, though only after long delay and much expense, one may finally defend, or come by, one's own. The Small Cause Courts are better suited to the country, because they come nearer in form to the indigenous legal institutions of the country. To a suitor there is no necessity for the employment of skilled legal assistance, for one can bring, or defend, a suit in person without difficulty. The court is, in fact, one of satisfactory arbitration, where cases are heard and decisions given on their merits and where special pleadings and legal quibbles are almost unknown. One goes to the Small Cause Court for a prompt and reasonable decision, and he rarely fails to get it, and that, too, for a very small outlay. On the other hand, a suit in the High Court means the gathering together of evidence, innumerable interviews with solicitors, meetings with counsel, tedious days of trial which waste the patience of suitors unaccustomed to the innumerable and unnecessary delays so easily caused by counsel, decision doubtful, perhaps both as to law and equity, very heavy expense, and the chance of further cost and trouble in an appeal. If any one requires a proof of the uncertainty of legal decisions, he will find it in the papers connected with this question of the amendment of the law relating to Small Cause Courts. The differences of opinion, not only as to the recommendation regarding changes in the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts, but as to the extent of present jurisdiction, inspire anything but confidence in the decisions of our judges. We learn that the High Court of Calcutta and Bombay had held that the Small Cause Courts were given jurisdiction in suits for the recovery of immovable property by Act IX. of 1850. The Bombay High Court held that a like jurisdiction in suits up to Rs. 1,000 was conferred by the Act of 1864, while the judges of the Calcutta Small Cause Court thought that this jurisdiction was not given by that Act, and the Madras High Court held that neither Act conferred any such jurisdiction.

The chief change introduced by the new bill is the extension of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000. We believe that this will meet with general approval, and we are surprised to learn that, according to Mr. Stokes, who introduced the new bill "the only opposition to it came from the High Court of Bombay." If, as he states, this opposition arose from the idea that such an extension would not be generally liked here, we think that it will soon be withdrawn; for, if we have not been misinformed, there is a very general wish for this extension of the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts. Not unfrequently the excess of a claim over Rs. 1,000 is abandoned, and the case brought into the Small Cause Court rather than undergo the expense and delay of a suit in the High Court. We believe that all classes will fully approve the extension, but a difference of opinion may arise as to a right of appeal. At present there is no right of appeal from a decision of the Small Cause Court, except on a point of law when the judge can be asked to state a case for the decision of the High Court. It has been suggested, however, that in suits relating to sums over Rs. 1,000 there should be a right of appeal on questions of fact as well as of law. The bill as drawn at present does not provide for this, but as it can be amended in select committee, the point seems worth discussion. There seems to have been as much difference of opinion on this point as upon all the others submitted in this connection by the several courts. Mr. Stokes tells us that "the Governments of Bombay and Bengal, the Calcutta High Court, and the judges of the Small Cause Court at Bombay were against admitting an appeal. The Government of Madras, the High Court there, and the judges of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta and Madras were in favour of it." The objections to allowing it were based on the delay which would be caused by taking notes of evidence, which would be necessary if an appeal were allowed; such delay, it is urged, would deprive these courts of that summary procedure on which its popularity is based. It is proposed to lay down in this bill that the Small Cause Courts shall not be empowered to hear suits for the recovery of immovable property; on the other hand, the bill confers a limited insolvency jurisdiction, all cases of non-traders being assigned to these courts. They will also be given testamentary and intestate jurisdiction in the case of small estates, when the assets of the deceased are less than Rs. 1,000, the object here being to afford a "cheap and expeditious mode of obtaining probate or letters of administration." Looking at the increased work to be thrown on the judges of the Small Cause Courts, and the importance of economy, we would suggest the use of stenography as an assistance to the judges. The saving of time would be enormous, and a competent stenographer could be secured for one-third or one-fifth the salary of a good judge. We see no reason why such services should not be secured in place of using an expensively paid judge as a scribe.—Bombay Gazette.

THE TRUTH OF THE POSITION OF INDIA TOWARDS AFGHANISTAN.

THE Government of India has decided to withdraw behind the frontier, as it was on November 20 1878, as far as the Khyber line and the Kuram are concerned. In the south it has not apparently been able to make up its mind what it will do, but it has abandoned Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and has begun the withdrawal of the Bengal Division from Kandahar. Its organs have further put forward the suggestion that only Pishin should be held in this direction. It would seem as if the Government had determined to withdraw from Kandahar, but wished, first of all, to get used to the idea of giving the city up to Abdur Rahman. We have been told he was the only possible choice at Cabul, and shall doubtless, by-and-by, have the same argument used for the abandonment of Kandahar. But we would ask, in the event of Kandahar being abandoned, how the Government proposes to secure the passes over the Khojak Amram Range. But let us consider what, in Northern Afghanistan, any man of sense and military instinct would do placed as Abdur Rahman is placed. He has long ere this discovered the value of the fortifications the English erected round Cabul. He lived at Sherpore surrounded by his army, such at it was, and made the Cabulis feel that that cantonment is a check upon the city of a kind which even that turbulent populace dare not disregard. We have not only taught the Ameer the value of Cabul as a fortified place, but the value of fortifications generally. We have also taught him the strong and weak places of Northern Afghanistan, and we have no sort of agreement with him. Lord Hartington said the treaty of Gandamak had ceased to exist. That meant as interpreted by the action of the Government of India, that all treaties with Afghanistan had been abrogated, and our relations put upon this footing:—Abdur Rahman may do what he pleases, subject to the contingency of the Government of India waging war upon him. When he considers the consequences of this contingency he must surely remember that, after nearly two years of war, the Government of India leaves Afghanistan entirely unpunished—in fact, rewarded, for it gives the Ameer not only cash, and arms, but Cabul, Juggdulluck, Gandamak, Fort Battye, and Jellalabad, fortifications also. The contingency of a war with India will not, therefore, appear a very dreadful contingency, more especially as it is a contingency with a set-off—a contingency, that is, which of itself suggests an alliance between Cabul and Tashkend. The Ameer, however, being left perfectly free, will be foolish, indeed, if he do not fortify the passes west of Jumrood, and again the passes west of Jellalabad. He can do this almost unobserved, and will probably not fail to turn his position to advantage. If the Government object to his fortifying the Khyber line as an act unfriendly to India, he will probably reply that he does so in order to control the pass tribes effectually; and that, although there is no treaty between Cabul and India, still the Government of India has received substantial proofs of his regard, and has nothing to complain of. Or he may, if he be a keen player, put forward an offer to submit the matter to the friendly offices of his neighbour, Russia. He can fortify the passes if he choose, and, though the Government may make his doing so a casus belli, still they can do nothing else, nothing short of making war. Then, again, there is the almost certainty that the Afghans will fortify the Peiwar Kotal. We cannot conceive their neglecting to do this after the lesson they have twice had of the value of the Kuram. But if they do fortify the Peiwar, who is to object? It is absolutely a necessity of the position that Abdur Rahman finds himself in that he should fortify the approaches to Cabul, and we regard it as certain that he will do so. The position of the Government of India towards him is this—that, if it subsidise him it will be giving him the means of building up a military power against itself; if it remonstrate with him, it will be reminded it abrogated all treaties of its own motion; if it threaten him, it provokes a Russian alliance with Cabul,—for both Abdur Rahman and Russia are free of all expressed engagements on this point, and if it make war it must be prepared for Russian intervention. That is the simple truth of the present position of affairs. Thoughtful men say that that position is so bad in a military and political sense that there is only one possible cure for it—a fourth war ending in annexation.—Indian Daily News.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE PUNJAB NORTHERN RAILWAY.—The latest information regarding the progress of the Punjab Northern State Railway is "that the Sohan bridge was to be ready for trains to pass over on the 15th instant, and the line up to Rawul Pindi is, under peremptory orders from Simla, to be opened for public traffic on Oct. 1. Capt. Bissett, R.E., the manager of the Rajputana State Railway, has been directed to proceed at once to inspect the line between Ratya and Rawul Pindi, and report on the same. The works on the Kurram Valley Railway have been brought to a stand, and Major Nuthall, who was in charge, has just been transferred."—Englishman.

THE RICE TRADE.—The Burma rice trade this season has hitherto been, and gives promise of continuing, in a flourishing state. The customs duties from the various ports of the province during August under the head of exports have exceeded by over a lakh similar duties in the same month of 1879, and the increase is due in the main to unusually large shipments of rice to foreign countries from the three ports of Akyab, Bassein, and Rangoon. It is anticipated that Akyab, from the extension of this trade, should yield, by the close of the official year in March next, a customs revenue of 8½ lakhs, against some 6 lakhs in 1879-80. A singularly abundant crop is of course primarily the cause of the improvement; the introduction of a larger number of steamers into the trade has also had a good deal to do with it.—Ibid.

ATTACK ON A TEA PLANTATION.—Some time ago a tea planter in Silchar woke up in the middle of the night to find an armed man standing by his bedside, who, on being secured, proved to be a coolie on the estate, and who alleged, by way of explanation, that in a dream he had been directed to kill his master. That man has been convicted at the Silchar Criminal Session of attempt at murder, and sentenced to ten years' penal servitude. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, on the ground that at the time he committed the deed he was "mad" from ganja.—Ibid.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Strand Bank Press Company, held on Sept. 18, the report and accounts were passed.—At an extraordinary meeting of the Kurseong and Darjiling Tea Company, held on Sept. 21, the resolution empowering the directors to borrow Rs.25,000, passed on August 31, was confirmed.—At the general meeting of the India General Steam Navigation Company, held on Sept. 21, a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent., or Rs.50, per share was declared, and it was resolved to present the directors with Rs.1,000 each, and a bonus of Rs.5,000 to Capt. Scott as a mark of appreciation of his valuable services.—Englishman.

THE LATE DR. BARRY.—We learn that, at recent meetings of the Naihati Municipal Commissioners and Educational Committee, resolutions were passed expressive of the deep regret of the inhabitants of Naihati at the death of Dr. Barry. Copies of the resolutions were forwarded to the manager of the Gourepore Mills, with a request that they may be sent on to the family of the deceased gentleman.—Englishman.

INDIAN PORTLAND CEMENT.—Many of our readers may be aware that Mr. Paul Dejoux, late executive engineer in the Cement Experiments Division of the Public Works Department, had been engaged for some years past in a series of experiments undertaken for the purpose of demonstrating the possibility of producing cement, of equal quality to the best Portland, from local materials, at a lower cost than the latter can be imported. Like other discoverers, Mr. Dejoux has had to face a good deal of scepticism, based on more or less plausible theoretical grounds; but his perseverance has been as great as his convictions on the subject were strong, and in September last he had the satisfaction of seeing his efforts crowned with complete success. By a very simple, and, in all its stages except that of firing, a purely mechanical process, a cement capable of bearing a strain of from 650 to 1,000 lbs. and upwards was produced from ordinary kankar combined with a certain definite proportion of a purer limestone of local origin. It only remained to make arrangements for carrying on the manufacture on a commercial scale, and this has since been effected, a company having been formed and works erected for the purpose at Sealdah, where the process may now be seen in full operation. The celerity with which these works, the foundations of which were laid only in January last, have been completed by the contractors, Messrs. Burn and Co., and fitted with all the necessary machinery, under the superintendence of the company's engineer, Mr. W. Strong, who was brought out from England for the purpose, is probably unprecedented in this country, and reflects the greatest credit on the gentlemen concerned. Within five months of the commencement of the works, everything was ready, and manufacturing was commenced in June. The Government, which had the foresight to encourage the undertaking from the first, has, we understand, contracted to purchase a considerable portion of the outturn for five years.—Englishman.

BENGAL SETTLEMENT.—The total number of permanently settled estates on the revenue roll in the Lower Provinces of Bengal in 1879-80 was 139,049, as against 138,031 in 1878-79; the number of temporarily settled estates 7,643, as against 7,607; the number of Government estates 2,618, as against 2,573; and the number of rayatwari tracts twenty-two, against twenty-three. This gives a total of 194,332 estates, as against 148,234. The increase is more nominal than real, as it is almost entirely due to partitions.—Bombay Gazette.

NATIVE OR EUROPEAN?—A native journal, the Indian Mirror, gives a severe rebuke to the native firms who assume European names for the style and title of their business. The Mirror says the practice, which is fast growing in Calcutta, is absolutely as fraudulent as sailing at sea under false colours. The cause of the practice is to be found in the general aversion of the local community, both European and native, to patronise the work or purchase goods of native firms. But the real fault lies with themselves. If our countrymen would only strictly follow the example of European tradesmen in giving good reliable work, and sell genuine articles, we are sure the greater cheapness of their prices would surely attract as much patronage as even they could desire. But it is because they will do neither that they are driven to skulk and take shelter under European names, which we consider neither better nor worse than fraudulent trade marks, already punishable by the law. We should be glad to see this discreditable practice put down, even by special legislation, if necessary. A firm of bonâ fide European and native partners is, of course, quite a different thing, and we do not think too many such can possibly spring up in every line of commerce, trade, or industry.—Ibid.

THE LATE LIEUT. COL. R. S. CLELAND.—The following order was issued by Lieut. Gen. Sir F. Maude, K.C.B., V.C., commanding the Rawul Pindi Division, on August 12:—"It is with heartfelt regret that the lieutenant general commanding the division announces the death of Lieut. Col. R. S. Cleland, 9th Lancers, at Murree, on the 7th inst., after a painful and lingering illness of eight long months, which he bore with the utmost patience and resignation, of wounds received in action when gallantly leading his regiment against overwhelming numbers of the enemy near Cabul on December 11, 1879. In his death not only have the ever-glorious 9th Lancers lost a gallant soldier, worthy of being at the head of such a distinguished regiment, but the army and country an officer whose sole aim was unswervingly to do his duty. Sir Frederick Maude feels that, although the gallant 9th Lancers are at the present moment actively employed in Afghanistan, and, therefore, not under his command, he may be permitted, owing to his connection with the regiment since 1877, and as the depot is still in his division, to record these few words in memory of one for whom he entertained the highest regard, and whose loss he mourns as that of a brother."—Gazette.

INSTALLATION OF THE MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE.—Col. Bradford, agent to the Governor General, Rajputana, arrived at Jeypore on Sept. 30, and he held a durbar in the dewankhana of the palace, all the relatives of the late Maharaja and the chief officers of the State being present. No objection being raised to the late Prince's nomination of Thakore Kayam Singh, he was placed upon the gaddee and proclaimed Maharaja of Jeypore under the title of Sowai Madhosing. The new Maharaja was then saluted by all present, the nobles presenting nazzurs, and a salute of nineteen guns was fired. Before closing the durbar Col. Bradford addressed the assembly. He referred in glowing terms to the loyalty, generosity, and enlightenment of the late Maharaja, and advised the present chief to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor. If he continued loyal to the Government they would treat him with the same consideration that was shown to the late Maharaja. The Government of India, added Col. Bradford, had no desire to unnecessarily interfere with the administration of the State, but would watch his actions and assist him with their advice. Four lakhs of rupees were spent in feeding Hindus in honour of the occasion, and one lakh will be spent in feasting Mahomedans. The G.C.S.I. decoration, rendered vacant by the death of the late Maharaja of Jeypore, has been conferred upon the new Prince.—Times of India.

THE FLOODS AT BAREILLY AND MEERUT.—A correspondent, writing from Bareilly on Sept. 21 says:—"The floods here are dreadful. Whole villages have been carried away. The line is quite gone between this and the bridge, and between Moradabad and Chandausi. Mr. Jermyn is at Budaon, and cannot get back. Mr. Walton is down at the bridge working day and night, and Mr. Reid Petre and Dr. Saunders go out in boats and trolleys picking up the people whom they find clinging to trees. To-day the water has gone down. The flood was at its height on Monday, the 20th." Writing on the 22nd, the same correspondent reports that the flood was subsiding. "The line between Moradabad and Chandausi has not been seen for days. Between here and Aoula it has vanished. Mr. Walton's big bund has gone, and the two lakhs of rupees it cost with it. The Bareilly old city has disappeared."

DISASTROUS FLOOD AT HURDWAR.—A private letter received by a gentleman in Bombay from Meerut says:—"At Hurdwar, head of the Ganges Canal, report says that 1,000 coolies employed in constructing canal bunds have been carried away. Great loss all over these parts from the heavy rain." As the report has not been confirmed by telegram we may hope there is some exaggeration in the estimate of the number of coolies swept away. From Hurdwar, under date of Sept. 28, it is reported:—"Khurkhuri up to Doodhia washed away. Khurkhuri police station, Mr. Wilson's bungalow, and canal chowki saved. Thousands of cattle and men swept away and drowned. Numbers uncertain yet. Men of 100 years of age (sic) never saw such a high flood. Water run through Kunkhul and Hurdwar. Several lakhs of property lost—houses down. About three lakhs loss to canal."—Times of India.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—The disengaged tonnage at date of mail stood at 29,108 tons. London via Canal: £2 12s. 6d. rice or wheat; £2 15s. to £2 17s. 6d. for jute, lin, rape; £3 for hides; £3 5s. for tea. For London via Cape: The market closed steady at £2 2s. 6d. rice; £2 5s. for wheat; £2 10s. for jute; £2 12s. 6d. for linseed; £2 13s. 9d. to £2 15s. for rape and poppy. For Liverpool via Suez Canal: Quotations nominal at £2 12s. 6d. for wheat; £3 to £3 5s. for oils and light freight. For Liverpool via Cape: Wheat or rice, £2 nominal; linseed, £2 5s. to £2 7s. 6d. nominal; jute, £2 nominal; gunnies, £2 2s. 6d.; oils, £2 5s. to £2 7s. 6d.—Englishman.

THE CONDITION OF NAINI TAL AFTER THE LANDSLIP.—Many houses have been cracked, and so rendered unsafe; but whether this is due to the rain or to an earthquake is somewhat doubtful at present. A committee, consisting of Col. Brownlow, R.E.; Capt. Boughey, R.E.; Capt. Yorke, R.E.; Mr. Beresford, C.E.; and Mr. F. Ashurst, C.E., is sitting to take evidence as to the condition of the hill from Alma to the end of Sher-ka-danda; and it would be unwise to form any conclusion until their labours are ended. There are numerous cracks in this part of the hill. The walls of Alma House, Brae Side, Snow View, Tara Hall, St. Loo Cottage, part of new Government House, Braemar, Oak Openings, Ravenswood, Baugh Cot, and other houses are more or less cracked. Spring Hall was partially pulled down by its owner owing to the cracks. A small part of the Mayo Hotel fell down, and, as may be supposed, many out-houses in different places. The portion of the hill most affected extends from Cheena Lodge on the west to Lake View on the east. Further east there is very little to come down, and the rock crops out. There can be no question but that if the rain continued for another twelve hours the damage would have been very much greater and the threatened slips would have actually occurred. There has been no slip of any moment along the Ayarpatha side, and no injury to the compounds or roads worth mentioning between the Girls' Diocesan Schools and the Kalidungi Gorge. There has been no injury to any houses east of the Roman Catholic chapel. You will see that the only dangerous parts, or rather those where a slip is feared if the elements be untoward, are the range from Bridge House to the Roman Catholic chapel. Many parts of this are rocky, and it is only the shaly spots that can be considered at all unsafe; but those are numerous enough to cause grave anxiety, though not so formidable that careful drainage cannot render them safe. Mr. John Macdonald, of the Municipal Committee, was in the Tarai when the accident took place, and had to go down again on Monday to look after the Kichaha Bridge. The roads to Ranikhet and Almorah are passable for pedestrians. The road to Ranibagh and thence to Bareilly is fairly good, and no difficulty has been experienced by persons going to Bareilly or coming up. We are having slight showers, which are useful in preventing the clay drying up too rapidly, but make many people nervous. No other Europeans than those given in the lists published by you have been lost or injured. The loss of natives must be about 150, when all are told. These include the servants and hangers-on about the Victoria, the coolies and police employed on the work, servants at Bell's shop, four men and a jemadar assisting Sergeant M'Ewan at the magazine, those who were swept away by the bore which arose when the debris was swept into the lake, and those killed by accidents in different parts of the station. The number is only a rough estimate, as it is very difficult to verify the deaths of casual natives who had come in for work as coolies.—Pioneer.

NARROW ESCAPE OF SIR HENRY RAMSAY.—Numerous are the stories told of hairbreadth escapes from the terrible disaster, and none was narrower than that of the commissioner. Sir Henry Ramsay had left the west end of the lake (the scene of the great tragedy) early in the afternoon, and was proceeding in the direction of his office, when his attention was attracted to the violence with which the water was struggling to force its way down the gorge which forms the eastern escape. He was seeing what could be done to remedy this state of affairs when the great wave, caused by the submersion of the large portion of the Assembly-rooms which was precipitated into the lake, came surging towards him with terrific force. Commencing with an altitude—if the testimony of eyewitnesses is to be believed—of from 12 ft. to 15 ft., the wave swept onwards, carrying everything before it, breaking heavily against the Smuggler's Rock, and dashing, crested with foam, on the narrow bridge which forms its eastern extremity. On this bridge stood Sir Henry Ramsay, surrounded by a mixed body of soldiers and natives. The commissioner had barely time, seeing the approaching danger, to rush towards the bazaar end of the bridge (wading waist deep in water) when the huge wave was upon them. Four soldiers were swept away; three of them managed to cling to the wire paling which here surrounds the band-stand; the fourth was carried down the torrent, dashed against the boulders, and picked up dead. Of the natives, three were drowned, and it was all over with the last of the Kings of Kuamon had he not been a hale and hearty man. By this very narrow margin were the services of an able, experienced, and upright officer preserved to the Government; and the life of one whom India could ill afford to spare saved to his country and his friends.—Ibid.

REPORTED SUPPRESSION OF A VERNACULAR PAPER.—The editor of the Lahore Akhbar-i-Am denies the report that his paper has been suppressed for publishing seditious articles. He says the Akhbar-i-Am is "as firm in loyalty to her most Gracious Majesty the Empress of India and her Government as anything in the world can be; that its articles, ab initio ad finem, are wholly based on good-will and wholesome advice, which, to its utmost, it imparts to Government; and that what it lets out in its leading articles is often backed and seconded by almost all the Anglo-Indian as well as English Press." The Civil and Military Gazette, while accepting this contradiction, says it understands that some of the articles which appeared about the time of the disaster at Kushk-i-Nakhud attracted the notice and animadversion of the Government, and the Director of Public Instruction was, it believes, desired to withdraw the subscription for copies which were before purchased to the extent of 380 weekly for distribution among schools.—Times of India.

SUICIDE BY A SOLDIER.—A gunner named Hurst, of 16-8th Royal Artillery at Fort Machi Bhawan, committed suicide in his barrack room on Sept. 20. A court of inquiry investigated the case, but no reason could be traced to which the act might be attributed.—Ibid.

RAW CAOUTCHOUC, exported from India, has been exempted from the customs duties to which it was liable under the Indian Tariff Act, 1875.

DURBHUNGAH.—On the representation of the Maharaja of Durbhungah that, since Mr. J. Whitfield, C.E., who was appointed as architect and civil engineer to the Raja estates, had resigned his appointment and proceeded to Europe, no suitable person could be found to fill his place, the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased, with the sanction of the Government of India, in compliance with the wishes of the Maharaja, to place the services of Lieut. Kunhart, R.E., at the disposal of the Durbhungah Raja, with a view to his being employed as civil architect and engineer of the Raj estates, on a suitable salary and allowances. This arrangement will likely take effect from next month. In Durbhungah the Maharaja's new palace is being built, and several other very important works have been put in hand.—Indian Daily News.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—Baboo Kali Kristo Tagore and Jodu Lall Mullick have subscribed Rs.5,000 and Rs.1,000 respectively in aid of the Oriental Seminary Building Fund, also her Highness the Maharani Surnomoyi, C.I.E., Rs.3,000; the Hon. Maharaja Jotindra Mohun Tagore, Bahadur, Rs.2,500; Kumar Purno Chunder Singh, of Paikpara, Rs.2,500; Raja Komal Kristo Bahadur, Rs.2,000; her Highness the Maharani Surut Sunderi, Rs.2,000; Maharaja Norendra Krishna Bahadur, Rs.1,000; and Raja Hurish Chunder Chowdhry, Rs.600.—Indian Daily News.

THE VICEROY'S SHOOTING EXCURSION.—About the time Lord Ripon visits Dera an elephant hunt is likely to come off in the Dun. It will probably be conducted by Mr. Sanderson, the superintendent of the Dacca kheddass, who had arranged for hunting in this district this season, and the opportunity will be a good one for showing the Viceroy and party some excellent sport.—Englishman.

COL. F. R. HARRISON, controller of military accounts, Bengal, proceeds home immediately on two years' furlough. Major Pritchard, the examiner of commissariat accounts, is to act as controller in Bengal, as a temporary arrangement. Col. Harrison made over charge of his office to Major Pritchard on Saturday last.—Indian Daily News.

ASSAM.—The Chief Commissioner of Assam has publicly thanked the Raja of Bijni in the Assam Gazette for a donation of Rs.3,000 to the patriotic fund. Advices from Silligori, dated Sept. 21, report that the head native belonging to a Taipoo tea concern was brutally murdered on Sunday evening by a gang of garden coolies, who waylaid and beat him to death with brass-bound lathes.—Pioneer.

MAHOMEDAN MARRIAGES.—Sir A. Eden has appointed a committee to consider and report upon the subject of the registration of Mahomedan marriages, the rules and procedure under the present Mahomedan Marriage Registration Act, and the proposal to extend the Khazi Act to the Lower Provinces. The committee is composed of the following gentlemen:—The Inspector General of Registration, president; and Mr. H. J. S. Cotton, the Nawabs Syed Ashgur Ali Bahadur and Abdul Lutif, and the Hon. Syed Ameer Hussein, members.—Times of India.

THE ST. LEGER SWEEP.—The total number of tickets taken in the Umballa sweep this year was 13,005, making the total value of the sweep Rs.1,30,050. This amount was divided as follows:—First prize about Rs.63,168; second do., 31,584; third do., 15,792; 2 per cent. for division amongst starters, 2,601; 3 per cent. for division among nonstarters, 3,901-8; expenses about, 6,501; 5 per cent. to race fund, 6,502-8—Rs.1,30,050. Robert the Devil, the winner, was drawn by Falce Dornuss of Roorkee, whose number was 8,124. Cippolata fell to No. 5,845, drawn by one horse confederacy, Simla, No. 4,972 drew The Abbot, the owner being Dada of Indore. Bend Or, the favourite, came to No. 4,678, drawn by Home A. T. B. of Calcutta.—Ibid.

THE SIMLA FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—This exhibition was opened on Sept. 17 by his Excellency the Viceroy. The prizes to exhibitors were awarded as follows:—The Viceroy's Prize, to Dr. Willcocks; the Lieutenant Governor's Prize, Major Pullan; the Commander in Chief's Prize, Captain Strahan; the Hon. C. Grant's Prize, Lieutenant Radford; an Amateur's Prize, Mrs. Jamieson; the Society's First Prize, Major Strutt; the Society's Second Prize, Mrs. Denzil Ibbetson; the Society's Third Prize, Mr. Pestonjee Bomanjee; the Society's Fourth Prize, Mrs. Graham.—Pioneer.

LAHORE.—The Mahomedan Association of Lahore have resolved to place a tablet in stone at the gateway of the Imperial Mosque—commonly called the Musjid-i-Shahi, which was built by Aurangzebe in 1080 A.H., and is one of the largest buildings of the Choghata period—which is to bear the name of Major R. P. Nisbet, who was deputy commissioner of Lahore in 1876, in token of gratitude for the support which the gallant major gave to the construction of Mahomedan public buildings in Lahore. But the mosque is not yet completely repaired, the four lofty towers, with the numerous apartments in the northern and southern portions, being still unfinished. Mr. A. Brandreth has given his support, and it is to be hoped that, with his valuable assistance, Mahomed Barkat Ali Khan will have the credit of finishing a task which has been pending for nearly a century.—Civil and Military Gazette.

MADRAS.

LOANS TO CHIEFS.—A Madras correspondent informs us that his Highness the Maharaja of Karvetnagar, in the North Arcot District, has made arrangements with one of the banking houses in Bombay to take a loan of thirty-two lakhs of rupees at a moderate rate of interest to pay off his present creditors, all and sundry. The condition on which this loan is to be advanced is that the Maharaja is to secure Government sanction and guarantee for the regular repayment of instalments together with interest. The Karvetnagar States bring in an income of about seven lakhs, and if properly managed it will be likely to yield about ten lakhs. The Maharaja is reported to be very generous and always awake to the interests of his ryots, but the surroundings are not such as at all suits a ruler of his Highness's position, and the sooner a separation takes place the better it will be for himself and his ryots. It may be stated here, for the information of the Madras Government and the public, that the Bombay Government has already sanctioned such loans to three or four native States in this Presidency, and the rules of Government being everywhere the same throughout British India, it is hoped the Madras Government will not grudge to lend a helping hand to the Maharaja, by doing which they will be doing their duty, and the interests of the Maharaja will be secured. Our correspondent adds that a loan of eighty thousand is to be advanced to the Paligar of Pulicherla, a small State in the same district, under the same conditions.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—Practical work in connection with the Patriotic Fund has commenced in Madras by the receipt of an order from the Government of India by the Adjutant General of the Madras army, calling for a list of widows and orphans considered as deserving to share in the money contributed for the relief of the families of men killed in the war. Lists of names have been called for from commanding officers.—Englishman.

LUNATIC ASYLUMS IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—In passing orders on the annual report of the lunatic asylums in the Madras Presidency for the year 1879-80 the Government observe:—The number of inmates of the asylum was greater by twenty at the end of the year than at its beginning, and the daily average strength shows an increase of nearly eight inmates. This increase is entirely due to a diminished death-rate. "The lunatic population in asylums," in common with the general population, "felt the influence of the changed hygienic conditions indicated by plentiful food supplies and absence of epidemic disease, and their physical condition as shown by a lowered death-rate had changed for the better." The general death-rate (13.45 per cent. of daily average strength) was lower than that of any year except one since 1873-74. It was highest in Vizagapatam, 28.31 per cent. of daily average strength, and lowest in Calicut, 4.41 per cent. In considering the death-rate in the asylums, which is about three or more times that among the general population, it must be remembered that the various "forms of insanity tend inevitably to shorten life, and the mortality amongst chronic insanes must from the natural progress of the disease be always high." The year was on the whole more healthy than its predecessor, as the diminished percentage of the population daily sick shows. Fever was prevalent much more than in 1878-79, though dysentery was less active. The percentage of cures to admission in the year under review is 41.86, and is lower than in any year since 1873-74, except 1876-77 (32.55). It is noticeable that in 1877-78 the percentage was as high as 64.66. Famine brought out or developed mental disease, which yielded to treatment more easily on the removal of the predisposing cause. The low percentage this year indicates the return of the general population to its normal condition, and cannot be ascribed to treatment. In fifty-four of the cases admitted during the year the cause of insanity was ascertained. Of these, thirty-nine, or 72.2 per cent., were due to physical causes, against 81.5 per cent. traced in 1878-79; fifteen, or 27.8 per cent., against 18.5 per cent. in last year, were due to moral causes. As in former years, under physical causes, the abuse of narcotic drugs, hereditary predisposition, epilepsy, and puerperal causes give the largest number of admissions; and under moral causes, "grief," "fear," "misfortune," "family" disputes, and desertion. Physical causes appear to be far more common excitants of insanity than moral, and the proportion of the former is higher than is usually found in European asylums. The percentage of recoveries to total treated for madness arising from physical causes shows a remarkable fall. It was in 1878-79 22.8, and is in 1879-80 but 11.8, a variation for which it is perhaps impossible to assign a cause. In the figures given above in paragraph two, taken from the body and appendix to the report, it is understood that the figures relating to criminal lunatics, though given as it would appear separately on the body and appendix of the report, are included. The headings of the statements and the mode of treatment of the subject should make this matter clear in future reports. Of the criminal class there remained sixty-eight at the beginning of the year, and twenty-seven were admitted during its course. Of these, twenty-two were discharged, transferred, &c., fourteen died, and fifty-nine remained at the end of the year.—Madras Times.

PATENTS.—There have been received in the office of the Chief Secretary to Government copies of the specifications of the inventions of which the following are brief descriptions:—Mr. Joseph Stores, Williams Raverton, New Jersey, United States, America—"Improvements in the construction of supports or posts for railway signals and other purposes." Mr. John Greig, engineer and planter, Viewforth Terrace, Edinburgh—"Invention for rapidly cutting tea leaves, while in a green or fresh withered state, into small and regular squares previous to the soiling process, in order to avoid deterioration and waste by breaking while in a dry and brittle state." Mr. Edward Braiser, New-cross, County of Surrey, England—"Improvements in, and connected with, machinery or apparatus for hulling, cleansing, and polishing rice or other kinds of grain or seeds."—Madras Times.

DETACHMENT 2-13TH FOOT.—Owing to an outbreak of sickness at Kamptee the movement of the detachment of her Majesty's 2nd Battalion 13th Regiment from Bellary to Kamptee is postponed until further orders.—Ibid.

CIVIL ENGINEERING SCHOOL.—It is stated that Mr. Standish Lee has been engaged by the Mysor Government to instruct the students of the civil engineering school at that province, every other day, on a salary of Rs.200 per mensem.—Ibid.

ORPHANS OF WARRANT OFFICERS.—We learn that the rule providing free passage to the Lawrence Asylum for orphans of pensioned warrant officers and their guardians has been extended also to the orphans of warrant officers dying while effective.—Ibid.

THE MADRAS HARBOUR.—By a resolution of the Government of India of February last, the Government of Madras was required to provide from Provincial resources any capital outlay in excess of the sum of Rs.62,80,000 sanctioned by the Secretary of State for the works, and to make good to the Imperial Treasury from Provincial resources 4½ per cent. interest on the said sum of Rs.62,80,000, recovering on its part 4 per cent. from the Port Trust. The Government of Madras, in reference to that resolution, replied that it saw no reason to anticipate capital expenditure in excess of the original sanction, and objected to the proposition regarding the 4½ per cent. The Government of India now state that it is, therefore, not necessary to consider now whether any excess should be borne provincially or not. In presence of the objection made by the local Government, the Governor-General in Council will not press his demand upon the Government of Madras to make good 4½ per cent. interest from Provincial resources.—Madras Times.

THE BANGALORE BANK.—The directors of this bank have effected a compromise with Mr. N. R. Bain regarding the deficit of Rs.40,000 and odd discovered in the bank on Oct. 3, 1877, and the compromise is one that is profitable to the bank and at the same time honourable to Mr. Bain. After this all further proceedings in the recent suit against Mr. Bain's sureties, Messrs. Mergler and Arnachellum, will be dropped.—Bangalore Spectator.

MEDICAL APPOINTMENTS ON THE NILGIRIS.—Surgeon General Cornish lately expressed the opinion that the rule laid down by the Government of India in regard to hill medical appointments should be extended to the Nilgiri medical appointments as regards future incumbents. It has been, he says, the custom in this Presidency to extend the tour of duty in a Nilgiri civil medical appointment over four years. There are always a number of applicants for these appointments, and it has not been practicable, under the four years' system, to extend the benefits of these appointments to deserving officers of the department whose health has suffered from continuous residence in the plains. A reduction in the term of hill service will enable Government to extend the benefits of hill appointments to a larger number of officers; and, under the Government of India rules, they will in future have a claim to return to their permanent appointments in the plains, whether civil or military. The Government have now directed that the tour of duty of medical officers in civil medical appointments on the Nilgiri Hills shall in future be limited to a period of two years. Medical officers so appointed will retain a lien on their permanent appointments in the plains during their service on the hills, and will revert to them on completion of their tour of duty.—Madras Mail.

BOMBAY.

THE EDWARDS CASE—GOVERNMENT RESOLUTION.—The nature of the allegation contained in the petition of the prisoner F. A. Edwards and in the statement of his father attached thereto obliged Government not only to take the usual step of calling for the observations of the magistrate by whom the prisoner had been tried, but also to cause an independent inquiry to be held into the facts of the case. This inquiry was entrusted to the public prosecutor, and the information so obtained placed beyond a doubt, first, that the conduct of the prisoner before the occurrence in question had been a just cause of offence to the complainant, who had warned him through a third party of possible consequences, and, secondly, that he had been severely beaten in the complainant's stables at the time of the alleged attempt to steal the lamp. When therefore consideration was also given to the extreme improbability of the prisoner, who was a clerk in a Government office, attempting to steal an article so difficult to conceal and so little marketable as a single carriage lamp, and to the fact that the responsible police officers had, after evident deliberation, refused to charge the prisoner with theft as desired by the complainant, the Governor in Council was satisfied that the case had been got up against the prisoner, and that it was proper to release him at once without waiting for the observations of the trying magistrate, which had not yet been received. Those observations, together with copies of the evidence taken at the trial, have been placed before Government since the release of the prisoner. Further examination of the case is not now necessary, but with his understanding of it gained by the late inquiry the Governor in Council will observe that he cannot doubt that the evidence was wrongly appreciated at the trial, and that the charge ought not to have been altered from criminal trespass to theft. The allegations contained in the prisoner's petition of grounds for supposing that the magistrate, Mr. Dosabhooy Framji, favoured the complainant, appear to have been random statements, and except in regard to his brother being manager of certain property belonging to complainant's family, a point to which the Governor in Council attaches no importance, they have been explicitly denied by him. The high qualities of Mr. Dosabhooy Framji have been so established by his long and honourable career that indisputable substantiation would be required before such allegations as have been made in the petition could influence the mind of Government. But the Governor in Council cannot but surmise that in a matter in which Parsis are so sensitive as the honour of their families, Mr. Dosabhooy Framji was irresistibly drawn into sympathy with the complainant, and that there was in his mind an unwillingness to believe in the truth of the prisoner's defence, and an indignation at such a defence being made, which were incompatible with the calm unbiassed judgment essential to the right appreciation of the evidence put before him.—(Signed) C. GONNE, chief secretary to Government.—Gazette.

BOMBAY HEALTH OFFICER'S QUARTERLY REPORT.—Dr. Weir, the executive health officer for the city, has submitted to the municipal commissioner his report for the first quarter of 1880. We extract the following from the report:—"Although the total mortality is greater than in the corresponding period of 1879, the importance to be attached to an enhancement of the total mortality is modified by the fact that there is a relative diminution in the deaths from cholera and small-pox. Had the enhancement of the mortality been associated with an increase in the deaths from the two most virulent and dreaded types of zymotic disease, it would have been accepted as an evidence of deterioration of public health, but concomitant with a diminution in the deaths from cholera and small-pox it points to the causes of the excess, mortality having been exceptional in contradistinction to the ordinary but prevalent disease-causes, namely, those local and insanitary. The total number of deaths registered in the quarter is 299 more than in the corresponding three months of 1879. The enhancement of the mortality arises from an epidemic of measles, to the fatality of which atmospheric conditions somewhat exceptionally contributed. There is a diminution of mortality, as will be observed, from the chief types of diseases, but concomitant to an enhancement under one zymotic order especially. There is, as compared with the first quarter of 1879, an excess mortality from measles (720 more than in the corresponding period of 1879), fevers (65 more than in the same period of 1879), diseases of the nervous system (42 more), bronchitis (63 more than in the corresponding quarter), diseases of the organs of locomotion (2 more), debility (57 more), and 27 more premature births are registered; this constitutes the excess. But there is a diminished number of deaths and rate of mortality from cholera (33 less than in the corresponding three months of 1879), small-pox (68 less), diarrhoea (142 less), dysentery (200 less), other diseases of digestive system (20 less), phthisis (126 less), the pneumonia (43 less), diseases of the urinary system (9 less), the circulatory system (2 less), respiratory system (4 less), dropsy (26 less), cutaneous system (4 less), leprosy (5 less), and accidents (16 less).

H.M.S. "HIMALAYA."—The troopship Himalaya left on Sept. 30 for Portsmouth via Suez Canal. Orders were received for the accommodation in her of eighteen officers, fourteen ladies, sixteen children, seventy-three men, ten women, twenty-two children, and two female servants. There were also five insane persons and four convicts. One officer, sixty-seven men, six women, and fifteen children came from Delolalee on Thursday at 6 a.m.; and the rest are from the Colaba Depot. The officers proceeding in the vessel are:—Col. E. Bray, 4th Foot; Deputy Surgeon General J. L. Jameson, A.M.D.; Capt. E. M. Larminie, R.E., C. W. Gore, 76th Foot, and W. E. Wilkinson, 54th Foot; Lieuts. J. Temple, R.H.A., M. W. Saunders, R.H.A., G. Hamilton, 4th Hussars, P. L. Williams, R.A., G. H. W. Beaumont, R.H.A., A. H. D. Brooke, 33rd Foot, B. L. P. Reilly, Bombay S.C., and E. D. H. Buckley, R.H.A.; and Second Lieuts. H. D. Cox, 1-25th Foot, and J. D. Lugard, 2-9th Foot.—Times of India.

EXTRAORDINARY CONDUCT OF AN OFFICER.—Some sensation has been created in Puna by the arrest of a military officer under very peculiar circumstances. As Sir James Fergusson was returning from the Puna Races last Thursday week, in a carriage drawn by the same spirited horses that lately caused an accident, he was followed by the officer in question, who tried to pass him on the road. His Excellency's horses got frightened at the sound of the carriage behind, and one of the sowars of the Body Guard was ordered to request the driver to slacken speed a little. The officer, who may perhaps have misunderstood the sowar's message, is said to have struck the man with his whip, and to have pursued his course. A collision would, it is said, have been inevitable had not Sir James Fergusson's carriage been promptly pulled to one side of the road. This is the version of the story on which the arrest is supposed to have been made; but the officer denies striking the sowar. Although Sir James was not driving in state the discourtesy and indecency of forcing a way past him in public would itself be worthy of social disapprobation; and when he was charged with striking one of the Governor's Body Guard the officer in question rendered it impossible for the military authorities to overlook the offence. He has, as we say, been arrested.—Times of India.

RETURN OF TROOPS.—The Tenasserim arrived in Bombay on Sept. 27 from Karachi, bringing Major Colvin, quartermaster general, Capt. Chippendale, R.E., and Quartermaster Evans, of the 2-11th Lancers. The Tenasserim sailed again on Tuesday, towing the I.G. ship Csarewitch for the purpose of bringing back the 3rd Hyderabad Cavalry from Karachi. The Indian Government steamer Dalhousie, Capt. W. C. Hotham, sailed for Karachi Sept. 25 with Lieut. Col. Trevor, B.S.C., Major Phillips, 1st Sind Horse, one assistant apothecary, two native officers, and fifty-two rank and file of the 15th N.I.; eight rank and file of the 3rd Hyderabad Contingent, four horses, twenty-five ponies, and 414 public and private followers.—Times of India.

THE LATE COL. PONSONBY COX.—The following is an excerpt from the proceedings of a meeting of the trustees of the port of Bombay:—"Resolution—Proposed by Mr. G. A. Kirtledge, and carried unanimously, that the trustees have learnt with profound regret of the death at Puna of their chairman, Col. Ponsonby Cox. His administrative ability, displayed in the responsible and, at this time, especially difficult, position of chairman of the trust, had gained their highest respect, while his genial and courteous manner had won their warmest regard. The trustees desire to put on record their sense of the very great loss they have sustained by the sudden death of their late associate, and their deep sympathy with his bereaved widow in her irreparable loss. That a copy of this resolution be sent to his Excellency the Commander in Chief, with the request that he will kindly hand it to Mrs. Cox whenever he may judge best."—Times of India.

THE MUNICIPAL BUDGET.—At the town council, on Sept. 28, the municipal commissioner's budget came on for consideration. The budget estimates show an opening cash balance of Rs.8,00,000 for 1881; and the present state of the finances being so satisfactory, the Municipal Commissioner recommends a reduction of 1 per cent. in the consolidated rate, which will then stand at the minimum allowed by law—viz., 8 per cent. After allowing for the loss of Rs.1,00,000, consequent upon the reduction of the consolidated rate, the net increase in revenue will be Rs.20,500. The council passed the town council and corporation establishment at Rs.44,260; and the municipal commissioner's establishment at Rs.40,076. It was agreed that in consideration of the valuable services of Mr. Sorabjee Nowrojee Cooper, the controller of accounts, a personal allowance of Rs.100 per month would be granted to him.—Ibid.

HERAT AND KANDAHAR.

ATTENTION has been so closely fixed upon the strictly military news from Southern Afghanistan that the brief hints of information as to the settling down of the country after the passing of the war storm which have been conveyed by the telegrams, official or otherwise, have easily passed unnoticed. Yet they have been full of instruction both in their agreement and their contradictions. Since the decisive victory of General Roberts we have been informed that there was considerable disquiet in Zamindawar; next that quiet was prevailing, but that beneath the surface of quiet there was intense hostility lurking, in readiness to break out at any provocation or chance being given by the turn of events. The inhabitants were unwilling to furnish supplies; the villages were deserted. The latter is still stated to be the state of things up the Argandab Valley, where the villagers have not returned to their homes, and where all cultivation is reported to have temporarily ceased. But the Viceroy's telegram of the 17th states that the Zamindawar people have resolved to submit to us, if called on, and have commenced sending in supplies. The most instructive piece of information, however, is that the interrupted commerce has been resumed. Caravans are arriving from Herat. A short time ago the fear of meeting the army of Heratees stopped all caravans from Kandahar. The fact of the Herat caravan arriving is the most incontestable proof that the victory of General Roberts has at all events for the time being put an end to any hostile movements. It is also a proof of the readiness with which the traders avail themselves on the first opportunity of the highway secured from attacks of marauders; or immunity from what is worse, the extortion and pillage which constitute the ideal of Cabuli taxation, which the British occupation, uncertain and temporary as it seems likely to be, secures to them. In Western China, during the progress of the devastating warfare between the Mahomedan rebels, or Panthays, and the Imperial troops, it was a custom to declare certain days free from fighting, to establish a sort of "Treuga Dei," during which time the traders passed to and fro plying their peaceful vocation secure from plunder. Now that our troops have driven Ayub back to Herat the path of commerce is reopened and caravans again pass to and fro. We have re-established a time of peace, and no Afghan governor misrules to make the merchants afraid. The iron road is not yet complete; the British rule is regarded as uncertain, but even the partial and temporary tenure is felt to give present, if not to presage abiding, protection. But we are told in a telegram, not official indeed, and only expressing the talk of Kandahar, that it is probable that the city, with its dependent territory, will be handed over to Abdul Rahman; the Wali, who has already proved his inefficiency, being appointed his Governor. We are told that Sir R. Sandeman, who two years ago professed his strong opinion that Kandahar ought to be held, has now given his opinion in favour of an occupation of the Khojak, and giving up any direct hold of Kandahar. General Phayre's opinion is understood to support this decision, and it is to be hoped that the fullest explanation of their reasons for arriving at such a conclusion will be vouchsafed, not after, but before, the final step is taken. The temporary occupation of Kandahar, the completion of the railway which will link Southern Afghanistan with India, and, in the words of a leading Indian contemporary, will render the city almost as accessible and as secure as Hong Kong, and only less valuable than the greater ports in the Far East as a centre for Asiatic trade are advocated strongly by many who, even a year ago, thought them almost unattainable objects. We have avenged Maiwand by the victory of Mazra. We have it in our power to impose a yoke on an unwilling population, as some consider, but we have also the opportunity of giving an abiding and practical proof that friendship, and even semi-dependence, is not inconsistent with increased prosperity. India has paid dearly for the Afghan campaigns. India will profit not once, but always, by the firm connection with the great entrepot of Central Asian trade, and if our Ministers listen to the wishes, not of those who seek for military glory or for civil posts, but of those who lead the commerce of Western India, they will not recede from the half-accomplished task, which lies ready to their hand, of making the outcome of the Afghan war the regeneration of Southern Afghanistan.

SIR LEWIS PELLY'S ADDRESS AT NAIRN.

SIR ALI BABA, in the trenchant and delightful brochure detailing his experiences in India, lays down as an axiom of Eastern idiosyncrasy that a political agent cannot flourish this side of Aden. The sarcasm without doubt embodies the truth, and its sting is in no way the less poignant because the exceptions are mostly notable and beyond dispute. The failures of Indian politicians when they return to their mother country are indeed frequent, but they are not universal. Amongst those whose name and reputation stand deservedly high in the annals of Oriental diplomacy few were more prominent in their day than Sir Lewis Pelly. For more than a decade he was British representative at Bushire, charged with the difficult and responsible task of maintaining the maritime peace amongst a race of turbulent, lawless nationalities, who revelled in the "good old times" of strife and anarchy. In this sphere Sir Lewis made his mark, and his subsequent career has crowned with success his earlier but less distinguished labours. Such was the diplomatist, or, as he would be termed in the East, the "politico," who, after serving with high distinction in India, returned to enjoy in his native land the honoured ease which he had so amply earned. But Sir Ali's prediction was destined to be falsified. Scarce had our Oriental knight touched these shores than he laid before the public a translation of the miracle play of the "Shiah Sect of the Musulmans;" a literary curiosity, the production of which was at once creditable to Sir Lewis Pelly's enterprise and indicative of no inconsiderable amount of literary acumen. More recently, and it is this fact which has occasioned these remarks, Sir Ali's would-be "effete" diplomatist delivered the opening address of the winter session of the Nairn Literary Institute. "Life," says Mr. Carlyle, "is an action, not a thought; and for yourself, if you have the stuff in you to make a poet or a historian, make your own life a poem or a history." Enlarging upon this theme, Sir Lewis availed himself of the opportunity of adapting to the requirements of every-day life the accumulated experiences of half a century spent in various parts of "Persia, Arabia, Afghanistan, India, and East Africa." Charming and interesting were the reminiscences despite the "inseparable egotism," which was as welcome as it was unavoidable; scarcely less attractive, however, was the application of them in a manner to rivet the attention of the canny lads for whose benefit the address was delivered. Seldom, it may be surmised, had these youths more truly been made to realise that success even in the most high and distinguished sphere flows most generally from the practical application of that plain, shrewd, common sense and diligent uprightness which Nature has not denied to even the humblest and lowliest of her sons. The lesson was valuable, and might with advantage be pondered in a far wider sphere than the comparatively limited arena of a local institution for the promotion of learning and knowledge. Applying himself more immediately to the object with which he was charged, Sir Lewis Pelly concluded a singularly felicitous address with these pregnant and forcible words:—"Young men, as members of a literary institute, are, as it were, shareholders in a gold mine; the ore is certainly here, but the discovery of it and the profit to be derived from it depend in part upon the sagacity, energy, and industry of the digger, and in part upon his happy fortune or favourable circumstances. But never cease to dig; and, whether acting or recording action, be just and fear not, and let all the ends you aim at be your country's, your God's, and truth's." Sound advice, which is, alas, much overlooked in this busy and selfish world, where too often each member of the community seeks his own ends regardless of the welfare or happiness of those around him. The whole of the inaugural address, indeed, was valuable. We commend to Sir Ali Baba's notice this instance of a soldier and statesman who can and who does flourish in undiminished splendour of reputation in the uncongenial regions "this side of Aden."

THE LATE COL. COX.—The death of Col. Ponsonby Cox will be heard with regret by all who knew him. He had but recently arrived in Bombay; but already his sterling qualities had become known. He died, we understand, of tetanus, resulting from an operation performed a month ago for the removal of a malignant tumour in the neck. Col. Cox belonged to the Royal Engineers, and was an officer of thirty-two years' standing. He was for some years employed under the English Local Government Board, and his great administrative ability was fully acknowledged.—Bombay Gazette.

MAJOR BURNETT.—Information was received on Friday at Woolwich of the death, by being thrown from his horse, of Major Edward Sidney Burnett, in command of C Battery, B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, at Secunderabad, Madras. His war services include the Indian Mutiny of 1857-58, during which time he was present at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, the battle of Cawnpore on Dec. 6, the siege and capture of Lucknow, and other engagements. He received the Indian medal with the clasps.

GENERAL JOHN KYNASTON LUARD, C.B., of the Madras Army, whose death is announced as having happened a few days since at Gloucester-gardens, Hyde-park, was an officer who has seen some active service in India and China. He entered the Indian Army in 1819, and was promoted to a lieutenancy in the same year; he became captain in 1825, major in 1836, lieutenant colonel in 1841, and colonel in 1851. He served with the expedition to Ava in 1824, and was present at the capture of Arracan, and was wounded in the attack of the heights there, for which he received the medal. He also served with the Kurnool Field Force in 1839 and took part in the China expedition from June, 1842, down to the suspension of hostilities in the September following. He was present at the capture of Woosung and Shanghai, and served with the Central Brigade under Major General Schoedde at the storming and capture of Chin-kiang-fao, for which service also he had received the medal. He became major general in 1854, was promoted to lieutenant general in 1865, and to general in 1870. He was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath in 1842.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE MAIL.—The following reply has been received by the secretary of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China from the India-office regarding the result of the deputations and memorials to the Secretary of State in August last, on the subject of the date of departure of the mails from India to England:—"India-office, S.W., Oct. 13.—Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th inst., regarding the date of the departure of the mail from Bombay, and to acquaint you, in reply, that a despatch on the subject was sent to the Government of India on August 19 last, who were requested to telegraph their reply. No reply having been received, a telegram pressing for a reply was sent to the Government of India on the 1st inst.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, LOUIS MALLET."

SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on Tuesday at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. H. P. Stephenson presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, expressed satisfaction at the reduction in the loss of exchange to £608. On the other hand, there was the drawback of a decrease in the gas and meter rental of £133, and a decrease of £175 on the products, &c. In the first month of the current half-year the gas and meter rental showed an increase. It was also satisfactory to him to state that further streets were to be lighted, and fresh mains and lamp posts had been sent out. The municipal commissioners, too, were considering the lighting of certain new portions of Singapore. He afterwards referred to the satisfactory manner in which the local directors and the manager discharged their duties. The report was adopted, and dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. on the ordinary shares and 7½ per cent. on the preference shares were declared.

GOLD MINING IN INDIA.

THE question of gold mining in India has recently been brought prominently before the investing public, both in this country and in India. Some weeks since we called attention to the Indian Mammoth Gold Mines Company, the projectors of which had secured an estate, consisting of about 1,500 acres, lying just under the Devala Ghauts, and situated in the very heart of the gold-producing district. We have now to draw attention to the prospectus—which will be found in our advertising columns—of another company, the Indian Phoenix Gold Mining Company, which has been formed to develop the mining resources of the Devala district of the South East Wynaad, of which Mr. Brough Smyth speaks so favourably in his report to the Government of India. It will be remembered that in that report Mr. Smyth, after stating his views on the general prospects of gold mining operations in this district, gave a detailed account of some of the principal properties which it embraces. Amongst others he mentions the Phoenix estate, which consists of about 300 acres and adjoins the Glenrock estate, of which such favourable accounts have been published. The surface rights also include about 100 acres under coffee in full working and about 200 acres of forest land. Concerning the metallurgical resources of the estate Mr. Smyth writes:—"Within the boundaries of the Phoenix estate there are two outcrops of quartz—one near the summit of Hadiabetta, and the other about twenty-eight chains southward from it. The sites where gold has been found are marked on the map (which accompanies the prospectus) from information afforded by the proprietors of the Glenrock and Phoenix estates. They say that gold in unusually large pieces is found in this area, and a sample of coarse gold was shown to me by Mr. Williams, who had had Korumbars employed in washing." In addition to this estate, three other properties of about 428 acres have been acquired by the above company, on all of which old workings are reported. Of one of these—the Rosedell estate—Mr. Brough Smyth reports that "there are old workings, in which is exposed a large vein of quartz, with several smaller veins thrown off from it. The outcrop is a little above the road leading to Devala, and about forty chains eastward of the Glenrock bungalow." As the result of explorations made at his request, Mr. Smyth reports that several pieces of quartz, with gold in moderately sized grains and minute spangles, were got without difficulty. In conclusion, he considers that "the Rosedell reef is undoubtedly valuable, and will in time be thoroughly prospected." With such highly-favourable reports before them it is not surprising that the proprietors of this property should be anxious that they should be more fully developed than could be the case with private capital. They have therefore promoted the Phoenix Company, to whom the properties will be transferred for a sum of £150,000, of which £33,000 is taken in fully paid-up shares of the undertaking, and the balance in cash or fully paid-up shares in such proportion as the directors may decide. The capital of the company is fixed at £150,000, in £1 shares. Of these, as already stated, £33,000 have been reserved for the vendors, and another £57,000 have, the prospectus states, been applied for and allotted at par. The remaining £60,000 are now offered for subscription at the same price. In undertakings of this nature success must necessarily depend to a large extent on the bona fides and business experience of the directors. In this respect the proposed company is eminently satisfactory. With men of such standing and experience of Indian affairs as these gentlemen are, and assuming that the report of Mr. Brough Smyth is reliable, there seems every prospect of success for this undertaking.

THE DATE COFFEE COMPANY, LIMITED.

(HENLEY'S PATENT)

INCORPORATED UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES ACT, BY WHICH THE LIABILITY OF EACH SHAREHOLDER IS LIMITED TO THE AMOUNT OF HIS SHARES.

SHARE CAPITAL £50,000, in 10,000 shares of £5 each. Shareholders will be entitled to priority in the execution of their orders, and to purchase (for their own use) from the Company at a reduction of 25 per cent.

DIRECTORS.

CHAIRMAN—HENRY HAYMEN, Esq., formerly Chairman of the Don Pedro North Del Rey Gold Mining Company, which Company, during his chairmanship, paid dividends of 100 per cent.

The Right Honourable the Earl Poulett, Army and Navy Club, London.

Charles Coles Adiey, Esq., A.M. Inst. C.E., formerly Telegraphic Engineer to the East India Railway Company, and late Engineer her Majesty's Indian Government.

John K. Fowler, Esq., Wil'owbank, Aylesbury, Bucks.

Thomas Frederick Henley, Esq., 56, St. George's-square, South Belgravia, London.

James Hay Williamson, Esq. (of Messrs. Williamson, Magor, and Co., Calcutta), 16, Carlton-road, Putney-hill, London, S.W.

BANKERS—In London: The Imperial Bank (Limited).

SECRETARY—T. Forcscue Haymen, Esq.

OFFICES—9, Walbrook, London, E.C.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This company has been formed for the purpose of manufacturing abroad (Kurrachee, in India), from the date fruit, a partial substitute for coffee.

Intending shareholders are invited to call at the Company's offices and taste this beverage before investing. A large number of persons have already done so. Letters have also been received from persons resident in the country, from Canada, and the Continent, and they are unanimous in their opinion as to its superiority.

The Directors have orders in hand for their first consignment, which is expected to arrive in November.

The estimates upon which the Directors have been induced to embark their capital in the Company show an annual profit of £18,500 if only 20 tons of dates are treated per week.

With reference to the estimates the Directors have the satisfaction of being enabled to state that their Engineer and Manager, writing from Kurrachee, informs them that he has secured the requisite premises at a cheaper rate than Mr. Henley calculated, and also that he is satisfied he can manufacture at a less cost than that estimated by Mr. Henley.

By manufacturing 80 tons per week the profit would amount to about £50,000 a year, or 100 per cent. per annum, even supposing the whole amount of capital were called up.

The Directors were so satisfied of the value of these shares that two of them applied and paid on about 4,000. The Committee of the Stock Exchange, in granting a special settlement in the shares, objected to so large a number of shares being held by them, and refused an official quotation. With the object of doing away with the objections raised by the Committee, and placing the Company in a position to obtain an official quotation, these gentlemen have placed their shares at the disposal of the Directors at par, notwithstanding that the last price on the Stock Exchange was £1 per share premium, and they are accordingly offered for public subscription at par. The shares will be allotted according to priority of application.

The following are the principal advantages of Date Coffee, viz.:—1. Economy, both as regards cost and quantity required to be used. 2. It is not satiating. 3. It is free from any heating quality. 4. It is more easily digested than coffee. 5. It is more nourishing than coffee.

THE DATE COFFEE COMPANY (Limited).—Prospectuses and forms of application for shares may be obtained on application to the Secretary, 9, Walbrook, E.C.

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

ASH'S "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines, from 50s. each.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

Ash's Freezing Powders, 34s. per cwt., or in Boxes at 11s., 22s., and 40s. each.

THE SELF-FEEDING REFRIGERATOR,

PATENTED BY MR. CLARKE

ASH, 1872.

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, a uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—see Times, 18th July, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

PROSPECTUS.

THIS Company is formed to purchase the four Estates known as Phoenix, Lytton, Rosedell, and St. Thomé, in the Devalah district, S.E. Wynad, Madras Presidency, with the mining rights therein, and to work the gold reefs reported to be on these Estates.

These properties contain 800 acres more or less, are held under leases for long terms granted by the Nalliatum Rajah at almost nominal rents, free of all royalties, adjoin the estates of the South Indian and Indian Glenrock Gold Mining Companies, and are situated almost in the centre of the area examined by order of the Government of India and declared to be auriferous.

Serious attention has lately been directed to the existence of gold-bearing quartz in this district of India, and the valuable information collected by the Indian Government has attracted considerable capital to the development of these gold fields. The preliminary operations of the Companies already established, and the opening of reefs at low depths, &c., have as far as practicable, before the arrival of stamping machinery, fully confirmed the judgment previously formed by scientific men of the immense value of the Wynad Reefs, so that Gold Mining is now rapidly becoming an established industry of Southern India.

The high prices at which Shares of existing Companies stand in the market show the appreciation by the public of this class of enterprise.

The properties to be acquired by the Company are mentioned in the Report of Mr. Brough Smyth, contained in the Blue Book lately issued by the Indian Government, and their position is marked on the official map which forms part of that Report. The combined properties contain within themselves all the elements necessary to success in a Gold Mining enterprise. The Phoenix River, with its ample volume of water, supplies not only the necessary water-power for crushing the quartz raised on these estates, but is also expected to give to the Company the means of gaining a considerable revenue by the erection of reduction works to crush the quartz from neighbouring properties not possessed of this indispensable resource. Timber necessary for mining operations exists on the estates in large quantities, and the value of this on the spot cannot be too highly estimated.

The Government main road from Ootacamund, the headquarters of the district, to the West Coast, runs by the company's estates, which are situated forty miles from Ootacamund and seventy miles from the Coast. Great facilities are thereby ensured for the transport of machinery and plant. The estates are in the centre of a district which is esteemed by native labourers to be the most healthy in that part of the country.

The following are more detailed particulars of the properties:—

PHOENIX ESTATE, by Government survey, measures about 300 acres. It adjoins Glenrock, running parallel with it for a considerable distance from Hadiabetta Peak, from which it slopes down to the Phoenix River, which passes through the Estate. Mr. Brough Smyth's official map shows extensive old workings and two reefs on the property, and in the Report (page 33) is the following:—

"Within the boundaries of the Phoenix Estate there are two outcrops of quartz—one near the summit of Hadiabetta, and the other about 28 chains southward from it. The sites where gold has been found are marked on the map from information afforded by the proprietors of the Glenrock and Phoenix Estates.

"They say that gold in unusually large pieces is found in this area, and a sample of coarse gold was shown to me by Mr. Williams, who had had Korumbar employed in washing."

The surface rights also include about 100 acres under Coffee in full working, and about 200 acres of splendid forest, in which there is much valuable timber.

ROSEDELL ESTATE is contiguous to the above estate, and its area, by Government Surveys, is 268 acres. Mr. Brough Smyth's report on this property is as follows (page 33):—

"On the Rosedell Estate east of the adjoining Glenrock, there are old workings, in which is exposed a large vein of quartz, with several smaller veins thrown off from it."

"The outcrop is a little above the road leading to Devalah, and about forty chains eastward of the Glenrock bungalow. Where it is exposed, the strike of the reef is N. 30 degrees W. The quartz is similar to that found in the vein on the summit of Chic Hadiabetta, the casing is ferruginous, and very small plates of mica appear in it. There is also a little micaceous iron ore, and the quartz in the vein is stained with oxide of iron on the faces of laminae.

"When I visited this reef I was accompanied by Mr. H. V. Ryan, the proprietor of the Glenrock Estate, and I suggested that some explorations should be made. They were accordingly undertaken under that gentleman's direction, and several pieces of quartz, with gold in moderately sized grains and minute spangles were got without difficulty.

"The Rosedell Reef is undoubtedly valuable, and will in time be thoroughly prospected."

ST. THOME ESTATE, containing by Government survey over 116 acres, adjoins Rosedell on one side, and on the other the Caroline and Adeline Estates, belonging to the South Indian Gold Mining Company. The reefs showing on these latter run, it is believed, through the St. Thomé Estate, whilst Mr. Brough Smyth's map shows very extensive workings within its boundaries.

The appendix to Mr. Brough Smyth's Report shows that amongst the specimens of quartz sent to the Museums of Madras and Calcutta, eight specimens showing visible gold were sent from the Rosedell, and one from the Phoenix Estates.

The great area acquired by this Company is not subject to the restrictions to be applied to future mining concessions by the Government of India, and as the extent of gold-bearing land thus free is being rapidly occupied, the value of the properties of the Company is thus materially enhanced. To turn this to account, power has been taken to let or sell the mining rights on portions of the lands for working, and to facilitate the formation of other Companies or native Associations for this purpose.

The auriferous nature of the quartz is proved both by Government reports and by private surveys lately made by experienced Miners now working on the Estates of the South Indian and Indian Glenrock Gold Mining Companies. The existence of extensive reefs is also vouched for, and that gold will be produced in paying quantity so soon as the machinery is at work may be therefore accepted as certain. The speculation is thus practically narrowed to a question of the amount of profit to be realised by the application of European skill and machinery to the work hitherto done by rude methods and manual labour.

The accompanying map, taken from the Government survey, shows the position of the properties relatively to other gold-bearing Estates, the names of which are well known.

On the above Estates there are, in all, about 280 acres under Coffee and Cinchona cultivation, which it is proposed to lease to Coffee Planters in the district: at a rental which, it is believed, will afford the Company a considerable revenue.

The titles to these estates have been recently examined and approved by Messrs. Barclay and Morgan, of Madras, the Solicitors to the Madras Government.

This Company is promoted by the vendors of the properties, by whom the consideration to be paid for them has been fixed at £85,000, whereof the vendors stipulate that not less than £33,000 shall be paid in fully paid up Shares of the Company, and the balance they agree to take in cash, or fully paid up Shares, in such proportion as the Directors may fix. The vendors further undertake to defray all the expenses incidental to the formation of the Company, leaving the remainder of the capital entirely available for the development of the works.

The following Agreements have been entered into:—An Agreement dated October 11th, 1880, between William Lonsdale, acting for himself and others of the one part, and Henry Thomas McNeale, as Trustee for the Company, of the other part. An Agreement dated October 9th, 1880, between Jeremiah Ryan, acting for himself and others of the one part, and William Lonsdale, acting for himself and others of the other part. An Indenture of Assignment dated 19th April, 1880, made between John Hodgson Williams of the one part, and William Lonsdale of the other part. An Indenture of Assignment dated 26th April, 1880, made between Rosa Anne Fletcher, Harry Valentine Ryan, and Jeremiah Ryan of the one part, and William Lonsdale of the other part. An Indenture of Assignment and Lease dated 17th May, 1880, made between John Warren Ryan of the first part, William Edwards Schmidt of the second part, and William Lonsdale of the third part. An Indenture of Assignment dated 9th April, 1880, made between Henry Valentine Ryan of the one part, and William Lonsdale of the other part.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained at the Offices of the Company or from the Solicitors.

If no Allotment be made, the amount paid on application will be returned in full.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1880.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Oct. 9; Madras and Allahabad, Oct. 7; Calcutta, Oct. 6.

THE following is the report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 28, 1880:—In Madras less rain fell than in the previous week and more is wanted in places; harvesting, however, proceeds with a fair outturn. In Bombay good rain has again fallen in the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta Country: in other parts of the Presidency the rainfall was slight; the autumn crops are in fair condition everywhere. In Bengal there was general rain, but more is required in parts of the Patna Division: the autumn harvest is nearly completed, generally with a fair average outturn. Slight rain fell in most parts of the North West Provinces and Oudh, and more is still needed in the eastern districts; the floods in Meerut, Moradabad, and Bareilly have damaged the crops on low lands; prospects are in most districts fairly good. In the Punjab there was no rain during the week; prospects, are, however, on the whole favourable. In the Central Provinces general, though moderate, rain fell during the week; prospects remain good. In British Burma, where the rainfall was heavy, the crops are doing well. In some parts of Assam more rain would be beneficial, but elsewhere the weather has been seasonable. In native States prospects remain satisfactory on the whole, although in parts of Rajputana more rain is required; crops are reported to be withering in places in Mysor and Coorg owing to partial failure of the rains. General prospects throughout the Empire continue fairly satisfactory on the whole.

THE crop prospects continue to be fair throughout India.

"FROM THE VICEROY, OCT. 26.—Commissioner telegraphs, 24th. Rumour current for several days in Peshawur of disturbances in Cabul, even of death of Ameer. No post or message arrived from Cabul for seven days previous to 21st."

THE telegram from the commissioner at Peshawur is somewhat curiously worded as to dates, and only by doing a small sum in addition do we discover that for almost eleven days there had been received no news from Cabul. The bazaar rumours of the anarchy prevailing at Cabul are neither confirmed nor denied. There is too much reason to apprehend that the forces of Mussulman fanaticism are gathering, encouraged by our apparent uncertainty of policy, and incited by counsels which emanate from that league of Islam of which the headquarters at Stamboul are resorted to not only by Indian and Afghan representatives, but by even delegates from Eastern Turkestan and Malacca.

THE telegram from Kandahar contains the following items:—

"It is definitely settled that the native portion of the garrison of Kandahar, while we continue to occupy it, shall consist of Bengal and Bombay troops in equal proportions. This arrangement is being gradually carried out.

"The 9th Lancers and Major Robinson's battery of jointed guns are now the only troops of Sir F. Roberts's army still at Kandahar. The 9th Lancers will be relieved by the 13th Lancers from Lucknow.

"The intention to encamp a brigade upon the Helmund to relieve the supply difficulty has been abandoned from a scarcity of transport, all being wanted for the troops moving up and down the line or for the conveyance of supplies from India.

"The misbehaviour of the Marri Beluch tribe when an attack was made upon a party of railway labourers near Kuchal, and a quantity of treasure carried off, led to their being visited by a brigade of troops returning from Kandahar to India under General Macgregor. Each of the more important sections of the tribe is being made in turn to feel the inconvenience of the troops being sent into its country. There has been, and it is expected that there will be, but little opposition, and equivalent of the treasure carried off is being fast recovered by the seizure and consumption of the standing crops. The troops are the 60th Rifles, the 2nd and 3rd Sikhs, the 4th and 5th Goorkhas, with the 3rd Punjab Cavalry and Swinley's Mountain Battery.

"The road to Cabul is now altogether closed, the Ameer being able to exercise no authority whatever below Ghuzni. The feud between the Hazaras and Ghilzais has for a time been healed.

"Ayub is now thoroughly established at Herat, and meditates an occupation of Nadali on the Helmund, preparatory to undertaking operations against us. The natives in that vicinity have thrown off their allegiance to Afghanistan and have declared themselves annexed to Persia.

"The Military Intelligence Department reports that Abubeker is at Sangbur, with from 500 to 800 men. He is plundering the people and stopping all supplies from being sent in. He is said to be cruelly treating all those who have afforded any assistance to Colonel Daubeney's column."

GENERAL HUME, of the Allahabad Division, has been appointed to the chief command of Kandahar, with the rank of lieutenant general. Before proceeding to take up his command Lieutenant General Hume will visit the Viceroy at Simla.

GENERAL WATSON, with the force under his command, left Kuram on the 16th inst. Before his departure General Watson held a darbar, and informed the chiefs of the Turi tribe that the British Government recognised their independence and left the internal administration of their affairs in their own hands.

MAJOR GENERAL BARCLAY states that according to a letter from one of the officers of the 66th he is able to contradict the official telegram which mentioned Major Oliver, 66th Regt., as having ridden into Kandahar ahead of the remains of his regiment. The late Major Oliver, who has since succumbed to small-pox, was brought into Kandahar on a gun carriage perfectly exhausted. He assisted General Burrows during the retreat in doing all in his power to restore some sort of order, and was much pained at seeing his name mentioned in the public papers as having reached Kandahar before his men.

THE Foreign Secretary and Sir R. Sandeman arrived at Kandahar on Friday.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY acts as president of the Council during the Viceregal tour.

THE indisposition of Sir Ashley Eden continues, and a Bengal paper says it is probable his Honour will shortly retire from the Lieutenant Governorship.

SIR NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN has not yet accepted the succession to Sir F. Haines as commander in chief in India.

BRIGADIER GENERAL MACPHERSON is to have the rank of major general for his late services and to command the Lucknow Division.

GENERAL SIR ALEXANDER TAYLOR, K.C.B., R.E., has been appointed by the Secretary of State for India President of the Royal Engineering College, Cooper's Hill, in the room of Col. Chesney, R.E., who proceeds to India as Secretary to the Military Department of the Government of India. General Taylor served in the Sutlej campaign in 1846 and in the Punjab campaign of 1848-9. He was second in command of Engineers throughout, and director of the attack at the siege of Delhi, for which he received brevet of major and the thanks of the Governor General of India; commanded the Bengal Engineers at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and was severely wounded at the storming of the Begun's Palace. For the latter service he was created a C.B., and received the brevet of lieutenant colonel.

A CALCUTTA telegram says that the late ominous rumours concerning the missing of Burmese troops on the British frontier are reported to be without foundation. The Chief Commissioner telegraphs that all is quiet and there is no cause for alarm.

THE Prince of Wales has sent Sir Henry Ramsay the following telegram:—"Am greatly shocked by the dreadful accident at Naini Tal. Pray make known my deep sympathy."

A TELEGRAM states that the committee appointed to investigate the matter has reported favourably for the retention of Naini Tal as a sanatorium for the troops. The measures to secure the station from further landslips have already begun. The Government have sanctioned an outlay of two lakhs towards that object.

MESSRS. GRINDLAY and Co. and Messrs. H. S. KING and Co. have been asked as representative agents to collect and transmit subscriptions on behalf of the widows and orphans and others rendered destitute by the landslip at Naini Tal. There are many cases urgently requiring assistance. We give elsewhere a list of the Naini Tal committee, who will administer the funds collected.

GENERAL LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA attains his seventieth year on December 6 next, when by the regulations of the service he should be placed on the Retired List. It is proposed, however, to allow his lordship to remain on the Active List to complete his term of office as Governor of Gibraltar, which does not expire until October, 1882.

GENERAL SIR F. F. MAUDE, commanding the Rawul Pindi Division, has made an appeal on behalf of the Lawrence Asylum, at Murree, which is at present badly in want of funds.

THE Kandahar correspondent of the Times of India says that "should nothing occur to necessitate the active intervention of our troops in the affairs of Afghanistan before the close of February next it is almost certain that Kandahar will be then evacuated and our troops withdraw to Quetta." This was dated Oct. 9.

THE Bombay Gazette says that, as a matter of course, Mr Griffin's criticisms are confined to the portion of Afghanistan with which he himself was concerned. Even Mr. Griffin would, we presume, admit that the question of the retention of Kandahar, to say nothing of Pishin and Quetta, is affected by considerations other than those which apply to Cabul. It strikes us that a person may be a very respectable Lawrencite and yet think twice before deciding that we should abandon the southern portion of Yakub Khan's late kingdom.

It is officially stated that the dates from which the grant of batta to troops and details crossing the frontier is to cease is as follows:—For the Khyber and Kuram lines from August 15; for Southern Afghanistan from Sept. 20.

THE inquiry ordered by the Government into the charge against Chunder Sing, the son of the Raja of Chota Oodeypore, one of the Rewa Kanta States, of the alleged murder of his younger wife, has been concluded. Many witnesses were examined, and Mr. Birdwood, before whom the inquiry was held at Godhra, has submitted a private report to the Government.

THE Madras Government have suspended an official of position pending the result of the inquiry that they are making into some transactions connected with a gold mining concession.

IN the Viceroy's Legislative Council on the 1st inst. the Hon. Mr. Stokes moved for leave to bring in a bill to facilitate the issue of "certificates declaring the bearer thereof entitled to the principal sum stated therein, and coupons for the interest payable on such principal sum," on the ground that the Governor General may from time to time desire to repeat the experiment that was so successful in the issue of the Four and a-Half per Cent. Loan of 1880, and to "issue like certificates with or without coupons in respect of other loans." There are two points on which it is considered essential that the law should be definitely fixed—first, that the coupons shall be transferable by delivery; secondly, that payment to the bearer of the amount expressed in them shall be a full discharge to the Government. Most useful financial invention the coupon bond.

It is understood that the board of visitors for the Cooper's Hill College have proposed some modifications in the mode of admission to that institution. The limit of age for admission is to be raised from nineteen to twenty-one years, and admission is to be by a pass instead of a competitive examination, the final competition for Indian appointments taking place at the end of the college course. Applicants for admission who, on passing the prescribed test, will be eligible to enter the college in order of application, should address the secretary.

THE amount of cash held in the reserve treasury of the Government of India on Sept. 23 was Rs.1,17,47,271-7-3.

It is stated that the Dutch Government is about to appoint a new General Governor of the East Indian Colonies. The ex-Minister of Marine, Jonkheer Wichers, who now commands one of his Majesty's vessels in the East, will succeed Mr. van Lansberghe, who has been for six years at the head of Indian affairs.

THE Standard hears from Teheran that the Kurds have demanded the surrender of Urumiah, a town which they have invested. Mr. Abbott, the English Consul General, is there and acting as intermediary. Reinforcements are being sent against the rebels from several directions. The Sheikh Abdullah has issued a proclamation calling upon the Turkish and Persian Kurds to unite as an independent nation, with himself as their sovereign.

THE Queen has been pleased to approve of Cavaliere G. Maddalena as consul at Larnaca, with jurisdiction over the whole territory of the Island of Cyprus, for his Majesty the King of Italy.

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce have considered the letter of the Government of India relative to the proposal to alter the days of the departure of mail steamers and resolved to recommend Thursday evening during the N.E. monsoon and Monday evening during the S.W. monsoon.

LIEUT. THE HON. G. VERNON, 12th Lancers, has rejoined his regiment at Secunderabad, but it is said that the circumstances of his recent arrest at Pana will be reported to the Commander in Chief of the Madras Presidency.

THE Times of India contains the following obituary of the week:—Mr. J. J. O'Flaherty, C.E.; Mr. L. A. St. Clair, Public Works Department.

AN open competition for the situation of clerk of the superior class in the Accounts Department of the India-office will be held in London on Tuesday, Nov. 23, and following days. Clerks in the Accounts Department of the India-office, in which the present vacancy exists, receive salary commencing at £100 per annum, and rising by annual increments of £16 to £350, with a prospect of promotion.

THE Chief Commissioner of Mysor has reported to Government on the subject of the alleged disappearance of State jewels from the Mysor Palace, and his report is considered by the Governor General in Council to be "completely satisfactory."

THE rulers of native States are subscribing very liberally to the fund for the relief of the families of soldiers killed or wounded. The Puttiala Council of Regency have just intimated their intention of placing £10,000 at the disposal of the Supreme Government on behalf of the fund.

SIR F. ROBERTS has engaged a passage in the Peshawar, which leaves Bombay on the 30th inst. He will be accompanied by two members of his late staff, Major Pretymann, R.A., and Major Kennedy.

DURING the week ending Sept. 25 there were 189 deaths in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 22.9 per 1,000 of population per annum. In Madras the same week there were 283 deaths, the death-rate being 37.0 per 1,000 per annum. In Bombay for the week ending Sept. 28 the deaths numbered 416, giving a death-rate of 31.7 per annum.

THE Maharaja of Benares has given Rs.1,000 to the Naini Tal Fund.

THE only Christian church in Cashmere, situated in the Golden Valley, has been destroyed by fire, but under what circumstances has not transpired. The Maharaja has sent officers to institute inquiries:

THE returns of the trade and navigation of British India for the first five months of the current financial year show that the import duty collected amounted to Rs.1,71,44,446, the export duty to Rs.25,50,289 in the period named, as against Rs.1,63,37,830 and Rs.22,37,746 respectively for the same period of the past year.

THE Wainad Planters' Association have been informed that the Government of India, having made full inquiries, consider that little or nothing can be done to make Beypore a harbour, and that with regard to the railway from Mysor through the Wainad District to Beypore, the country is too sparsely populated and the engineering difficulties too great to warrant the line being taken in hand.

THE LATE SIR W. MEREWETHER.

THE Bombay Gazette, in an article reviewing the services of this eminent official, says that the following out of Sir W. Merewether's plans in one particular secured the pacification of the Khelat State and the recognition by its ruler and people of the advantages of keeping on good terms with the Indian Government. But his proposals were only half accepted, and the neglect of his advice on other points has resulted in landing the country in the present and preceding Afghan campaigns and Heaven knows what future complications. The object Sir W. Merewether had in view was the pacification of the Sind frontier without exciting hostility against us in other quarters, and his proposals were calculated to effect that object. His scheme was not, however, received with favour at headquarters. Later a portion of his advice, namely, the adoption of a policy of armed intervention to secure the tranquillity of Beluchistan, was acted upon, in the expedition under Major (now Sir Robert) Sandeman, but in such a way that, although the object of securing the fealty of the Khan of Khelat was attained, the apprehensions of Shere Ali of Kabul were so effectually aroused that he departed from his attitude of friendliness towards us and commenced coquetting with the Russians, a change of front which led to many complications and ultimately to the third Afghan war.

THE MAIWAND TELEGRAM.

MAJOR ADAM, A.Q.M.G. Kandahar Force, writes thus to the Bombay Gazette:—"Perceiving by the papers which have lately come to hand that exception is taken to the expression used in one of the telegrams reporting General Burrows's defeat at Maiwand, I write to ask you to publish this letter of explanation. I am the responsible person for having telegraphed that the brigade was 'annihilated.' When the report was first received it was so described, and, knowing that the wire would almost immediately be cut, I hastened to write down what had been reported. Subsequent telegrams modified the first report and were sent off in succession, as news came in, until the wire was cut for good about eight o'clock. This explanation I consider due to General Primrose, and I have no hesitation in assuming the responsibility of what was my act."

MR. LEPEL GRIFFIN ON AFGHAN AFFAIRS.

THE general purport of Mr. Griffin's remarkable speech at the farewell dinner given in his honour was contained in the telegram published in our columns of the 20th inst. It is of so much importance that we give verbatim the part of his oration referring to Afghan policy and affairs:—

"As we are on the subject of Cabul I would say a few words to show how superficial is the criticism which has been directed against the choice of Abdul Rahman, the march of General Roberts, and the withdrawal from Northern Afghanistan. In the first place, the selection of Abdul Rahman was not, as has been represented, an accident. We are told he is a creature of Russia, who, having conquered Turkistan, was accepted by the Government as it had no other choice. The truth is that before it was known that Abdul Rahman had crossed the Oxus he had been deliberately selected by Lord Lytton as the most likely candidate for the throne; that I went to Cabul with distinct instructions from the Viceroy to at once enter into correspondence with him; and that from that day until his accession the Government has never for a moment wavered in its policy. What was inaugurated by the late Conservative Government was carried energetically to a successful conclusion by the present Viceroy. The criticism, which at first sight seemed plausible, that, while we went to war to stop Russian influence in Cabul, we have yet seated on the throne a protégé of Russia, is seen to be trivial, if it be understood that it was for this very reason that he was selected. Ameer Sheer Ali Khan sinned through ignorance; Abdul Rahman possessed complete knowledge, and a careful study of history and of human nature seemed to suggest that those who knew Russia best would like her least. Again, with regard to the withdrawal from Cabul. The action of General Stewart, who has honoured me with his presence to-night, and whose distinguished services we all rejoice have been recognised by her Majesty and the Government of India, has been criticised as open to grave misapprehension. It is said that he should have remained at Cabul to furnish a base for General Roberts's Kandahar advancing force, and that the withdrawal immediately after the Maiwand defeat would be attributed to fear by both the people of Afghanistan and of India. It certainly did not occur to any of us at Cabul that our retirement could be so misinterpreted, when, at that very moment, a large force was starting, not for India, but to march, heedless of opposition, through the heart of Afghanistan, from Cabul to Kandahar. The criticism is as foolish as it is unworthy of Englishmen. As to remaining to support General Roberts's advance, he might as reasonably have been detained to support our retirement. General Stewart, with characteristic generosity, had given him the pick of the Cabul regiments; and he had a stronger fighting force than that left behind, which was encumbered with the transport, sick, followers, and stores of both the Cabul and Kandahar armies. We further knew, with absolute certainty, that there would be no opposition to General Roberts on this side of Ghuzni or at Ghuzni itself, while it was improbable that there would be any on this side of Khelat-i-Ghilzai. We also believed that if there were opposition it would make very little difference. It was not for us, at Cabul, who were intimately acquainted with General Roberts and his brigadiers, Generals Macpherson, Baker, and Macgregor, who knew the gallant spirits of the officers and the splendid material of the regiments chosen, British and native, to doubt for one moment the success of a force which, led by such generals and composed of such men, could march from one end of Asia to the other. The reverse at Maiwand did not thus advance or retard the withdrawal from Cabul by a single day, nor was there any reason that it should. We withdrew because it had long before been decided to do so when an Ameer had been acknowledged by the Government, lest by remaining we might destroy our own work. Abdul Rahman having been recognised as Ameer, our withdrawal was necessitated by every consideration of sound policy. If he had come to Cabul with the British army still there he would have become at once unpopular as a creature of the Government, supported by British bayonets, and he would have fallen on our retirement. Between the soldiers and his people conflicts would have been unavoidable; disputes on questions of jurisdiction would have arisen; the country would again have become excited, and we should undoubtedly have had to occupy Cabul for another winter, or retire at an unfavourable season, through a hostile, instead of as now a friendly, population. Gentlemen, what do our critics want? What would they have done in our place? If they say annexation, then I can only thank God that the destinies of the country are not as yet entrusted to the hands of crackbrained enthusiasts who fancy it a high and imperial policy for the Government to drag its coat through Asia for barbarians to trample on. I shall never, after to-night, speak as an official of the Punjab Government. So you will forgive me if I make a last confession of political faith. I have, probably, been during the last twelve years as much concerned with Afghan and frontier politics as any one now in India, and I leave the Punjab with the unshaken conviction that the foreign policy of Lord Lawrence, my friend and master, is the only sound one. His views are called obsolete; but the principle which inspires them is of truth and common sense; and Lord Lawrence's reputation will live when the clamour of his detractors has long been forgotten. 'Masterly inactivity' which, by the way, was a phrase used a hundred years before Lord Lawrence's time, is, rightly understood, the proper foreign policy for India. It does not signify national humiliation or indifference to the national honour. 'Masterly inactivity' abroad means 'masterly activity' at home, the development of the country, lightened taxation, and the general prosperity of the people. India cannot enjoy both military glory and internal progress; and if she stretches forward to clutch the soldier's laurels she will assuredly find her hand only filled with thistles. It is not fair to compress a policy into an epithet. Suppose, for example, I were to dissect the 'scientific frontier' which, I hope, will ere long be swept, together with Wynaad goldfields and narrow-gauge railways, into that limbo where all Indian rubbish is treasured. Gentlemen, our scientific frontier is not the Indus; it is not any mountain range stretching from the Khyber to the Safed Koh, from the Safed Koh to the Hindu Kush, and from the Hindu Kush to Bankruptcy. The scientific frontier of India, the only one which is worth having, is in the strong arms and brave hearts of a loyal and contented people—Sikhs, Punjabi, Mussulmans, Dogras, and Goorkhas. What do you wish more? These troops, led by British officers, and supported by and excited to a noble rivalry by British soldiers, will scatter like chaff any army which any Power, European or Asiatic, can ever bring against you."
